Here is an account of (1) The company who went with Ezra from Babylon to Jerusalem, seventeen hundred and fifty-four in all; 1—20. (2) The solemn fast which they kept by the way, for obtaining the presence of God to direct, protect, and comfort them in their journey; 21—23. (3) The care which Ezra took of the sacred treasure he had with him, and the charge with which he committed it to the priests; 24—30. (4) The care God took of them in their journey, and their safe arrival at Jerusalem; 31, 32. (5) There they delivered the money to the priests; 33, 34: and their commissions to the king's lieutenants; 36: and offered sacrifices of thanksgiving, and for atonement, to God; 35.

THESE are now the chief of their fathers, and this is the *²*genealogy of them that went up with me from Babylon, in the reign of Artaxerxes the king.

2 Of the sons of *²*Phinehas; Gershon: of the sons of *²*Ithamar; Daniel: of the sons of *²*David; Hattush.

3 Of the sons of Shechaniah, of the sons *²*of Pharosh; Zechariah: and with him were reckoned by genealogy of the males an hundred and fifty.

4 Of the sons of *²*Pahath-moab; Elihoenai the son of Zerahiah, and with him two hundred males.

5 Of the sons of Shechaniah; the son of Jahaziel, and with him three hundred males.

6 Of the sons also of *²*Adin; Ebed the son of Jonathan, and with him fifty males.

7 And of the sons of *²*Elam; Jeshaiiah the son of Athaliah, and with him seventy males.

8 And of the sons of *²*Shephatiah; Zebadiah the son of Michael, and with him fourscore males.

9 Of the sons of *²*Joab; Obadiah the son of Jehiel, and with him two hundred and eighteen males.

10 And of the sons of Shelomith; the son of Josiphiah, and with him an hundred and threescore males.

11 And of the sons of *²*Bebai; Zechariah the son of Bebai, and with him twenty and eight males.

12 And of the sons of *²*Azgad; Johanan *²*the son of Hakkatan, and with him an hundred and ten males.

13 And of the last sons of *²*Adonikam, whose names are these, Eliphelet, Jeiel, and Shemaiah, and with them threescore males.

14 Of the sons also of *²*Bigvai; Uthai, and *†*Zabbud, and with them seventy males.

15 ¶ And I gathered them together to *²*the river that runneth to Ahava; and there *†*abode we in tents three days: † and I *²*viewed the people, and the priests, and found there *²*none of the sons of Levi.

16 Then sent I for Eliezer, for Ariel, for Shemaiah, and for Elnathan, and for Jarib, and for Elnathan, and for Nathan, and for Zechariah, and for Meshullam, chief men; also for Joiarib and for Elnathan, men of understanding.

17 And I sent them with commandment unto Iddo the chief at the place Casiphia; and *²*I told them what they should say unto Iddo, and to his brethren the *²*Nethinims, at the place Casiphia, that they should bring unto us ministers for the house of our God.

18 And, by the *²*good hand of our God upon us, they brought us *²*a man of understanding, of the sons of Mahli, the son of Levi, the son of Israel; and She-rebiah, with his sons and his brethren, eighteen;

19 And *²*Hashabiah, and with him Jeshaiiah of the sons of Merari, his brethren and their sons, twenty;

20 *²*Also of the Nethinims, whom David and the princes had appointed for the service of the Levites, two hundred and twenty Nethinims: all of them were expressed by name.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—God richly endows men with proper gifts and grace when he intends them for distinguished work in his church. And that character is highly exalted in which great knowledge and activity meet with great holiness of heart and life. Yea very excellent is a knowledge of the scriptures, when it is reduced to practice and employed in the instruction of others. If God call us to a difficult service, he can make all things concur to our encouragement. If his people want magistrates of their own religion, he can make heathens to compensate the loss, doing honour to his word as the rule; shewing at once generous hearts and open hands, and punishing contumacious despisers of him and his interests. But how thankful ought we to be when he thus makes the princes of this world nursing parents to his church: terrors to evil doers, and a praise to them that do well! Surely then it is but coming in us to depend on him alone as our strength and salvation, and ascribe the glory of all that we are or do in his service to his own power and grace.

Before Christ 457.

21 ¶ Then I proclaimed a fast there at the river Ahava, that we might afflict ourselves before our God, to seek of him a right way for us, and for our little ones, and for all our substance.

22 For I was ashamed to require of the king a band of soldiers and horsemen to help us against the enemy in the way; because we had spoken unto the king, saying, The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek him, but his power and his wrath is against all them that forsake him.

23 So we fasted, and besought our God for this; and he was entreated of us.

24 ¶ Then I separated twelve of the chief of the priests, Sherebiah, Hashabiah, and ten of their brethren with them,

25 And weighed unto them the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, even the offering of the house of our God, which the king, and his counsellors, and his lords, and all Israel there present, had offered:

26 I even weighed unto their hand six hundred and fifty talents of silver, and silver vessels an hundred talents, and of gold an hundred talents;

27 Also twenty basons of gold, of a thousand drams; and two vessels of fine copper, precious as gold.

28 And I said unto them, Ye are holy unto the LORD; the vessels are holy also; and the silver and the gold are a free-will-offering unto the LORD God of your fathers.

29 Watch ye, and keep them until ye weigh them before the chief of the priests, and the Levites, and chief of the fathers of Israel, at Jerusalem, in the chambers of the house of the LORD.

30 So took the priests and the Levites the weight of the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, to bring them to Jerusalem unto the house of our God.

31 ¶ Then we departed from the river of Ahava on the twelfth day of the first month, to go unto Jerusalem: and the hand of our God was upon us, and he delivered us from the hand of the enemy, and of such as lay in wait by the way.

32 And we came to Jerusalem, and abode there three days.

33 ¶ Now on the fourth day was the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, weighed in the house of our God by the hand of Merimoth the son of Uriah the priest; and with him was Eleazar the son of Phinehas; and with them was Jozabad the son of Jeshua, and Noadiah the son of Binnui, Levites;

34 By number and by weight of every one. And all the weight was written at that time.

35 Also the children of those that had been carried away, which were come out of the captivity, offered burnt-offerings unto the God of Israel, twelve bullocks for all Israel, ninety and six rams, seventy and seven lambs, twelve he goats for a sin-offering: all this was a burnt-offering unto the LORD.

36 ¶ And they delivered the king's commissions unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors on this side the river; and they furthered the people, and the house of God.

CHAP. IX.

Now the Persian government was kind to the Jews: they had no persecutions from without: nor do we hear of any idolatry, or neglect of the temple service, among them; but yet all is not right. Here (1) A complaint is brought to Ezra, that many of the people, priests and Levites, had married heathen wives; 1, 2. (2) Ezra, and others instigated by his example, are overwhelmed with grief on account of it, as it had been the original cause of their former sins and judgments; 3, 4. (3) At the time of the evening sacrifice he, with much godly sorrow, fear, and shame, makes a solemn confession of it to God, and of its aggravations, as it was a sin which the nation had long continued in, and had committed against God's express law, and his manifold mercies and judgments; 5-15.

NOW when these things were done the princes came to me, saying, The people of Israel, and the priests, and the Levites, have not separated themselves from the people of the lands, doing according to their abominations, even of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, the Egyptians, and the Amorites.

2 For they have taken of their daughters for themselves, and for their sons; so that the holy seed have mingled themselves with the people of those lands: yea, the hand of the princes and rulers hath been chief in this trespass.

3 And when I heard this thing I rent my garment and my mantle, and plucked off the hair of my head and of my beard, and sat down astonished.

4 Then were assembled unto me every one that trembled at the words of the God of Israel, because of the transgression of those that had been carried away; and I sat astonished until the evening sacrifice.

5 ¶ And at the evening sacrifice I arose up from my heaviness; and, having rent my garment and my mantle, I fell upon my knees, and spread out my hands unto the LORD my God,

6 And said, O my God, I am ashamed and blush to lift up my face to thee, my God: for our iniquities are increased over our head, and our trespass is grown up unto the heavens.

7 Since the days of our fathers have we been in a great trespass unto this day; and for our iniquities have we, our kings, present help in trouble. Let us therefore by faith cast all the care of our persons, families, and estates, upon him. Only holy persons are duly qualified to take charge of holy things, and especially of precious souls. And the greatest accuracy and fidelity are necessary in every trust, as we must give account to God. But O how infinite is his goodness in bringing his chosen people safe through dangers, rendering their trustees honest and faithful, their companions devout, and their enemies friendly! And soon shall his gracious designs be complete, in bringing all the ransomed millions to the Canaan, the Jerusalem above, where they shall for ever behold, live on, and rejoice with, Jesus their all-comprehending sacrifice; and where they shall find none but furtherers of their work.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—How shameful it is to find such numbers of Jews still in Assyria, after they had had near eighty years' liberty of returning to Judea, where their brethren were, and their God, before them. And especially that the revenues for God's temple, even from heathens' hands, should be in more forwardness than Levitical ministers to bear or use them! But they who are backward to their duty must be stirred up. Every vacancy in the church ought to be speedily supplied with pastors according to God's heart. With the utmost care we ought to avoid every thing that looks like distrusting of our God, or dependence on an arm of flesh. We had better expose ourselves to difficulties than dishonour God, or give occasion of stumbling even to heathens. In perplexing circumstances let us apply to solemn fasting and fervent prayer. They, who in a humble and dependant manner seek him, will find him a very

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—It is vain to expect perfection in the militant church. And the comforts of saints on earth are quickly imbibed with a mixture of griefs. But how infatuated are many professed Christians, who think of no sin, no danger, in being unequally yoked with unbelievers! A little skin-deep beauty, or a little earthly wealth or honour, is often preferred to the image of Jesus Christ! And, when the most ruinous sins become fashionable, few are affected with them. But to such as are Israelites indeed the word of God appears awfully important. And that which seems light or lawful to carnal professors lies heavy on tender consciences. These take grief and shame to themselves for such as are hardened in their sins: and to join with such, in their sorrow and zeal, is both our duty and honour: for the most fearful aggravations appear attending our sins, and those of our land, when we consider the matter as in the sight of God. It therefore becomes us faithfully and humbly to repent of, and acknowledge, our sins, over our great sacrifice, our great propitiation; once offered in the evening, the end of the world;—and, in the believing view of God's new covenant relation and pardoning mercy, to justify him, and condemn ourselves. But often-repeated provocations weary out the patience of God. And hopeless is their case whom neither corrections humble nor mercies constrain.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—Wherever sin is seen and felt there is no ground for despair, yea, there may be good hope, through grace, where there is a burden of the most aggravated guilt. In mournful circumstances, we ought to observe what makes for us as well as what makes against us. And even weaker saints may be instructors to those who are far stronger in gifts and grace. Mourning and reforming sinners ought to be encouraged; and leaders in church or state ought to be most active in promoting reformation. Men's sins with the aggravations and danger of them, ought to be closely laid home to their consciences. For none will part with them till they perceive that they are undone if they persevere therein. Great men ought to take the good advice of their inferiors. Critical causes ought to be decided with great deliberation and caution.

And reformations begun and carried on with much fasting, prayer, and solemn covenanting with God, promise good success. When we truly return to God he will return to us: he will at last pluck his people as brands out of the burning. They, who have the cause of God at heart, spare neither time nor pains to serve it. But how shameful is it to find priests, whose marriages were peculiarly restricted of God, ringleaders in unhallowed connections with heathen women! and yet is it highly commendable in them to prove at last patterns of repentance and reformation to others. Alas, that so few clergymen are disposed to imitate their example; but rather endeavouring by every possible shift to extenuate, excuse, or defend, their own error and wickedness!

THE BOOK OF NEHEMIAH

Was probably written by himself. It commences twelve years after the dissolution of the unhallowed marriages; and, including at least twelve years of historical account, reaches to about the hundred and fourth after the return from Babylon. It represents (1) Nehemiah's deep concern for the desolations of Jerusalem, and the commission he obtained from king Artaxerxes to rebuild the wall of it; i. ii. (1) His building of the wall, and dedicating it, notwithstanding great opposition from the heathens around; iii. iv. vi. and xii. 27—43. (3) His redressing the people's grievances, their debts and mortgages; v. (4) His taking account of those who returned from Babylon; vii. (5) His care to promote the solemn reading of the law, fasting, and renovation of their covenant with God; viii—x. (6) His care to replenish Jerusalem, and settle the priests, Levites, singers, and porters, in their proper work; xi. xii. (7) His care to check unhallowed marriages, procure the Levites their provision, and restrain profanation of the sabbath; xiii.

CHAP. I.

Here we meet with Nehemiah at the Persian court, and find him (1) Inquiring into the state of the Jews and Jerusalem; and informed of their deplorable situation; 1-3. (2) Employed in solemn fasting and prayer on their account;—confessing his and their iniquities; and pleading God's relation, promise, and former kindness, in order to obtain help in this time of need; 4-11.

THE words of Nehemiah the son of Hachaliah. And it came to pass, in the month Chisleu, in the twentieth year, as I was in Shushan the palace,

2 That Hanani one of my brethren came, he and certain men of Judah; and I asked them concerning the Jews that had escaped, who were left of the captivity, and concerning Jerusalem.

3 And they said unto me, The remnant that are left of the captivity there in the province are in great affliction and reproach: the wall of Jerusalem also is broken down, and the gates thereof are burned with fire.

4 And it came to pass, when I heard these words, that I sat down and wept, and mourned certain days, and fasted, and prayed before the God of heaven.

5 ¶ And said, I beseech thee, O LORD God of heaven, the great and terrible God, that keepeth covenant and mercy for them that love him and observe his commandments;

6 Let thine ear now be attentive, and thine eyes open, that thou mayest hear the prayer of thy servant, which I pray before thee now, day and night, for the children of Israel thy servants, and confess the sins of the children of Israel, which we have sinned against thee: both I and my father's house have sinned.

7 We have dealt very corruptly against thee, and have not kept the commandments, nor the statutes, nor the judgments, which thou commandest thy servant Moses.

8 Remember, I beseech thee, the word that thou commandedst thy servant Moses, saying, If ye transgress, I will scatter you abroad among the nations:

9 But if ye turn unto me, and keep my commandments, and do them, though there were of you cast out unto the uttermost part of the heaven, yet will I gather them from thence, and will bring them unto the place that I have chosen to set my name there.

10 Now these are thy servants and thy people, whom thou hast redeemed by thy great power and by thy strong hand.

11 O LORD, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of thy servant, and to the prayer of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name: and prosper, I pray thee, thy servant this day, and grant him mercy in the sight of this man. For I was the king's cup bearer.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—Sad defects still remain in the militant church. But, whenever God has work to be done, he can easily find or qualify instruments for it. Lively saints may often be found where we could least expect them,—courts not excepted. And no dignity or distance can make such an one careless of the honour or the church of God. The poverty or persecution, which carelessly others, awakens his zeal and concern. In seasons of public or private distress, fasting and tears should accompany our prayers. It is a great relief for a sorrowful spirit to pour out its complaints into the bosom of a compassionate God. While we have a God in Christ to go to, our case is never des-

Here Nehemiah receives the return of his prevalent prayer. (1) By a sorrowful countenance and humble representation, he obtains from king Artaxerxes a commission to build a wall about Jerusalem, and a grant of what was necessary for that purpose; 1-8. (2) By a steady courage he damps the enemies who would have obstructed his journey, or laughed him out of his undertaking; 9-11, 19, 20. (3) After surveying the ruinous state of the wall, he, by a moving remonstrance, animates the Jews to assist him in rebuilding it; 12-18.

AND it came to pass, in the month Nisan, in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes the king, that wine was before him; and I took up the wine, and gave it unto the king. Now I had not been before-time sad in his presence.

2 Wherefore the king said unto me, Why is thy countenance sad, seeing thou art not sick? this is nothing else but sorrow of heart. Then I was very sore afraid,

3 And said unto the king, Let the king live for ever: why should not my countenance be sad, when the city, the place of my fathers' sepulchres, lieth waste, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire?

4 Then the king said unto me, For what dost thou make request? So I prayed to the God of heaven.

5 And I said unto the king, If it please the king, and if thy servant have found favour in thy sight, that thou wouldest send me unto Judah, unto the city of my fathers' sepulchres, that I may build it.

6 And the king said unto me, (the queen also sitting by him,) For how long shall thy journey be? and when wilt thou return? So it pleased the king to send me; and I set him a time.

7 Moreover, I said unto the king, If it please the king, let letters be given me to the governors beyond the river, that they may convey me over till I come into Judah;

8 And a letter unto Asaph the keeper of the king's forest, that he may give me timber to make beams for the gates of the palace which appertained to the house, and for the wall of the city, and for the house that I shall enter into. And the king granted me, according to the good hand of my God upon me.

9 ¶ Then I came to the governors beyond the river, and gave them the king's letters. Now the king had sent captains of the army and horsemen with me.

10 When Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the servant the Ammonite, heard of it, it grieved them exceedingly that there was come a man to seek the welfare of the children of Israel.

11 So I came to Jerusalem, and was there three days.

12 ¶ And I arose in the night, I and some few men with me; neither told I any man what my God had put in my perate. And, if he pour out upon us his Spirit of grace and supplication, he will certainly hear us. Let us then, with holy and believing awe of his greatness and grace, rest on the stability of his covenant. And let candid confessions of our sins and unworthiness attend our supplications for mercy. It is infinitely encouraging to us that we have to deal with a God who is our own God; a God who has done great things for us, and has pledged his promise to do more. Let us therefore put our own, and the hearts of all connected with the welfare of Zion, into his hand.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—Strong grief can scarcely be concealed. And it becomes superiors or others to observe the appearances of distress in those around them, and to sympathize with them in it. Even Jesus marks his people's groans, and puts their tears into his bottle. There is therefore no reason either for fear or for shame when sorrow for sin, and for the affliction of God's people, burden our heart and sadden our countenance. Nothing is more comely than meek and humble answers, when given by distressed minds to great men. And pious ejaculations to God are proper to be intermingled with all our important dealings. The prayer of faith is never in vain. God will afford us friends, and help us where we scarcely ever expected it. It is easy with him to render the greatest on earth friendly and helpful to his church in a time of need.

But every favour shown to the servants of God awakens the envy and rage of the wicked. They so heartily hate the cause of God, that they are vexed exceedingly if any take it by the hand and zealously promote it; and are ready to attack them with every arrow of envenomed malice, derision, slander, and threatening. What strong faith in God, zeal for his glory, bold courage, and prudent discretion, are then necessary, in attempting any noted work for the Lord and his church. In this manner we bid fair to animate even cowards and sluggards to join with us in it. Many will second the labours of one that is zealous and active, who had no courage to lead. Let us therefore instantly begin, as delays are dangerous; and let us carefully observe and acknowledge the kind interposals of providence in all that we meet with.

CHAP. IV.

Represents the opposition made to their building the wall, and how it was withstood. (1) Their heathen neighbours ridiculed their work: but their scoffs had no other answer than Nehemiah's fervent prayer to God, and the people's going on briskly with it: 1-6. (2) While some Jews were dispirited, these heathens formed a plot to murder the builders, and to stop their work by force; 7, 8, 10-12. But by Nehemiah's prayers, setting of guards, arming and encouraging the builders to fight, if needful, this design was frustrated, and the building went forward; 9, 13-23.

BUT it came to pass that, when Sanballat heard that we builded the wall, he ^xwas wroth, and took great indignation, and mocked the Jews.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—It is a hopeful appearance when ministers are most forward in every good word and work; and when they undertake and go through their work with much solemn prayer and dependance on God. And it is very encouraging when multitudes of all ranks, tradesmen, ladies, nobles, and commons, unanimously concur in promoting the work of the Lord in an orderly manner. But how honourable is it if, like the men of Jericho, Gibeon, Mizpah, Zanoah, and the commons of Tekoah, we prefer the public interests to our own private concerns! or if, like the Tekoites and Merimoth, we help our brethren after finishing our own share! When the work is the Lord's we cannot be too zealously affected; and every person, if he be but hearty, may do something in it. None are so little as to be useless; and none are so high as to be above it. And it is highly disgraceful, even for the greatest, to shift or neglect what God calls them to do in his church.

13 ¶ Therefore ^aset I in ^{*}the lower places behind the wall, and on the higher places, I even set the people after their families with ^btheir swords, their spears, and their bows.

14 And I looked, and rose up, and said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, ^cBe not ye afraid of them: ^dremember the LORD, who is great and terrible, and ^efight for your brethren, your sons, and your daughters, your wives, and your houses.

15 And it came to pass, when our enemies heard that it was known unto us, and God ^fhad brought their counsel to nought, that we returned all of us to the wall, every one unto his work.

16 And it came to pass, from that time forth, that the half of my servants ^gwrought in the work, and the other half of them held both the spears, the shields, and the bows, and the habergeons; and the rulers were behind all the house of ^hJudah.

17 They who builded on the wall, and they that bare burdens, with those that laded, every one ⁱwith one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other hand held a weapon.

18 For the builders every one had his sword girded ^jby his side, and so builded: and he that sounded the trumpet was by me.

19 And I said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, The work is great and large, and we are separated upon the wall one far from another.

20 In what place therefore ye hear the sound of the trumpet, resort ye thither unto us: ^kour God shall fight for us.

21 So we ^llaboured in the work: and half of them held the spears, from the rising of the morning till the stars appeared.

22 Likewise at the same time said I unto the people, Let every one with his servant lodge within Jerusalem, that in the night they may be a guard to us, and labour on the day.

23 So neither ^mI, nor my brethren, nor my servants, nor the men of the guard who followed me, none of us put off our clothes, ⁿsaving that every one put them off for washing.

CHAP. V.

Nehemiah has no less hard work to redress grievances at home, and to keep the Jews from destroying one another. Here (1) The poor grievously complain of the great hardships put upon them by their rich brethren, from whom they had been obliged to borrow; 1—5. (2) After labouring to convince and reform the oppressors, Nehemiah orders a forbearance of usury, and a restitution of the poor's property; and solemnly engages the rich, under an awful curse, to perform it; 6—13. (3) He, as governor, enforces, by his own example, the greatest compassion and tenderness; 14—19.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—God's faithful builders are sure to have a share of the world's ridicule and contempt; and one wicked man encourages another. But, though scoffers make their hands strong, God will shortly cover them with shame and confusion. Let saints then never discompose their souls on account of the most bitter or insolent contempt: God observes it, and will quickly resent it. Let them in patience possess their souls, commit their way to God, and go on more briskly with their Christian work. God's blessing will more than compensate men's revilings. And much may be done in a little time if all be hearty in lending their assistance. What a pity then is it that the people of God should scarcely ever be as harmonious and active in the Lord's work as the wicked are in their opposition to it! Nay, his more active servants have often as much trouble with the fears of their friends as with the terrors of

AND there was a ^agreat cry of the people and of their wives against their ^bbrethren the Jews:

2 For there were that said, We, our sons, and our daughters, are many; therefore we ^ctake up corn for them, that we may eat, and live.

3 Some also there were that said, We have mortgaged our lands, vineyards, and houses, that we might buy corn, ^dbecause of the dearth.

4 There were also that said, We have borrowed money for the king's tribute, and that upon our lands and vineyards.

5 Yet now our ^eflesh is as the flesh of our brethren, our children as their children: and, lo, ^fwe bring into bondage our sons and our daughters, to be servants, and some of our daughters are brought into bondage already; neither is it in our power to redeem them; for other men have our lands and vineyards.

6 ¶ And I was ^gvery angry when I heard their cry and these words.

7 Then ^hI consulted with myself, and I ⁱrebuked the nobles and the rulers, and said unto them, ^jYe exact usury every one of his brother. And ^kI set a great assembly against them.

8 And I said unto them, We, after our ability, have ^lredeemed our brethren the Jews, who were sold unto the heathen; and will ye even sell your brethren? or shall they be sold unto us? Then ^mheld they their peace, and found nothing to answer.

9 Also I said, ⁿIt is not good that ye do: ought ye not to walk in the ^ofear of our God because ^pof the reproach of the heathen our enemies?

10 ^qI likewise, and my brethren, and my servants, might exact of them money and corn: I pray you, ^rlet us leave off this usury.

11 ^sRestore, I pray you, to them, even this day, their lands, their vineyards, their olive yards, and their houses, also the hundredth part of the money, and of the corn, the wine, and the oil, that ye exact of them.

12 Then said they, We will restore them, and ^twill require nothing of them; so will we do as thou sayest. Then I called the priests, and ^utook an oath of them, that they should do according to this promise.

13 Also I ^vshook my lap, and said, So God ^wshake out every man from his house and from his labour, that performeth not this promise; even thus be he shaken out, and ^xtempted. And all the congregation said, ^yAmen, and praised the LORD. And the people did ^zaccording to this promise.

14 ¶ Moreover, from the time that I their enemies. And false friends are more dangerous than open enemies. But, be the plots of enemies ever so well laid, or ever so secret, God can discover or defeat them. Let then his infinite power and unbounded goodness encourage us to go on with our work, notwithstanding all the craft and malice of our adversaries. In all our spiritual work, all our attempts of reformation, let us put on the whole armour of God, and watch and pray, that we enter not into temptation. Let us, in our respective stations, unanimously unite with heart and hand against the common enemy; and count neither ease nor life dear unto us, that we may finish our course with joy. Religion bids fair to prosper when the professors thereof make earnest work of it, and endure hardship as good soldiers of Jesus Christ.

was appointed to be their governor in the land of Judah[†], from the twentieth year even unto the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes the king, that is, twelve years, I and my brethren have not eaten the bread of the governor.

15 But the former governors that had been before me were chargeable unto the people, and had taken of them bread and wine, beside forty shekels of silver; yea, even their servants bare rule over the people: but so did not I, ^cbecause of the fear of God.

16 Yea, also I ^dcontinued in the work of this wall, neither ^ebought we any land: and all my servants were gathered thither unto the work.

17 Moreover, there were ^fat my table an hundred and fifty of the Jews and rulers, beside those that came unto us from among the heathen that are about us.

18 Now that ^gwhich was prepared for me daily was one ox and six choice sheep; also fowls were prepared for me; and once in ten days store of all sorts of wine: yet for all this required not I the bread of the governor, because the bondage was heavy upon this people.

19 ^hThink upon me, my God, for good, according to all that I have done for this people.

CHAP. VI.

Still the building of the wall goes on, notwithstanding manifold plots to stop it. (1) When the heathens court Nehemiah to an interview, in order to murder him, he declines it; 1—4. (2) When they pretend that his designs were represented as treasonable, he contradicts and disregards their insinuations; 5—9. (3) When they hire false prophets to decoy him into the temple for his safety, he refuses to act with such cowardice; 10—14. (4) Notwithstanding their keeping up a treacherous correspondence with some Jews, the wall is happily finished in fifty-two days; 15—19.

NOW it came to pass, when ^aSanballat, and Tobiah, and Geshem the Arabian, and the rest of our enemies, heard that I had builded the wall, and that there was no ^bbreach left therein; (though at that time I ^chad not set up the doors upon the gates;)

2 That Sanballat and Geshem sent unto me, saying, Come, let us ^dmeet together in some one of the villages in the ^eplain of Ono. But ^fthey thought to do me mischief.

3 And I ^gsent messengers unto them, saying, I am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down: why should the work cease whilst I leave it and come down to you?

4 Yet they sent unto me ^hfour times after this sort; and I answered them after the same manner.

5 ¶ Then sent Sanballat his servant unto me in like manner the fifth time, with an open letter in his hand;

6 Wherein was written, ⁱIt is reported among the heathen, and ^kGashmu saith it, that thou and the Jews think to ^lrebel: for which cause thou buildest the wall, that thou mayest be their king, according to these words.

7 And thou hast also appointed prophets to preach of thee at Jerusalem, saying, There is a king in Judah: and now shall it be reported to the king according to these words. Come now therefore, and let us ^mtake counsel together.

8 Then I sent unto him, saying, There are no such things done as thou sayest, but thou ⁿfeignest them out of thine own heart.

9 For they all made us ^oafraid, saying, Their hands shall be weakened from the work, that it be not done. Now therefore, ^pO God, strengthen my hands.

10 ¶ Afterward I came unto the house of ^qShemaiah the son of Delaiah, the son of Mehetabeel, who was shut up; and he said, ^rLet us meet together in the house of God, within the temple, and let us shut the doors of the temple: for they will come to slay thee; yea, in the night will they come to slay thee.

11 And I said, Should ^ssuch a man as I flee? and who is there that, being as I am, would go into the temple to save his life? I will not go in.

12 And, lo, I ^tperceived that God had not sent him; but that he pronounced this prophecy against me: for Tobiah and Sanballat had hired him.

13 Therefore was he hired, that I should ^ube afraid, and do so, and sin, and that ^vthey might have matter for an evil report, that they might reproach me.

14 ^wMy God, think thou upon Tobiah and Sanballat according to these their works, and on the ^xprophetess Noadiah, and the rest of the prophets, that would have put me in fear.

15 ¶ So the wall was ^yfinished in the twenty and fifth day of the month Elul, in fifty and two days.

16 And it came to pass that, when all our enemies heard thereof, and all the heathen that were about us saw these things, they were ^zmuch cast down in their own eyes; for they perceived that this work was wrought of our God.

17 ¶ Moreover, in those days the nobles of Judah ^{aa}sent many letters unto Tobiah; and the letters of Tobiah came unto them.

18 For there were many in Judah sworn unto him, because he was the son-in-law of Shechaniah the son of ^{ab}Arah; and his

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Hard times and hard hearts, when met together, render the poor miserable indeed. And it is cruel to take advantage of our brethren's distress, and to make their yoke heavier by usurious exactions. Alas! how we bring hardship and famine on ourselves by our sins, and then complain of it! Those, who have great families and little substance, must learn to live by faith on God's promise and providence. And those, who have small families and much substance, should make their abundance a supply for their neighbours' wants; for often poor housekeepers are in much greater straits than the most wretched vagrants. But what a scandal to our holy religion is a worldly-minded and niggardly professor! And deliberate and aggravated is that theft which lies in retaining that which we have unjustly gotten. There can be no uprightness towards God without restitution to the oppressed. It is proper that rulers shew themselves angry at what is sinful, that their subjects may be deterred from it and excited to duty. But reproofs ought to be given with great consideration and temper, lest otherwise they fail of their end. And warm and rough, though not furious, measures are to be taken with hardened and presumptuous transgressors. It is highly criminal to expose the people of God, and interests of religion, to the reproach of their enemies. And the strongest bonds are necessary to restrain worldlings from their covetous courses. But how scandalous is it for magistrates to enrich themselves, or indulge their servants, to the public hurt! Those, whether magistrates or others, in whose heart the fear and love of God remarkably reign, will discover it by the exemplariness of their lives. In times of public distress they will even remit what is their unquestionable due. But infallible are the gracious rewards of sincere piety and disinterested benevolence from God, even when men overlook it. And it is pleasant to have them as a mark of our new covenant relation to God.

CHAP. VII.

Here (1) Nehemiah, having finished the wall of Jerusalem, and appointed the Levites their regular order of attendance at the temple, appoints right officers, and issues wise orders, for guarding the city, whose inhabitants were but few: 1—4. (2) In order to repopulate the city, by making the tenth man to live in it, he reviews and records a register of those who had actually returned from Babylon: 5—73.

NOW it came to pass, when the wall was built, and I had set up the doors, and the porters, and the singers, and the Levites, were appointed,

2 That I gave my brother Hanani and Hananiah the ruler of the palace charge over Jerusalem: (for he was a faithful man, and feared God above many:)

3 And I said unto them, Let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened until the sun be hot; and, while they stand by, let them shut the doors, and bar them: and appoint watches of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, every one in his watch, and every one to be over against his house.

4 Now the city was large and great: but the people were few therein, and the houses were not builded.

5 ¶ And my God put into mine heart to gather together the nobles, and the rulers, and the people, that they might be reckoned by genealogy. And I found a register of the genealogy of them who came up at the first, and found written therein,

6 These are the children of the province, that went up out of the captivity of those that had been carried away, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away, and came again to Jerusalem and to Judah, every one unto his city;

7 Who came with Zerubbabel: Jeshua, Nehemiah, Azariah, Raamiah, Nahamani, Mordecai, Bilshan, Mispereth, Bigvai, Nehum, Baanah. The number, I say, of the men of the people of Israel was this;

8 The children of Parosh, two thousand an hundred seventy and two.

9 The children of Shephatiah, three hundred seventy and two.

10 The children of Arah, six hundred fifty and two.

11 The children of Pahath-moab, of the children of Jeshua and Joab, two thousand and eight hundred and eighteen.

12 The children of Elam, a thousand two hundred fifty and four.

13 The children of Zattu, eight hundred forty and five.

14 The children of Zaccai, seven hundred and threescore.

15 The children of Binnui, six hundred forty and eight.

16 The children of Bebai, six hundred twenty and eight.

17 The children of Azgad, two thousand three hundred twenty and two.

18 The children of Adonikam, six hundred threescore and seven.

19 The children of Bigvai, two thousand threescore and seven.

20 The children of Adin, six hundred fifty and five.

21 The children of Ater of Hezekiah, ninety and eight.

22 The children of Hashum, three hundred twenty and eight.

23 The children of Bezai, three hundred twenty and four.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—O the infernal subtlety and restlessness of Satan and his agents; and the need of heavenly wisdom and steady circumspection for resisting all their ensnaring and repeated solicitations! But business of consequence ought always to be preferred to matters of civility and compliment. It is common for the church's enemies to pretend friendship in order to ruin her; and no less so to represent her faithful ministers and members as traitors to government. But no lies, or malevolent reports, should weaken our hands from the work of God. They who have almighty power engaged for them may look up to God and be comforted. He will uphold them; and, the more the enemies rage, the more shall JEHOVAH's strength be perfected in our weakness. Yea, they shall see to their grief that he cares for his people, and that when he works none can hinder it. However great the opposition, and weak the instruments, he can speedily effect his work. And much good may be done in a short time if people are hearty in it, and have a good God and a pious man at the head of it. But a most dangerous plague are pretended and unfaithful ministers, treacherous magistrates, and villanous professors. The treachery of pretended friends is more to be feared than the malice of open enemies. And happy are those who, directed and encouraged of God, escape being ensnared in their nets. But for this we must walk circumspectly, and try the spirits; and be ready to risk every danger, rather than injure the cause of God, or even bring a reproach on our holy character or office. God marks the iniquities of his enemies, and will turn their deep-laid schemes against his people to their own confusion. Nor shall those, who have ensnared themselves by sinful connections, or who assist them in their purposes, long escape the judgment, which lingereth not.

60 ¶ All the Nethinims, and the children of Solomon's servants, were three hundred ninety and two.

61 ¶ And these were they who went up also from Tel-melah, Telharsa, Cherub, Addon, and Immer; but they could not shew their father's house, nor their *seed, whether they were of Israel.

62 The children of Delaiah, the children of Tobiah, the children of Nekoda, six hundred forty and two.

63 ¶ And of the priests: the children of Habaiah, the children of Koz, the children of Barzillai, which took one of the daughters of 'Barzillai the Gileadite to wife, and was called after their name.

64 These sought their register among those that were reckoned by genealogy, but it was not found: therefore were they, as polluted, put from the priesthood.

65 And 'the Tirshatha said unto them that they should not eat of the most holy things till there stood up a priest with Urim and Thummim.

66 ¶ The 'whole congregation together was forty and two thousand three hundred and threescore, 67 Beside their 'man servants and their maid servants, of whom there were seven thousand three hundred thirty and seven: and they had two hundred forty and five singing men and singing women.

68 Their horses, seven hundred thirty and six; their mules, two hundred forty and five;

69 Their camels, four hundred thirty and five; six thousand seven hundred and twenty asses.

70 ¶ And †some of the chief of the fathers gave unto the work. The 'Tirshatha gave to the treasure a thousand drams of gold, fifty basons, five hundred and thirty priests' garments.

71 And some of the chief of the fathers †gave to the treasure of the work twenty thousand drams of gold and two thousand and two hundred pound of silver.

72 And that which 'the rest of the people gave was twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand pound of silver, and threescore and seven priests' garments.

73 So the priests, and the Levites, and the porters, and the singers, and some of the people, and the Nethinims, and all Israel, dwelt in their cities; and, when the 'seventh month came, the children of Israel were in their cities.

CHAP. VIII.

Here (1) Encouraged by Nehemiah, and the other Israelites, who had assembled at Jerusalem to keep the feast of trumpets, Ezra, assisted by twenty-six other priests, reads and explains Moses' law to them; and they offer solemn thanksgiving to God; 1—8. (2) Encouraged by Nehemiah, and deeply affected with what they had heard, the people spend the rest of the day in holy joy and mutual benevolence; 9—12. (3) Reading, on the second day, the law which appointed the observance of the feast of tabernacles, all the Jews were summoned to keep it fifteen days after, which they did; 13—18.

AND all 'the people gathered themselves together as one man into the street that was before 'the water gate; and they spake unto Ezra the 'scribe to bring the 'book of the law of Moses, which the LORD had commanded to Israel.

2 And Ezra the priest 'brought the law before the congregation, both of 'men and women, and all *that could hear with understanding, upon the 'first day of the seventh month.

3 And he 'read therein before the street that was before the water gate †from the morning until midday, before the men and the women, and those that could understand; and the 'ears of all the people were attentive unto the book of the law.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—The worship and service of God ought always to be preferred to our civil concerns, however important; and with great care ought princes and other rulers to make choice of their deputies: if possible, they should fix upon such as are faithful and eminently fear God. Happy, even amidst dangers, are the cities and nations which have such to rule and protect them. Great caution is necessary, for our own and the church's safety, when we have traitors amongst and within us: and every man's family ought to be his immediate concern. He has need to watch over them night and day, that he may preserve them from the destroyer. Important records should be preserved, as they may be of use afterwards. But woe to those, who, having given their names to the Lord, afterwards look back and return to the world; though God will compensate the loss of them to his church in the accession of others.

Hashum, and Hashbadana, Zechariah, and Meshullam.

5 And Ezra opened the book in the sight of all the people; (for he was above all the people;) and when he opened it all the people stood up:

6 And Ezra blessed the LORD the great God. And all the people answered, Amen, amen, with lifting up their hands: and they bowed their heads, and worshipped the LORD with their faces to the ground.

7 Also Jeshua, and Bani, and Sherebiah, Jamin, Akkub, Shabbethai, Hodijah, Maaseiah, Kelita, Azaria, Jozabad, Hanan, Pelaiah, and the Levites, caused the people to understand the law: and the people stood in their place.

8 So they read in the book in the law of God distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading.

9 ¶ And Nehemiah, who is the Tirshatha, and Ezra the priest the scribe, and the Levites that taught the people, said unto all the people, This day is holy unto the LORD your God; mourn not, nor weep. For all the people wept when they heard the words of the law.

10 Then he said unto them, Go your way, eat the fat, and drink the sweet, and send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared; for this day is holy unto our LORD: neither be you sorry; for the joy of the LORD is your strength.

11 So the Levites stilled all the people, saying, Hold your peace, for the day is holy; neither be ye grieved.

12 And all the people went their way to eat, and to drink, and to send portions, and to make great mirth, because they had understood the words that were declared unto them.

13 ¶ And on the second day were gathered together the chief of the fathers of all the people, the priests, and the Levites, unto Ezra the scribe, even to understand the words of the law.

14 And they found written, in the law which the LORD had commanded by Moses, that the children of Israel should dwell in booths in the feast of the seventh month;

15 And that they should publish and proclaim in all their cities, and in Jerusalem, saying, Go forth unto the mount, and fetch olive branches, and pine branches, and myrtle branches, and palm branches, and branches of thick trees, to make booths, as it is written.

16 ¶ So the people went forth, and brought them, and made themselves booths, every one upon the roof of his house, and in their courts, and in the courts of the house of God, and in the street of the water gate, and in the street of the gate of Ephraim.

17 And all the congregation of them that were come again out of the captivity made booths, and sat under the booths: for since the days of Jeshua the son of Nun unto that day had not the children of Israel done so. And there was very great gladness.

18 Also day by day, from the first day unto the last day, he read in the book of the law of God. And they kept the feast seven days; and on the eighth day was a solemn assembly, according unto the manner.

CHAP. IX.

No doubt the fast of universal expiation had been observed on the tenth of this month: but, before they part, they keep another occasional fast. Here is an account of (1) The manner in which it was observed; 1-3. (2) The persons who led the public devotions; 4, 5. (3) The principal heads of the prayers on that occasion; comprehending, 1. A solemn address to God; 5, 6: 2. Thankful acknowledgments of his mercies towards their nation for almost fifteen hundred years: 3. Penitent confessions of their own and their fathers' sins: 4. Lamentations over God's righteous judgments: 5. Earnest petitions for pity and relief; 7-37. (4) Their solemn covenanting with God, in order to shew their gratitude for his mercies, and prevent like sins and like judgments for the future; 38.

NOW, in the twenty and fourth day of this month, the children of Israel were assembled with fasting, and with sackcloths and earth upon them.

2 And the seed of Israel separated themselves from all strangers; and stood and confessed their sins, and the iniquities of their fathers.

3 And they stood up in their place, and read in the book of the law of the LORD their God one fourth part of the day; and another fourth part they confessed, and worshipped the LORD their God.

4 ¶ Then stood up upon the stairs, of the Levites, Jeshua, and Bani, Kadmiel, Shebaniah, Bunni, Sherebiah, Bani, and Chenani, and cried with a loud voice unto the LORD their God.

5 Then the Levites, Jeshua, and Kadmiel, Bani, Hashabniah, Sherebiah, Hodijah, Shebaniah, and Pethahiah, said, Stand up and bless the LORD your God for ever and ever; and blessed be thy glorious name, which is exalted above all blessing and praise.

6 Thou, even thou art LORD alone; Thou hast made heaven, the heaven of heavens, with all their host, the earth, and all things that are therein, the seas, and all that is therein, and thou preservest them all; and the host of heaven worshippeth thee.

7 Thou art the LORD the God, who didst choose Abram, and broughtest him

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—Not strong walls, but knowledge of, and obedience to, God, are the great safety of cities and nations. Nothing is more necessary, for the establishment or preservation of true religion, than a diligent study and thorough acquaintance with the word of God. Men, women, and children, ought to vie with each other in their study and knowledge of it. And it is a great pleasure to faithful preachers to have hearers who hunger and thirst after it. Not only ought God's word to be read, but also explained, and enforced on the conscience. And solemn prayers and praises should be joined with every public religious instruction. Sermons bid fair for success when the hearers are solemnly attentive. Nor will those, who relish the word of God, ever think the time long which is spent in hearing. Short sermons, and soon wearied hearers, are sad tokens of cold and careless hearts. O what a happy presage it is when God's law cuts men's consciences to the quick, and makes them weep from the heart. Penitent mourning makes way for spiritual mirth. They who sow in tears shall reap in joy. And it is the pleasantest part of a minister's work to comfort, with the gospel of Christ, those that mourn. For the gospel explained and believed, and the consolations of Christ experienced, effectually rejoice the heart, and qualify for the performance of duty or resistance of enemies. And a sense of God's redeeming kindness powerfully instigates to charitable benevolence. But how often the institutions of God's word are unknown to the most of professors! What a multitude of things will diligent searchers of the scriptures find there, which they had forgotten, or had never duly considered! It will convince them of many negligences and ignorances. Well spent are those hours which are occupied in earnest conversing with God by his word. And happy is the effect when such as have access to it speedily and cheerfully practise whatever they find therein commanded.

forth out of Ur of the Chaldees, and gavest him the name of Abraham;

8 And foundest his heart faithful before thee, and madest a covenant with him to give the land of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Jebusites, and the Girgashites, to give it, I say, to his seed, and hast performed thy words; for thou art righteous:

9 And didst see the affliction of our fathers in Egypt, and heardest their cry by the Red sea:

10 And shewedst signs and wonders upon Pharaoh, and on all his servants, and on all the people of his land: for thou knewest that they dealt proudly against them. So didst thou get thee a name, as it is this day.

11 And thou didst divide the sea before them, so that they went through the midst of the sea on the dry land; and their persecutors thou threwest into the deeps, as a stone into the mighty waters.

12 Moreover, thou leddest them in the day by a cloudy pillar, and in the night by a pillar of fire, to give them light in the way wherein they should go.

13 Thou camest down also upon mount Sinai, and spakest with them from heaven, and gavest them right judgments, and true laws, good statutes and commandments:

14 And madest known unto them thy holy sabbath, and commandedst them precepts, statutes, and laws, by the hand of Moses thy servant:

15 And gavest them bread from heaven for their hunger, and broughtest forth water for them out of the rock for their thirst, and promisedst them that they should go in to possess the land which thou hadst sworn to give them.

16 But they and our fathers dealt proudly, and hardened their necks, and hearkened not to thy commandments,

17 And refused to obey; neither were mindful of thy wonders that thou didst among them; but hardened their necks; and in their rebellion appointed a captain to return to their bondage: but thou art a God ready to pardon, gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and forsookest them not.

18 Yea, when they had made them a molten calf, and said, This is thy god that brought thee up out of Egypt, and had wrought great provocations;

19 Yet thou in thy manifold mercies forsookest them not in the wilderness: the pillar of the cloud departed not from them by day, to lead them in the way; neither the pillar of fire by night, to shew them light, and the way wherein they should go.

20 Thou gavest also thy good Spirit to instruct them, and withheldest not thy manna from their mouth, and gavest them water for their thirst.

21 Yea, forty years didst thou sustain them in the wilderness, so that they lacked nothing; their clothes waxed not old, and their feet swelled not.

22 Moreover, thou gavest them kingdoms and nations, and didst divide them into corners: so they possessed the land of Sihon, and the land of the king of Heshbon, and the land of Og king of Bashan.

23 Their children also multipliedst thou as the stars of heaven, and broughtest them into the land, concerning which thou hadst promised to their fathers that they should go in to possess it.

24 So the children went in and possessed the land; and thou subduest before them the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites, and gavest them into their hands, with their kings, and the people of the land, that they might do with them as they would.

25 And they took strong cities, and a fat land, and possessed houses full of all goods, wells digged, vineyards, and olive yards, and fruit trees in abundance: so they did eat, and were filled, and became fat, and delighted themselves in thy great goodness.

26 Nevertheless, they were disobedient, and rebelled against thee, and cast thy law behind their backs, and slew thy prophets, who testified against them to turn them to thee, and they wrought great provocations.

27 Therefore thou deliveredst them into the hand of their enemies, who vexed them: and in the time of their trouble, when they cried unto thee, thou heardest them from heaven; and, according to thy manifold mercies, thou gavest them saviours, who saved them out of the hand of their enemies.

28 But, after they had rest, they did evil again before thee; therefore leftest thou them in the hand of their enemies, so that they had the dominion over them: yet, when they returned, and cried unto thee, thou heardest them from heaven; and many times didst thou deliver them according to thy mercies;

29 And testifiedst against them, that thou mightest bring them again unto thy law: yet they dealt proudly, and hearkened not unto thy commandments, but sinned against thy judgments, (which, if a man do, he shall live in them,) and withdrew the shoulder, and hardened their neck, and would not hear.

30 Yet many years didst thou forbear them, and testifiedst against them by thy spirit in thy prophets: yet would they not give ear: therefore gavest thou them into the hand of the people of the lands.

31 Nevertheless, for thy great mercies' sake thou didst not utterly consume them, nor forsake them, for thou art a gracious and merciful God.

32 Now therefore, our God, the great, the mighty, and the terrible God, who keepest covenant and mercy, let not all the trouble seem little before thee, that hath come upon us, on our kings, on our princes, and on our priests, and on our prophets, and on our fathers, and on all thy people, since the time of the kings of Assyria unto this day.

33 Howbeit, thou art just in all that is brought upon us; for thou hast done right, but we have done wickedly:

34 Neither have our kings, our princes, our priests, nor our fathers, kept thy law, nor hearkened unto thy commandments and thy testimonies wherewith thou didst testify against them.

35 For they have not served thee in their kingdom, and in thy great goodness that thou gavest them, and in the large and fat land which thou gavest before them; neither turned they from their wicked works.

36 Behold, we are servants this day, and for the land that thou gavest unto our fathers, to eat the fruit thereof and the good thereof, behold, we are servants in it:

37 And it yieldeth much increase unto the kings whom thou hast set over us because of our sins: also they have dominion over our bodies, and over our cattle, at their pleasure, and we are in great distress.

38 And because of all this we make a sure covenant, and write it; and our princes, Levites, and priests, seal unto it.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—It is a great mercy when God's word burdens men's consciences with a sense of their sins; and when reformation from sin and fasting for it go hand in hand. Those fasts are most profitable in which men's souls are afflicted for their sins, the bands of wickedness are loosed, intimate fellowship with God enjoyed, and in which God's goodness leads to repentance. O what multitudes of mercies to us, and to our fathers, may a diligent observer of providence discover! What gracious calls and covenants! What deliverance, direction, provision, and establishment! What giving of the law and of the promises! What warnings against, and pardons of, our sins! What amazing patience and long suffering! What well timed and well-adjusted corrections! And it is necessary to confess our father's iniquities as well as our own, or we make ourselves heirs to them, and shall share in the punishment of them. We must likewise search out the aggravations of our sins, and seek not to exculpate ourselves, but to justify God. O what a root of wickedness and woe is the pride of men's heart! Often by it we revolt from the free and honourable service of God unto the basest slavery. But God's infinite mercy, and his constant adherence to his new covenant with Christ, and in him with us, ought to encourage us to return to him under the deepest sense of our provocations. And solemn evangelical covenanting with God is peculiarly proper when we have notoriously departed from him, are sharply corrected by him, and earnestly desire to return to him.

Nehemiah, having encompassed Jerusalem with a wall, and sanctified it by solemn fasting and self-dedication to God, now fortifies it with a proper number of inhabitants. Here are (1) The methods taken to people it; the rulers shew themselves a pattern; the lot is cast for every tenth man; and such as offer themselves freely are blessed; 1, 2. (2) A list of the principal men of the tribes of Judah, Benjamin and Levi, who dwell there; 3—19. (3) An account where the rest of the Jews who returned from Babylon dwelt; 20—36.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—It is honourable to be solemnly and publicly bound in the service of God; and especially is it becoming when they, who have the lead in civil or sacred offices, or in solemn fasting, are correspondently forward in regular covenanting with God. But, in all our covenants of duty, a respect must be had to all God's commandments; and a peculiar guard be placed over those temptations which we have seen to be the occasion of other men's falls, and to prove most dangerous to ourselves. They ought to be framed in direct opposition to that of which we have been guilty, or to which we are most likely to be tempted. And plainness and caution are indispensably necessary in the whole frame of them, that all who swear to them, or are bound by them, may readily know what obligations they come under.

CHAP. XII.

Here we have recorded (1) The names of the most noted priests and Levites who returned from Babylon with Zerubbabel; 1—9.

(2) The succession of the high priests after the captivity; 10, 11.

(3) A list of the next generation of the other chief priests or heads of the orders; 12—21. (4) A list of the most eminent Levites in Nehemiah's time; 22—26. (5) The solemn procession of the singers and priests at the dedication of the wall and city of Jerusalem, and the sacrifices and joy; 27—43. (6) The settlement of proper treasurers to collect the Levitical revenues, and of the singers and porters; 43—47.

(7) The names of the most eminent Levites in Nehemiah's time; 22—26. (8) The solemn procession of the singers and priests at the dedication of the wall and city of Jerusalem, and the sacrifices and joy; 27—43. (9) The settlement of proper treasurers to collect the Levitical revenues,
and of the singers and porters; 43—47.

NOW these are the ^apriests and the Levites that went up with Zerub-babel the son of Shealtiel and Jeshua:

^bSeraiah, Jeremiah, Ezra,

2 ^cAmariah, ^dMalluch, Hattush,

3 ^eShechaniah, ^fRehum, ^gMeremoth,

4 ^hIddo, ⁱGinnetho, Abijah,

5 ^jMiamin, ^kMaadiah, Bilgah,

6 Shemaiah, and Joiarib, Jedaiah,

7 ^lSallu, Amok, Hilkiah, Jedaiah.

These were the chief of the priests and of their brethren in the days of Jeshua.

8 Moreover, the Levites; ^mJeshua, Binnui, Kadmiel, Sherebiah, Judah, and Mattaniah, who was over ⁿthe thanksgiving, he and his brethren.

9 Also Bakbukiah and Unni, their brethren, were over against them in the watches.

10 ¶ And ^oJeshua begat Joiakim, Joiakim also begat ^pEliashib, and Eliashib begat Joiada,

11 And Joiada begat Jonathan, and Jonathan begat Jaddua.

12 And in the days of Joiakim were priests, the chief of the fathers: ^qof Seraiah, Meraiah; of Jeremiah, Hana-niah;

13 Of Ezra, Meshullum; of Amariah, Jehohanan;

14 Of Melicu, Jonathan; of Sheba-niah, Joseph;

15 Of Harim, Adna; of Meraioth, Helkai;

16 Of Iddo, Zechariah; of Ginnethon, Meshullam;

17 Of Abijah, Zichri; of Miniamin; of Moadiah, Piltai;

18 Of Bilgah, Shammua; of Shemaiah, Jehonathan;

19 And of Joiarib, Mattenai; of Je-daiah, Uzzi;

20 Of Sallai, Kallai; of Amok, Eber; 21 Of Hilkiah, Hashabiah; of Je-daiah, Nethaneel.

22 ¶ The Levites in the days of ^rElia-shib, Joiada, and Johanan, and Jaddua, were recorded chief of the fathers: also the priests, to the reign of ^sDarius the Persian.

23 The sons of Levi, the chief of the fathers, were written in the book of the ^tchronicles, even until the days of Jo-hanan the son of Eliashib.

24 And the chief of the Levites: ^uHashabiah, Sherebiah, and Jeshua the son of Kadmiel, with their brethren over against them, to praise and to give thanks ^vac-cording to the commandment of David ^wthe man of God, ^xward over against ward.

25 ^yMattaniah, and Bakbukiah, Obadiah, Meshullam, Talmon, Akkub, were porters, keeping the ward at the ^zthresholds of the gates.

26 These were in the days of Joiakim the son of Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and in the days of Nehemiah the governor, and of Ezra the priest the scribe.

27 ¶ And at the ^adedication of the wall of Jerusalem they sought the Levites out of all their places, to bring them to Jerusalem to keep the dedication with gladness, both ^bwith thanksgivings, and with singing, with cymbals, psalteries, and with harps.

28 And the sons of the singers gathered themselves together, both out of the ^cplain country round about Jerusalem and from the villages of ^dNetophathi;

29 Also from the ^ehouse of Gilgal, and out of the fields of ^fGeba and ^gAzmaveth: for the singers had builded them villages round about Jerusalem.

30 And the priests and the Levites ^hpurified themselves, and purified the people, and the gates, and the wall.

31 Then I brought up ⁱthe princes of Judah upon the wall, and appointed ^ktwo great companies of them that gave thanks, wherof one went on the right hand upon

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—The church of God, even on earth, ought to be a holy city. And, since Jesus her great ruler, and his apostles and prophets, dwell in her, men ought cheerfully to fix their residence there. But alas!
regard to carnal advantages or sinful liberties, or fear of persecution or expense, often keep many from the church or cause of God! It reflects great honour on magistrates and ministers when they take special care of the chief stations in nations and churches, and readily shew themselves patterns of self-denial and loly resolution. If God distinguish them with honour, they should distinguish themselves by zeal for his cause. And they, who for God's glory forego their own advantage, shall never lose their reward; while those, who only commend duty, but do not practise it, shall be ashamed. How commodiously God disposes of men into their various habitations! In all situations therefore they ought to accommodate their circumstances to his honour; and always live as strangers and pilgrims on this earth, who have here no continuing city, but look for one to come, the builder and maker of which is God.

neel, and Judah, Hanani, with the musical instruments of David, the man of God, and Ezra the scribe before them.

37 And at the fountain gate, which was over against them, they went up by the stairs of the city of David, at the going up of the wall, above the house of David, even unto the water gate eastward.

38 And the other company of them that gave thanks went over against them, and I after them, and the half of the people upon the wall, from beyond the tower of the furnaces even unto the broad wall;

39 And from above the gate of Ephraim, and above the old gate, and above the fish gate, and the tower of Hananeel, and the tower of Meah, even unto the sheep gate: and they stood still in the prison gate.

40 So stood the two companies of them that gave thanks in the house of God; and I, and the half of the rulers with me:

41 And the priests; Eliakim, Maaseiah, Miniamin, Michaiiah, Elioenai, Zechariah, and Hananiah, with trumpets;

42 And Maaseiah, and Shemaiah, and Eleazar, and Uzzi, and Jehohanan, and Malchijah, and Elam, and Ezer. And the singers sang loud, with Jezrahiah their overseer.

43 Also that day they offered great sacrifices, and rejoiced: for God had made them rejoice with great joy; the wives also and the children rejoiced: so that the joy of Jerusalem was heard even afar off.

44 ¶ And at that time were some appointed over the chambers for the treasures, for the offerings, for the first-fruits, and for the tithes, to gather into them, out of the fields of the cities the portions of the law for the priests and Levites: for Judah rejoiced for the priests and for the Levites that waited,

45 And both the singers and the porters kept the ward of their God, and the ward of the purification, according to the commandment of David and of Solomon his son.

46 For in the days of David and Asaph of old there were chief of the singers, and songs of praise and thanksgiving unto God.

47 And all Israel, in the days of Zerubbabel, and in the days of Nehemiah, gave the portions of the singers and the porters every day his portion; and they sanctified holy things unto the Levites; and the Levites sanctified them unto the children of Aaron.

CHAP. XIII.

Perhaps little more than eleven years had elapsed from our last account. Now Nehemiah, on his return from Babylon to Jerusalem, finds still need of reformation. (1) Upon hearing God's law against heathenish connections, the people separate themselves from the Moabites, Ammonites, and others; 1—3. While Nehemiah by force turns out Tobiah the Ammonite from his lodging in the temple chambers, which had been basely allotted him by Eliashib the high priest; 4—9. (2) He secures to the Levites the better payment of their dues; 10—14. (3) He restrains the too common gross profanation of the sabbath; 15—22. (4) He effectually checks the growing mischief of marrying heathen women; and, on account thereof, banishes one of the high priest's grandsons; 23—31.

ON that day they read in the book of Moses in the audience of the people; and therein was found written, that the Ammonite and the Moabite should not come into the congregation of God for ever;

2 Because they met not the children of Israel with bread and with water, but hired Balaam against them, that he should curse them: howbeit, our God turned the curse into a blessing.

3 Now it came to pass, when they had heard the law, that they separated from Israel all the mixed multitude.

4 ¶ And before this Eliashib the priest, having the oversight of the chamber of the house of our God, was allied unto Tobiah:

5 And he had prepared for him a great chamber, where aforetime they laid the meat-offerings, the frankincense, and the vessels, and the tithes of the corn, the new wine, and the oil, which was commanded to be given to the Levites, and the singers, and the porters; and the offerings of the priests.

6 But in all this time was not I at Jerusalem: for in the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes king of Babylon came I unto the king, and after certain days obtained I leave of the king:

7 And I came to Jerusalem, and understood of the evil that Eliashib did for Tobiah, in preparing him a chamber in the courts of the house of God.

8 And it grieved me sore: therefore I cast forth all the household stuff of Tobiah out of the chamber.

9 Then I commanded, and they cleansed the chambers: and thither brought I again the vessels of the house of God, with the meat-offering and the frankincense.

10 ¶ And I perceived that the portions of the Levites had not been given them: for the Levites and the singers that did the work were fled every one to his field.

11 Then contended I with the rulers, and said, Why is the house of God forsaken? And I gathered them together, and set them in their place.

12 Then brought all Judah the tithe of the corn, and the new wine, and the oil, unto the treasuries.

13 And I made treasurers over the treasuries, Shelemiah the priest, and Zadok the scribe; and of the Levites, Pedaiah: and next to them was Hananiah the son of Zaccur, the son of Mattaniah: for they were counted faithful, when all, even wives and children, share in the joys of the gospel, and are taught to sing God's high praise. How necessary, through the selfishness or unconcern of most professors, are fixed methods of collecting a proper maintenance for the ministers of the Lord! But it is highly becoming for them faithfully to attend to their work, and leave the supply of their needs to the care of their God.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—Happy are those ministers, those saints, who are recorded in the Lamb's book of life! Notwithstanding the ravages of death, God will always keep up in his church a succession of servants and people, and shew them distinguished honours. It is highly proper, even in a most solemn manner, to devote the protection of our cities, and all that we have, upon our God, as reconciled through the sacrifice of Christ. And it is comely

and ||their office was to distribute unto their brethren.
14 ^a Remember me, O my God, concerning this, and wipe not out my *good deeds that I have done for the house of my God, and for the †offices thereof.
15 ¶ In those days saw I in Judah ^bsome treading wine presses on the sabbath, and bringing in sheaves, and lading asses ; as also wine, grapes, and figs, and all manner of burdens, which they brought into Jerusalem on the sabbath day: and I testified against them in the day where-in they sold victuals.
16 There dwelt ^cmen of Tyre also therein, who brought fish and all manner of ware, and sold on the sabbath unto the children of Judah, and in Jerusalem.
17 Then I ^dcontended with the nobles of Judah, and said unto them, What evil thing is this that ye do, and profane the sabbath day?
18 ^eDid not your fathers thus, and did not our God bring all this evil upon us, and upon this city? yet ye bring ‡more wrath upon Israel by profaning the sabbath.
19 And it came to pass that, when the gates of Jerusalem began to be dark before the sabbath, ^fI commanded that the gates should be shut, and charged that they should not be opened till after the sabbath: and some of my servants set I at the gates, that there should no burden be brought in on the sabbath day.
20 So the merchants and sellers of all kind of ware lodged without Jerusalem once or twice.
21 Then I testified against them, and said unto them, Why lodge ye ||about the wall? if ye do so again, I will lay hands on you. From that time forth came they no more on the sabbath.
22 And I ^gcommanded the Levites

Before Christ 433.
^hthat they should cleanse themselves, and that they should come and keep the gates, to sanctify the sabbath day. ⁱRemember me, O my God, concerning this also, and spare me according to the *greatness of thy mercy.
23 ¶ In those days also saw I Jews ^kthat ^lhad married wives of Ashdod, of Ammon, and of Moab :
24 And their children spake half in the speech of Ashdod, and †could not speak in the Jews' language, but according to the language of ‡each people.
25 And I contended with them, and ^mcursed them, and ⁿsmote certain of them, and plucked off their hair, and made them ^oswear by God, saying, Ye shall not give your daughters unto their sons, nor take their daughters unto your sons, or for yourselves.
26 Did not Solomon king of Israel sin by these things? yet ^pamong many nations was there no king like him, who was beloved of his God ; and God made him king over all Israel: ^qnevertheless, even him did outlandish women cause to sin.
27 Shall we then hearken unto you to do ^rall this great evil, to transgress against our God in marrying strange wives?
28 And one of the sons of ^sJoiada, the son of Eliashib the high priest, was son in law to Sanballat the Horonite; therefore I ^tchased him from me.
29 ^uRemember them, O my God, because they have ^vdefiled the priesthood, and the covenant of the priesthood, and of the Levites.
30 Thus cleansed I them from all strangers, and appointed the ^wwards of the priests and the Levites, every one in his business ;
31 And for the ^xwood-offering, at times appointed, and for the first-fruits. ^yRemember me, O my God, for good.

others, ought to be faithfully rebuked for their profanation of the sabbath: And yet, alas ! they are often either ringleaders in this sin, or connivers at such as are guilty. But magistrates ought to exert themselves in preventing open profanation of the Lord's day. Though their laws, or the sanctions attending them, cannot convert souls, they may oblige vice to hide itself as ashamed. And, did magistrates and ministers but faithfully concur in this matter, according to God's law, much good might be done.—Nations and churches quickly relapse into their former corruptions ; and into none more readily than unhal-lowed connections in marriage. And none are more daring in wickedness than unsanctified clergymen. But nothing more effectually entails misery on our offspring than profane marriages : and yet no commands of God, no warnings of providence, are sufficient to restrain men. The sharpest rebukes, corrections, and brands of infamy, are necessary to check abominations which have once become fashionable. And it is a great mercy if, in critical conjunctures, a magistrate or minister is helped so to behave in his station as that he may look up to God for a gracious reward.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—It is strange to observe how unacquainted with God's law many are, who have daily access to study it ! and, while the common people are ready to comply with his mandates, often the principal leaders in the church are the most base and treacherous adherents to wickedness. But no dignity must plead exemption from rebuke. They who sin before all should be put to shame before all. The higher a man's station, and the holier his office, the more scandalous are his sins. Reformers have need therefore of great zeal, prudence, and fearlessness of man. But what vile robbery of God, and wicked injury to the church, is the withholding of ministers' dues from them ! —A scandalous maintenance makes a scandalous ministry. Few ministers are willing to serve Christ in hunger and nakedness, and amidst reproach, peril, and sword. Most are even ready to betake themselves to farming or merchandize, or like worldly cares, when they have scarcely a temptation to it : but, when they first shew themselves unworthy of their maintenance, no wonder the people grudge it. Sacred is God's claim to his holy sabbath ; and heinous their guilt who dare presumptuously to rob him of his property. Nobles, as well as

In the two preceding books we have seen God's marvellous preservation of those Jews who returned to their own country. In this probably written by Mordecai, we have an account of his marvellous preservation of those who continued in the eastern parts of the Persian empire. Particularly (1) How God brought Esther to be queen, and Mordecai to be great, at the Persian court, to prepare them to be instruments of the intended deliverance ; chap. i. ii. vi. (2) Upon what provocation, and by what arts, Haman obtained an irrevocable order from the Persian king for the destruction of all the Jews ; iii. (3) The great distress into which the publishing of this order cast the Jews, particularly Esther and Mordecai ; iv. (4) The defeating of Haman's particular plot against Mordecai's life ; v. vi. vii. (5) The defeating of his general plot against Jewish nation ; viii. ix. (6) The joyful commemoration and happy issue of the deliverance ; ix. x.

Here, long before Haman's ruinous plot was projected, providence clears the way for Esther's advancement, that she might defeat it. (1) In his pride, Ahasuerus extravagantly feasts his nobles and other subjects in Shushan; 1—9. (2) In his passion, and by advice of his council, he divorces Vashti, his queen, because she came not to his presence, when he foolishly required it, to gratify his, perhaps, intoxicated, lords with a sight of her; 19—22.

NOW it came to pass, in the days of Ahasuerus, (this is Ahasuerus who reigned from India even unto Ethiopia, over an hundred and seven and twenty provinces),

2 That in those days, when the king Ahasuerus sat on the throne of his kingdom, which was in Shushan the palace,

3 In the third year of his reign, he made a feast unto all his princes and his servants; the power of Persia and Media, the nobles and princes of the provinces being before him:

4 When he shewed the riches of his glorious kingdom and the honour of his excellent majesty many days, even an hundred and fourscore days.

5 And, when these days were expired, the king made a feast unto all the people that were present in Shushan the palace, both unto great and small, seven days, in the court of the garden of the king's palace;

6 Where were white, green, and blue hangings, fastened with cords of fine linen and purple to silver rings and pillars of marble: the beds were of gold and silver, upon a pavement of red, and blue, and white, and black, marble.

7 And they gave them drink in vessels of gold, (the vessels being diverse one from another,) and royal wine in abundance, according to the state of the king.

8 And the drinking was according to the law: none did compel: for so the king had appointed to all the officers of his house, that they should do according to every man's pleasure.

9 Also Vashti the queen made a feast for the women in the royal house which belonged to king Ahasuerus.

10 ¶ On the seventh day, when the heart of the king was merry with wine, he commanded Mehuman, Biztha, Harbona, Bigtha, and Abagtha, Zethar, and Carcas, the seven chamberlains that served in the presence of Ahasuerus the king, 11 To bring Vashti the queen before the king with the crown royal, to shew the people and the princes her beauty: for she was fair to look on.

12 But the queen Vashti refused to come at the king's commandment by his chamberlains: therefore was the king very wroth, and his anger burned in him.

13 ¶ Then the king said to the wise men, who knew the times, (for so was the king's manner toward all that knew law and judgment:

14 And the next unto him was Carshena, Shethar, Admatha, Tarshish, Meres, Marsena, and Memucan, the seven princes of Persia and Media, who saw the king's face, and who sat the first in the kingdom);

15 "What shall we do unto the queen Vashti according to law, because she hath not performed the commandment of the king Ahasuerus by the chamberlains?"

16 And Memucan answered before the king and the princes, Vashti the queen hath not done wrong to the king only, but also to all the princes, and to all the people that are in all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus.

17 For this deed of the queen shall come abroad unto all women, so that they shall despise their husbands in their eyes when it shall be reported, The king Ahasuerus commanded Vashti the queen to be brought in before him, but she came not.

18 Likewise shall the ladies of Persia and Media say this day unto all the king's princes, which have heard of the deed of the queen. Thus shall there arise too much contempt and wrath.

19 ¶ If it please the king, let there go a royal commandment from him, and let it be written among the laws of the Persians and the Medes, that it be not altered, that Vashti come no more before king Ahasuerus; and let the king give her royal estate unto another that is better than she.

20 And, when the king's decree which he shall make shall be published throughout all his empire, (for it is great), all the wives shall give to their husbands honour, both to great and small.

21 And the saying pleased the king and the princes; and the king did according to the word of Memucan:

22 For he sent letters into all the king's provinces, into every province according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language, that every man should bear rule in his own house, and that it should be published according to the language of every people.

CHAP. II.

Records (1) The advancement of Esther to be queen of Persia instead of Vashti. According to the extravagant course taken to procure a queen, many stood candidates; 1—4: but Esther, a Jewish orphan, 5—7, recommended herself first to the chamberlain, 8—11, and then to king Ahasuerus; 12—17: who made her queen, 18, 19, 20. (2) The good service which Mordecai, Esther's cousin, did to the king, in discovering a plot laid for his life; 21—23.

to require what cannot be decently granted. And, when pride meets with pride, the issue is contention and ruin. It is easier to govern a kingdom than to rule our own proud spirit. But especially unhappy are those contentions between married persons which happen before company. The bad consequences of them may never be cured. It is indeed dangerous for kingdoms to indulge disobedience in the wives of rulers; but death or divorce ought to be the last means used to prevent it. Nor ought even the general welfare of kingdoms to be founded in injustice to particulars. But O the wisdom and power of God! he makes all the follies and wickedness, as well as the counsels, of mankind to work for his own glory and the good of his church and people.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—Insatiable is the nature of covetousness and ambition, which gathers to itself all people and countries, yet is nothing nearer contentment. Yea kingdoms, when once they are overgrown, are near the brink of decay and ruin. What vast expences do many sacrifice to the idol of pride, expenses which might have relieved many helpless families. In what awful manner shall those heathens, who would urge none to drink, rise up in judgment against those professed Christians who send round their healths, their toasts, and send round sin and death along with them! Yea, ordinarily hard drinking, however unforced, issues in the misery or shame of those who occasioned it. If persons be once intoxicated with liquor, how imprudent their conduct! they are ready to dishonour themselves, or their nearest relations, and AFTER these things, when the wrath of king Ahasuerus was appeased, he ^aremembered Vashti, and what ^bshe had done, and what was decreed against her.

² Then said the king's servants that ministered unto him, Let there be ^dfair young virgins sought for the king:

³ And let the king appoint officers in all the provinces of his kingdom, that they may gather together all the fair young virgins unto Shushan the palace, to the house of the women, ^{*}unto the custody of ^fHege the king's chamberlain, keeper of the women; and let their ^gthings for purification be given them:

⁴ And let the maiden which pleaseth the king ^hbe queen instead of Vashti. And the thing pleased the king; and he did so.

⁵ ¶ Now in Shushan the palace there was a certain ⁱJew, whose name was Mordecai, the son of Jair, the son of Shimei, the son of Kish, a Benjamite;

⁸ ¶ So it came to pass, when the king's commandment and his decree was heard, and when many maidens were gathered together unto Shushan the palace, to the custody of ^mHegai, that Esther was brought also unto the king's house, to the custody of Hegai, keeper of the women.

¹⁰ Esther had not shewed her people nor her kindred: for Mordecai had charged her that she ^oshould not shew it.

¹¹ And Mordecai ^pwalked every day before the court of the women's house, [†]to know how Esther did, and what should become of her.

¹² ¶ Now, when every maid's turn was come to go in to king Ahasuerus, after that she had been twelve months, according to the manner of the women, (for so were the days of their purifications accomplished; to wit, six months with oil of myrrh, and six months with sweet odours, and with other things for the purifying of the women);

¹⁴ In the evening she went, and on the morrow she returned into the second house of the women, to the custody of Shaashgaz, the king's chamberlain, which kept the concubines: she came in unto the king no more, except the king delighted in her, and that she were called by name.

¹⁸ Then the king ^wmade a great feast unto all his princes and his servants, even Esther's feast; and he made a ^{||}release to the provinces, and ^agave gifts according to the state of the king.

²² And the thing was ^eknown to Mordecai, who told it unto Esther the queen; and Esther certified the king thereof in ^fMordecai's name.

²³ And, when inquisition was made of the matter, it was found out; therefore they were both ^ghanged on a tree: and it was ^hwritten in the book of the chronicles before the king.

CHAP. III.

Here a black and mournful scene opens, which threatens destruction to all the people of God. (1) Haman, a wicked Agagite, is

Yea, it is comely when near relations have a tender and fixed regard for one another. Great prudence is sometimes necessary to enable us to discern what truths may be told, and what concealed, without bordering on falsehood. And the guardians of virgins ought to take the greatest care of them, especially if they are brought into slippery and dangerous situations. How strangely God brings treasonable plots to light! And it is an advantage for courts to have faithful attendants; and very honourable to risk our own life for the sake of our sovereign, even when we have no prospect of reward.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—What is done in haste and passion issues in bitter repentance and grief. And what odd shifts crafty courtiers will take to avoid coming under the power of a female whom they have injured. Yea, men will practise the greatest extravagance and wickedness to gratify their fleshly lusts. Surely we may here observe the need there was of the gospel, in order to reduce men to the observance even of the plainest laws of nature: and at the same time we discern the sovereignty of God in carrying on his wise and holy designs by means of the most absurd extravagance. What care he takes of orphans and fatherless! And great is the care which men ought to take of them.

Before Christ

made the king's favourite, and prime minister of state; 1. (2) Mordecai the Jew refuses to give him the honours which he demanded; 2—4. (3) To punish this affront, Haman, in his pride, resolves to destroy the whole Jewish nation; 5, 6. (4) Having, by casting of the lot, found out, as he thought, the most lucky day, he, by his malicious insinuations, obtains from king Ahasuerus an order to have them all massacred on it; 7—13. (5) This order is immediately dispersed through the whole Persian empire, to the great grief of the inhabitants of Shushan the metropolis, and of other Jews; 14, 15.

AFTER these things did king Ahasuerus promote Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, and advanced him, and set his seat above all the princes that were with him.

2 And all the king's servants, that were in the king's gate, bowed, and revered Haman; for the king had so commanded concerning him: but Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence.

3 Then the king's servants, which were in the king's gate, said unto Mordecai, Why transgressest thou the king's commandment?

4 Now it came to pass, when they spake daily unto him, and he hearkened not unto them, that they told Haman, to see whether Mordecai his matters would stand; for he had told them that he was a Jew.

5 And when Haman saw that Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence, then was Haman full of wrath.

6 And he thought scorn to lay hands on Mordecai alone: for they had shewed him the people of Mordecai: wherefore Haman sought to destroy all the Jews that were throughout the whole kingdom of Ahasuerus, even the people of Mordecai.

7 ¶ In the first month, that is the month Nisan, in the twelfth year of king Ahasuerus, they cast Pur, that is, the lot, before Haman from day to day, and from month to month, to the twelfth month, that is, the month Adar.

8 ¶ And Haman said unto king Ahasuerus, There is a certain people scattered abroad and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of thy kingdom, and their laws are divers from all people, neither keep they the king's laws; therefore it is not for the king's profit to suffer them.

9 If it please the king, let it be written that they may be destroyed: and I will pay ten thousand talents of silver to the hands of those that have the charge of the business, to bring it into the king's treasuries.

10 And the king took his ring from his hand, and gave it unto Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the Jews' enemy.

11 And the king said unto Haman, The silver is given to thee, the people also, to do with them as it seemeth good to thee.

12 Then were the king's scribes called on the thirteenth day of the first month, and there was written according to all that Haman had commanded unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors that were over every province, and to the rulers of every people of every province, according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language; in the name of king Ahasuerus was it written, and sealed with the king's ring.

13 And the letters were sent by posts into all the king's provinces, to destroy, to kill, and to cause to perish, all Jews, both young and old, little children and women, in one day, even upon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is the month Adar, and to take the spoil of them for a prey.

14 The copy of the writing for a commandment to be given in every province was published unto all people, that they should be ready against that day.

15 The posts went out, being hastened by the king's commandment, and the decree was given in Shushan the palace. And the king and Haman sat down to drink, but the city Shushan was perplexed.

CHAP. IV.

The Jewish nation was scarcely devoted to utter destruction when things here begin very orderly to work for their deliverance. (1) They and their friends lay to heart their danger, and bitterly lament it; 1—4. (2) Mordecai, refusing to be comforted, transmits to queen Esther an account of the plot, and urges her to intercede with the king for a revocation of the edict; and even to run the risk of addressing him uncalled upon so critical an occasion; 5—14. (3) After a solemn fast of three days, she promises to do so; 15, 16, 17.

WHEN Mordecai perceived all that was done, Mordecai rent his clothes, and put on sackcloth with ashes, and went out into the midst of the city, and cried with a loud and a bitter cry;

2 And came even before the king's gate: for none might enter into the king's gate clothed with sackcloth.

3 And in every province, whithersoever the king's commandment and his decree came, there was great mourning among the Jews, and fasting, and weeping, and wailing; and many lay in sackcloth and ashes.

4 ¶ So Esther's maids and her chamberlains came and told it her. Then was the queen exceedingly grieved; and she sent raiment to clothe Mordecai, and to take away his sackcloth from him: but he received it not.

5 Then called Esther for Hatach, one of the king's chamberlains, to whom he had appointed to attend upon her, and gave him a commandment to Mordecai, to know what it was, and why it was.

6 So Hatach went forth to Mordecai unto the street of the city, which was before the king's gate.

to obtain their own ends. Some men are very lavish of their money in the service of the devil, who would be absolute churls in the service of God. And crafty courtiers often make princes believe what is for their unspeakable hurt to be for their inexpressible advantage. But miserable is the state of nations when flattering sycophants can sway the sovereign to every thing horrid at their pleasure. And it is absurd for princes or others to riot in mirth and pleasure when the church is in danger, and the public perplexed. But there is no counsel nor device effectual against the Lord.—Even Haman's appeal to the lot, for marking out a lucky day for the destruction of the Jews, places it at so great a distance as to render their deliverance more glorious, and his own and their enemies' ruin the more ignominious.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—The very worst of men are often exalted to the highest honours: and exalted too to render their shame and ruin in the end the more conspicuous and dreadful. Often the cringing complaisance of others lays a snare for the truly godly. And there is need therefore of strong faith and ardent zeal to make us take a singular course at the hazard of all that is dear to us in this world. But no consideration must influence us to that which is evil. Of what intolerable pride, insatiable cruelty, and deep-rooted antipathy, to the people of God, are some men possessed! And often courtiers mark out the worthiest of the subjects as the objects of their resentments. The people of God are ordinarily loaded with the vilest calumnies, in order to encompass their ruin. And pride, malice, and revenge, met together, stick at nothing opportunity of answering them. If we have faith to trust in God, he will never fail us. But, if through unbelief we decline the path of duty, we may expect the danger which we sinfully decline. In times of great distress, solemn fasting and supplication to God are leading means of deliverance. And such as are confined ought to join in the work as well as the attenders in public. In all our distresses there is a throne of grace open, and a God who heareth prayer. When we are truly humbled under our sins we may hope that God will deliver us from our afflictions. And, while we desire the prayers of others, let us never forget to be importunate for ourselves. And having by the prayers of faith committed our way to the Lord, we may, with the greatest courage and resolution, venture on the most dangerous work to which in providence we have a call.

We left Haman at his cups and mirth, and Esther at her prayers and tears. Here we have (1) Esther in her joys smiled upon by the king, when she approached him uncalled, and favoured with his consent to her petition, that he and Haman should attend her banquet; 1-8. (2) Haman, amidst all his honours, terribly fretted at Mordecai's repeated refusal of honours to him; and in his rage, advised by his friends, preparing a gallows for him; 9-14.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—A good man severely feels and laments the heavy strokes of providence, whilst with humble resignation he submits to the rod: and it is peculiarly grievous to him that others should suffer for his sake. How brave is it to espouse the cause of God when it seems desperate and sinking! But unhappy are those courts where all are so abandoned to gaiety, pleasure, and mirth, that nothing serious or mournful dare enter. Yea, the pride or base fear of princes has introduced the most unaccountable laws, hurtful to themselves, families, and subjects. But how friendly is it when all the members of Christ, however great, sympathize with one another in their distress! God sometimes permits the most discouraging circumstance to exercise the faith and brighten the crown of the redeemed. And it is necessary to consider well the ends of providence in putting us into our stations, and to labour to let slip no

CHAP. VI.

Now it begins to appear how wisely the providence of God had deferred queen Esther's request for her people. (1) In that very night, providence, by a wonderful series of things, recommends Mordecai to king Ahasuerus' high favour; 1, 2, 3. (2) Haman, who had come in to incense the king against him, and hasten his ignominious death, is, to his inexpressible grief, made the instrument of the high honours done to him; 4—11. (3) From this beginning Haman's friends justly predict his ruin; 12, 13, 14.

ON that night *could not the king sleep: and he commanded to bring the book of records of the chronicles; and they were read before the king.

2 And it was found written, That Mordecai had told of Bigthana and Teresh, two of the king's chamberlains, the keepers of the door, who sought to lay hand on the king Ahasuerus.

3 And the king said, What honour and dignity hath been done to Mordecai for this? Then said the king's servants that ministered unto him, There is nothing done for him.

4 ¶ And the king said, Who is in the court? (Now Haman was come into the outward court of the king's house, to speak unto the king to hang Mordecai on the gallows that he had prepared for him.)

5 And the king's servants said unto him, Behold, Haman standeth in the court. And the king said, Let him come in.

6 So Haman came in: and the king said unto him, What shall be done unto the man whom the king delighteth to honour? (Now Haman thought in his heart, To whom would the king delight to do honour more than to myself?)

7 And Haman answered the king, For the man whom the king delighteth to honour.

8 ¶ Let the royal apparel be brought which the king useth to wear, and the horse that the king rideth upon, and the crown royal which is set upon his head:

9 And let this apparel and horse be delivered to the hand of one of the king's most noble princes, that they may array the man withal whom the king delighteth to honour, and bring him on horseback through the street of the city, and proclaim before him, Thus shall it be done to the man whom the king delighteth to honour.

10 Then the king said to Haman, Make haste, and take the apparel, and the horse, as thou hast said, and do even so to Mordecai the Jew, that sitteth at the king's gate: let nothing fail of all that thou hast spoken.

11 Then took Haman the apparel, and the horse, and arrayed Mordecai, and brought him on horseback through the street of the city, and proclaimed before him, Thus shall it be done unto the man whom the king delighteth to honour.

12 ¶ And Mordecai came again to the king's gate: but Haman hasted to his house mourning, and having his head covered.

13 And Haman told Zeresh his wife and all his friends every thing that had befallen him. Then said his wise men and Zeresh his wife unto him, If Mordecai be of the seed of the Jews, before whom thou hast begun to fall, thou shalt not prevail against him, but shalt surely fall before him.

14 And while they were yet talking with him came the king's chamberlains, and hasted to bring Haman unto the banquet that Esther had prepared.

CHAP. VII.

Here (1) Ahasuerus and Haman being set down to Esther's second banquet, she, encouraged by the king, presents her petition for the preservation of her own and her people's life; 1—4. (2) Upon the king's inquiry, she informs him that Haman, to the great hurt of the king, had fixed a plot for their utter destruction; 4, 5, 6. (3) Hereupon, after some further enagement, Ahasuerus gives orders to hang Haman upon the high gallows which he had prepared for Mordecai, which is done; 7—10.

SO the king and Haman came to banquet with Esther the queen.

2 And the king said again unto Esther on the second day at the banquet of wine, What is thy petition, queen Esther? and it shall be granted thee: and what is thy request? and it shall be performed, even to the half of the kingdom.

3 Then Esther the queen answered and said, If I have found favour in thy sight, O king, and if it please the king, let my life be given me at my petition, and my people at my request:

4 For we are sold, I and my people, to be destroyed, to be slain, and to perish. But, if we had been sold for bond-men and bond-women, I had held my tongue, although the enemy could not countervail the king's damage.

5 ¶ Then the king Ahasuerus answered and said unto Esther the queen, granted to them: or, if their eyes be debarred from rest, can employ their minds in sweet surveys of the annals of redeeming love! The natural law of gratitude, even towards the meanest inferior, is binding upon the conscience. But how little notice earthly princes take of their mean servants and friends, when they often know not whether their important services have been rewarded or not! Nay, often the greatest merits and best services are least rewarded at courts. That modesty and self-denial, which are of so great price before God, hinder men's preferment in this world; whilst forward flatterers thrust themselves into honours. The longer we have neglected to recompense favours done us, we should the more abundantly reward them at last. But pride and ambition are never satisfied with the most accumulated honours. And it is dangerous for courtiers to have too high an opinion of their own merits, and of their interest with princes, or to presume on more than they really have. Kings ought always to delight in honouring the deserving, and encouraging those that do well. But how confounding is it to proud spirits to be obliged to confer that honour on the distinguished objects of their hatred and contempt which they had carved out for themselves! Miserable comforters, in a day of distress, are those who flatter us in the time of our prosperity: and it is in vain to fight against those whom God protects. But none hurry faster downwards than falling favourites at courts. And sad presages of approaching ruin often seize upon sinners before destruction comes upon them to the uttermost.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Prudence and courage must be joined to our prayers if we would succeed in any work for God. And a plentiful harvest of joy shall they reap who sow in the tears and mourning of faith. They, who venture all for God, shall find him able to do for them unspeakably better than their most sanguine hopes. While himself is easily accessible, casting out none that come to him, he can dispose of the spirits of the haughtiest princes to whatever he pleases. But, in our dealing with great men, it is best first to conciliate their affection before we ask important favours; and to watch the favourable moment is the best way to ensure success. They, who are careful to please God, need neither fear nor care who are displeased with them for so doing. But pitiful and miserable is the condition of the proud. Easily they are puffed up with that which is intended to ruin them, and unmeasurably fretted at that which could never hurt them. Their pride and discontentment create them numberless miseries, and rob them of the enjoyment of their mercies; and the curse of God is often visible upon them in the midst of all their great possessions. But it is unhappy for proud spirits to have rash and imprudent advisers who spur them on to the most debasing resentment. And base are those minds which promote revenge, even the lowest, with alertness and pleasure.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—How unsearchable are God's judgment and his ways past finding out! By the most insignificant trifles can he promote his most important purposes. Happy are those who have the sleep of his beloved

6 And Esther said, || The adversary and enemy is this wicked Haman. Then Haman was †afraid before the king and the queen.

7 ¶ And the king, arising from the banquet of wine in his †wrath, went into the palace garden: and Haman †stood up to make request for his life to Esther the queen; †for he saw that there was evil determined against him by the king.

8 Then the king returned out of the palace garden into the place of the banquet of wine: and Haman was †fallen upon the bed whereon Esther was. Then said the king, Will he force the queen also before me in the house? As the word went out of the king's mouth, they †covered Haman's face.

9 And †Harbonah, one of the chamberlains, said before the king, Behold also the †gallows, fifty cubits high, which Haman had made for Mordecai, who †had spoken good for the king, standeth in the house of Haman. Then the king said, Hang him thereon.

10 So they †hanged Haman on the gallows that he had prepared for Mordecai. Then was the king's wrath †pacified.

CHAP. VIII.

Haman himself being hanged, his plots to enrich himself and destroy the Jews, are defeated. (1) His estate being confiscated, is given to Esther and Mordecai; 1, 2. (2) Esther earnestly intercedes for the reversal of the murderous edict against her nation; 3—6. (3) Because the Persian laws did not admit of a reversal, a new edict is published, empowering the Jews to stand in their own defence; 7—14. (4) This occasions great joy to the Jews and all their friends; 15—17.

ON that day †did the king Ahasuerus give the house of Haman, the Jews' enemy, unto Esther the queen. And Mordecai †came before the king; for Esther had told what he was unto her.

2 And the king took off †his ring, which he had taken from Haman, and gave it unto Mordecai. And Esther †set Mordecai over the house of Haman.

3 ¶ And Esther spake yet again before the king, and †fell down at his feet, †and besought him with tears to put away the †mischievous of Haman the Agagite, and his device that he had devised against the Jews.

4 Then the king †held out the golden sceptre towards Esther. So Esther arose, and stood before the king,

5 And said, If it please the king, and if I have found favour in his sight, and the thing seem right before the king, and I be †pleasing in his eyes, let it be written to reverse †the letters devised by Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, †which he wrote to destroy the Jews which are in all the king's provinces:

6 For how can I †endure to see the evil that shall come unto my people? or how can I endure to see the destruction of my kindred?

7 ¶ Then the king Ahasuerus said unto Esther the queen, and to Mordecai the Jew, Behold, †I have given Esther the house of Haman, and him they have hanged upon the gallows, because he laid his hand upon the Jews.

8 Write ye also for the Jews, as it liketh you, †in the king's name, and seal †it with the king's ring: for the writing which is written in the king's name, and sealed with the king's ring, †may no man reverse.

9 Then were the king's scribes called at that time in the †third month, that is the month Sivan, on the three and twentieth day thereof; and it was written (according to all that Mordecai commanded) †unto the Jews, and to the lieutenants, and the deputies and rulers of the provinces which are from India unto Ethiopia, an hundred twenty and seven provinces, unto every province according to the writing thereof, and unto every people after their language, and to the Jews according to their writing, and according to their language.

10 And he wrote †in the king Ahasuerus' name, and sealed †it with the king's ring, and sent letters by post on †horseback, and riders on mules, camels, and young dromedaries:

11 Wherein the king granted the Jews which were in every city to gather themselves together, and †to stand for their life, to destroy, to slay, and to cause to perish, all the power of the people, and province that would assault them, both little ones and women, and to †take the spoil of them for a prey,

12 Upon †one day in all the provinces of king Ahasuerus, namely, upon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is the month Adar.

13 The copy of the writing for a commandment to be given in every province was †published unto all people, and that the Jews should be ready against that day to †avenge themselves on their enemies.

14 So the posts that rode upon mules and camels went out, being †hastened and pressed on by the king's commandment. And the decree was given at Shushan the palace.

15 ¶ And Mordecai went out from the presence of the king in †royal apparel of blue and white, and with a great crown of gold, and with a garment of fine linen and purple: and the city of Shushan †rejoiced and was glad.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—God often strangely animates his enemies in power to encourage his people's requests for favour. And a tender regard for natural life at stake makes us very earnest in supplicating deliverance: and surely then we ought to be much more earnest for the life of our own and others' souls. The most ruinous and wicked projects are often laid to gratify men's sinful lusts. And, though persecution of the people of God is not only impious, but even exceedingly detrimental to the state, where nothing can repair the loss of pious and industrious subjects, how often is it practised! Men are ready often to startle at the mention of that very wickedness to which they had given their consent! And sin generally becomes vexatious and burdensome at the last. That is often done thoughtlessly, with which, on a moment's cool reflection, we cannot but be shocked. Many seem amazed at the wickedness of others, who overlook the same, or a greater, in themselves. And accomplices in guilt quickly become the bitterest enemies one to another. How dejected in adversity are those who were most proud in prosperity. The most insolent enemies of God's people may quickly be glad to bow at their feet. And every motion creates suspicion against a man whose character is once proved infamous and abandoned. All hands will eagerly help down with falling courtiers; and the ruin of the wicked comes upon them in an instant! Yea, the enemies of God's church are astonishingly taken in their own craftiness, and have their pride brought down, their persecution punished, and their mischief returned on their head.

CHAP. IX.

Now the critical day of the contrary edicts is come in the Persian empire! REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—This world is but a changing scene. The favour even of kings is precarious; and riches make to themselves wings, and fly away. Men often lay up wealth, little thinking to whom it shall at last pertain, whether to a friend or a foe. The ten thousand talents, which were lately offered as the price of the Jews' blood, now become the property of them whose lives were marked out for a prey. How just is the judgment of God; and with what care should we make sure those riches which will not be left behind, but will go with us into another world! Surely then the lives and interests of God's people ought to lie the nearest to our hearts! And no advancement must make us to forget our poor relations. It is proper to present our petitions to God or men with earnestness, and attended with the utmost modesty. Though we have justice on our side, it becomes us, as inferiors, to use entreaty. Men's mischief often survives them. They murder, even after their death, by the laws which they have made, the projects which they have set on foot, and the writings and sentiments which they have propagated. But absurd and entangling are those laws which have pride for their source and basis. And there is great need to hasten the relief when men's lives are in danger: for when we have done wrong we cannot too quickly prevent the mischievous consequences of it. God quickly turns his people's mourning into joy. And his alarming providences in their favour, effectually determine others to join them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—How strangely sinners are infatuated to their own destruction; and obstinate revenge is deaf to all admonition. Fight they will, though both the hand of God and men be lifted up against them! But great numbers are friends or enemies to the people of God, just as the smiles of great men wind about: and pitiful is the work which the wicked have in hand when the terrors of God and the terrors of great men concur to dismay them. We may make the boldest attempts when not only great men favour us, but the great God fights for us. And it is glorious when, in the most desperate war, the laws of self-denial, humanity, and pity, are strictly regarded. Never should the people of God appear selfish, worldly, or covetous. And, if we receive signal mercies from God, our thankful returns ought to be quick and speedy: while they are yet fresh in our minds, and the impressions of them most sensible. Nor ought astonishing deliverances, and their circumstances, ever to be forgotten. Remembrance of such ought to encourage us in every subsequent distress. Yet there is great need to beware, lest what is well intended at first should, by degrees, become an occasion of wickedness. Nothing more purifies the heart, and adorns religion, than holy joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ. And nothing more pollutes the heart, and reproaches religion, than carnal mirth and sensual pleasure.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—It is a great mercy, in an arbitrary government, when the weakness or wickedness of the monarch is balanced by the good qualities of the minister of state. They only are truly great whose power and dignity are employed for the public good. But alas! how unsubstantial the whole pomp, grandeur, and wealth, of this world, which so soon pass away!

THE BOOK OF JOB.

The book of Job was perhaps written by Elihu, or Moses, or rather by Job himself; and the first two chapters, and part of the last, by Moses or Samuel. It is, for the substance of it, a true history of real facts. Job is represented as really existent as Noah or Daniel; Ezek. xiv. 14. 20; and as a patient sufferer who obtained a joyful deliverance; Jam. v. 11. It is an ancient history. The length of Job's life; the rare use of the divine name of JEHOVAH, and frequent use of SHADDAI, or Almighty and All-sufficient; the remarkable remains of religion in the land of Uz and the places about; the mentioning of no other idolatry but that of worshipping the sun and moon; the never making any plain allusion to the dreading of the Red sea, or to the appearance of God to the Israelites in the wilderness, which lay at no great distance from the land of Uz; strongly tempt one to think that Job's distress might be about the time when Moses lived in the land of Midian, or perhaps an hundred years before. We have here (1) The history of Job's sufferings, and his remarkable patience under them, issuing in a sad mixture of human weakness, in his cursing the day of his birth, chap. i. ii. iii. (2) A hot dispute between him and Eliphaz, Bildad, and Zophar, his friends, Whether remarkable judgments be certain tokens of the wickedness of those upon whom they are inflicted. The aim of Job is to bewail his own affliction, complain of its weight, justify himself from gross wickedness or hypocrisy, and prove that wicked men often prosper in this world, while the godly are exposed to manifold calamities. The scope of his friends is to prove, that no good man is subjected to extraordinary calamities, but that the most wicked men ordinarily are; and hence to condemn Job as an hypocrite, because of his uncommon troubles; iv—xxxi. (3) A decision of the dispute; first by Elihu, another of Job's friends, and then by God himself. The aim of Elihu is to leave Job's state undetermined, or even to admit it to be good; and only to charge him with his misbehaviour under his trouble as too arrogant and self-justifying, especially when he had to do with a God of infinite sovereignty, greatness, power, wisdom, and justice. The scope of Jehovah's speech is to convince Job of his meanness, and of his own infinite power, greatness, and extensive influence; and thereby lead him into a sense of his iniquity, in insisting so much upon his own justification, and complaining so unguardedly of the providence of God:—and at last he justifies him, in opposition to his three friends, in his character and sentiments; xxxii—xlii. (4) The whole issues in Job's great honour and redoubled prosperity; xliii. In this book we have at once a most noted encouragement to patience, and a system of the most ancient believers' apprehensions and faith concerning the wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness, and sovereignty, of God; and concerning his works of creation and providence; concerning the original and actual corruption of mankind; concerning redemption by Christ, and the usefulness of good works; and, in fine, concerning the resurrection of the dead and eternal life.

Inform us (1) Of Job's great piety in general, and in respect to his children; 1, 5. (2) Of his uncommon prosperity and wealth; 2, 3, 4. (3) Of the malice of Satan against him, and the permission granted him by God to try his constancy in religion; 6—12. (4) Of the surprising calamities which by Satan's agency, through robbers, lightning, and whirlwind, quite ruined his estate, and killed his servants and children; 13—19. (5) Of Job's patience and holy resignation to the will of God under these troubles; 20—22.

THERE was a man in the land of Uz, whose name was Job; and that man was perfect and upright, and one that feared God and eschewed evil.

2 And there were born unto him seven sons and three daughters.

3 His substance also was seven thousand sheep, and three thousand camels, and five hundred yoke of oxen, and five hundred she asses, and a very great household; so that this man was the greatest of all the men of the east.

4 And his sons went and feasted in their houses, every one his day; and sent and called for their three sisters to eat and to drink with them.

5 And it was so, when the days of their feasting were gone about, that Job sent and sanctified them, and rose up early in the morning, and offered burnt-offerings according to the number of them all; for Job said, 'It may be that my sons have sinned, and cursed God in their hearts. Thus did Job continually.

6 ¶ Now there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the LORD, and Satan came also among them.

7 And the LORD said unto Satan, Whence comest thou? Then Satan answered the LORD, and said, From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it.

8 And the LORD said unto Satan, Hast thou considered my servant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God and escheweth evil?

9 Then Satan answered the LORD, and said, Doth Job fear God for nought?

10 Hast not thou made an hedge about him, and about his house, and about all that he hath, on every side? thou hast blessed the work of his hands, and his substance is increased in the land.

11 But put forth thine hand now, and touch all that he hath, and he will curse thee to thy face.

* Ch. 2. 5. Is. 5. 25. Ezek. 25. 7, 13, 16. * Gen. 26. 11. Ruth 2. 9. Ps. 105. 15.

† Heb. if he curse thee not to thy face.

12 And the LORD said unto Satan, Behold, all that he hath is in thy power; only upon himself put not forth thine hand. So Satan went forth from the presence of the LORD.

13 ¶ And there was a day when his sons and his daughters were eating and drinking wine in their eldest brother's house:

14 And there came a messenger unto Job, and said, The oxen were plowing, and the asses feeding beside them,

15 And the Sabeans fell upon them, and took them away; yea, they have slain the servants with the edge of the sword; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

16 While he was yet speaking there came also another, and said, The fire of God is fallen from heaven, and hath burned up the sheep, and the servants, and consumed them; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

17 While he was yet speaking there came also another, and said, The Chaldeans made out three bands, and fell upon the camels, and have carried them away; yea, and slain the servants with the edge of the sword; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

18 While he was yet speaking there came also another, and said, Thy sons and thy daughters were eating and drinking wine in their eldest brother's house;

19 And, behold, there came a great wind from the wilderness, and smote the four corners of the house, and it fell upon the young men, and they are dead; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

20 Then Job arose, and rent his mantle, and shaved his head, and fell down upon the ground, and worshipped, 21 And said, Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither: the LORD gave, and the LORD hath taken away; blessed be the name of the LORD.

22 In all this Job sinned not, nor charged God foolishly.

CHAP. II

Under the former trial Job had proved his own integrity, and the falsehood of Satan's accusation of him. Here (1) Satan, again assembling with the saints, ministers, or angels of God, moves for another trial of Job, that might touch his person; 1—5. (2) Permitted by God, Satan smites Job with an universal, painful, and loathsome disease; 6, 7, 8. (3) Employed by Satan, Job's own wife tempts him to a desperate cursing of God: but he bravely resists the temptation; 9, 10. (4) His friends, who come to comfort him, are so shocked with his trouble that they cannot speak to him for seven days; 11, 12, 13.

declarations with curses and imprecations. And when God, for holy ends, lengthens Satan's chain against his own people, how inexpressibly forward is he in carrying on mischief to the utmost extent of his permission! There is need then, in our happiest estate, to rejoice with trembling. How heavy are sore troubles when they come from every quarter, and on every thing, one upon the neck of another; and the last the most dreadful. Happy is it when we are graciously weaned from created comforts, of which we may be so quickly, and in so awful a manner, deprived. But no affliction should indispose us for God's worship. The more trouble we feel, the more need we have of his grace to support us. And the views of our death should wean us from perishing things. All that we have is God's gift, lent or given to us; and, whatever we lose, enough is left to deserve our thankfulness. Nay, a spirit of meekness bestowed is a greater blessing than all that God can take from us. But, nevertheless, how powerful are the influences of God's grace, that can render his people composed, and heartily resigned to his will, under the sharpest trials! In all my troubles let me view God's hand, and acquiesce in his will: and let them all drive me into the arms, the bosom, of my God.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—God can easily raise up instances of remarkable piety, even among wild Arabs, and amidst wealth: and he delights to propagate the fame of such as are remarkably pious. It is a mercy for children to have parents deeply and constantly concerned for the glory of God and the good of their souls. However lawful feasting and mirth may be on some occasions, there is always need after it to examine our hearts and conduct, and to supplicate the pardon of our mistakes in it. How closely Satan attends saints, ministers, and angels, particularly when they present themselves before God! We have great need to be always sober and vigilant, when our adversary the devil goeth about as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour. And many, not less odious to God in their tempers and designs than Satan, thrust themselves into the assemblies of God's people, in their house of prayer. The noted favourites and servants of God are peculiarly the objects of Satan's malice. But precise are the limits by which he is restricted by God, who knoweth all his designs. And they, who approve themselves faithful servants to God, will find him faithful to them in preserving them from the snares of the devil. It is very common for Satan and his instruments to reproach the people of God as selfish and hypocritical in their religion: and almost as common to ascertain their

JOB'S RESIGNATION.

J. B. C. L. 21

London: Printed for W. Kelly & Co. Paternoster Row.

Before Christ
cir. 1520.

A GAIN *there was a day when the *sons of God came to present themselves before the LORD, and Satan came also among them to present himself before the LORD.

2 And the LORD said unto Satan, From whence comest thou? And *Satan answered the LORD, and said, From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it.

3 And the LORD said unto Satan, Hast thou considered *my servant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God and escheweth evil? and *still he holdeth fast his integrity, although thou movedst me against him †to destroy him *without cause.

4 And Satan answered the LORD, and said, *Skin for skin, yea, all that a man hath, will he give for his life.

5 But *put forth thine hand now, and touch his bone and his flesh, and he will *curse thee to thy face.

6 And the LORD said unto Satan, Behold, he is in thine hand; †but save his life.

7 ¶ So *went Satan forth from the presence of the LORD and smote Job with sore boils, from the sole of his foot unto his crown.

8 And he *took him a potsherd to scrape himself withal; and he *sat down among the ashes.

9 ¶ Then said *his wife unto him, Dost thou still retain thine integrity? *curse God, and die.

10 But he said unto her, Thou speakest as one of the *foolish women speaketh: what! shall we *receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil? *In all this did not Job sin with his lips.

11 ¶ Now, when Job's three friends heard of all this evil that was come upon him, they came every one from his own place; *Eliphaz the Temanite, and *Bildad the Shuhite, and *Zophar the Naamathite: for they had made an appointment together *to come to mourn with him and to comfort him.

12 And, when they lifted up their eyes afar off, *and knew him not, they *lifted up their voice, and wept; and *they rent every one his mantle, and sprinkled dust upon their heads toward heaven.

13 So they *sat down with him upon the ground seven days and seven nights, and none *spake a word unto him: for they saw that his grief was very great.

CHAP. III.

Hitherto we have heard of the piety and patience of Job. Now we must hear of his impatience, and find him in great passion.

(1) Complaining that ever he was born; and imprecating destruction, darkness, oblivion, sorrows, and curses on the day of his birth; 1—10. (2) Complaining that he did not die as soon as he was born, that so he might have rested in the grave, where nobles, prisoners, poor, and rich, find an equal repose; 11—19. (3) Complaining that his life was continued when he was now become extremely miserable, and longed earnestly for death.

A FTER *this opened Job his mouth, and *cursed his day.

2 And Job *spake, and said;

3 *Let the day perish wherein I was born, and the night in which it was said, There is a man child conceived.

4 Let that day be *darkness; let not *God regard it from above, neither let the light shine upon it.

5 Let darkness and the *shadow of death *stain it; let a cloud dwell upon it; *let the blackness of the day terrify it.

6 As for that night, let darkness seize upon it; †let it not be joined unto the days of the year; let it not come into the number of the months.

7 Lo, let that night be *solitary, let no joyful voice come therein.

8 Let them curse it *that curse the day, who are ready to raise up *their mourning.

9 Let the stars of the twilight thereof be dark; let it *look for light, but have none; neither let it see *the dawning of the day:

10 Because it *shut not up the doors of my mother's womb, nor hid *sorrow from mine eyes.

11 *Why died I not from the womb? why did I not give up the ghost when I came out of the belly?

12 Why *did the knees prevent me? or why the breasts that I should suck?

13 For now should *I have lain still, and been quiet; I should have slept; then had I been at rest,

14 *With kings and counsellors of the earth who built *desolate places for themselves;

15 Or with princes that had gold, who *filled their houses with silver;

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—How restless, impudent, steady, and active, is the devil in prosecuting his malice against the saints! Disappointment but sharpens his rage, and makes him return more furious to the attack: and, though proved a liar, he persists in his accusations. It is honourable and necessary to resist him stedfast in the faith. But, above all, great is the mercy that we have Jesus as our advocate to repel his bold accusations. To what astonishing extent doth God, for his own wise ends, permit Satan to afflict his dearest saints; nay, his Son! But glorious conquerors are they, whose mind, in humble abasement, corresponds with their lowest or most loathsome circumstances of body. Heavy indeed is the trial, when those, who ought to be our sympathizing directors in trouble, become our tempters to the most horrid sins;—to rage and disquiet;—to blasphemy;—to trespass more and more against the Lord; and when those, who come to comfort us, have their mouths shut! But happy is he who endureth temptation: when he is tried, he shall receive a crown of life! Happy is he who abhors to parley with vile suggestions, and who receives troubles as the love-messengers of his God! God can make our friends useless to us, even when they are so kind as to come to comfort us, and so wise as to prefer the house of mourning to the house of mirth. What frightful changes disease can make on us! Why then should we be proud of vile bodies? But worthless are those friends who hasten from the chamber of disease, and are glad to fly from the melancholy door: an awful proof that they are unmindful of, and unprepared for, death. Let then no health but what Christ is, no friend but God in him, be the trust, the boast, of my soul! In the time of need all others take to themselves the wings of the morning, and fly away. Miserable comforters, nay, ensnaring tormentors, are they all!

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. III. Ver. 1, 2. After these seven days were finished Job gave vent to that grief, which had so long stupified him, in the most bitter lamentations, and in imprecating mischiefs upon the day of his conception and birth. 3 Let, said he, the day of my birth, and the night of my conception, be utterly forgotten, as if they had never been. 4 Let that unhappy day be covered with horrible darkness, and turned into night. And never let one ray of day-light appear thereon. 5 Let the most frightful darkness, and the most extensive and thick clouds, wholly possess it. Let black burning vapours, and the most fearful disasters render it terrible to men. 6. Let gross darkness, or absolute extinction, seize upon the night of my conception. 7. Let that wretched night be as barren of every thing comfortable as a flinty rock: and let men never meet together on it for feasting or mirth: nor let a single whisper of joy be heard on it. 8. Let the most skilful mourners, who imprecate woe upon the days of uncommon disasters, effectually curse it by name as the direful mother of monsters, redoubled terrors, and mischiefs. 9. Let nothing but the most frightful darkness seize upon it, without a single glimmering of a star, or the smallest dawning of a long-looked for morning; 10. Because it did not bury me in my mother's womb, and thus secure me from those miseries which I now feel. 11. What a wretched misfortune was it that I did not die in the womb, in the birth, or immediately after! 12. What a misfortune that they, who received me from the womb, did not let me fall on the ground, and dash out my brains; or that the nurse did not refuse to give me suck! 13. For thus should I have lain still as a ship at anchor; I should have felt none of those miseries which I now endure: but had lain quiet and undisturbed in the grave; 14. Equal to kings and great men, who lie alone in the tombs which they built for themselves; 15. And to princes, who in

CHAP. IV.

Job's patience under his troubles had obliged Satan to confess that he was an upright fearer of God. Now Job's friends, instigated by Satan, attempt to prove, from his uncommon troubles, that certainly he had been but an hypocrite. After they had, no doubt, conversed of the point among themselves, Eliphaz, who it seems was the eldest, or of chief quality, begins the attack in a kind of answer to what Job had said. (1) After bespeaking a patient hearing, he charges Job with being an hypocrite, because the instructions and comfort which he had formerly administered to others in trouble could not now direct or support himself; 1—6. (2) To make good his charge, he maintains that it is always distinguished wickedness, cruelty, oppression, or the like, which brings on distinguished judgments; 7—11. (3) He corroborates what he had said from a vision which he had had, reminding him of the incontestible purity and justice of God, and of the weakness and sinfulness of men; 12—21.

3 Behold, 'thou hast instructed many, their life had heaped up riches and wealth; 16. Or like a concealed abortive infant, which was never numbered among men. 17. There, in the grave, the most wicked can hurt no one; and they, who had been restlessly tossed and wearied with violence, enjoy the profoundest safety and rest. 18. There the condemned prisoners and enslaved captives enjoy the most perfect ease, and do not so much as hear the voice of an oppressor or exactor of labour. 19. There every person is on an equal level of power and greatness; and the servant is as free as his master. 20. Is it not strange that a man should be forced to live when his miserable condition makes him heartily abhor it; 21. Who in vain wishes for death, and seeks it more eagerly than the greatest riches; 22. And who would more gladly leap into his grave than the covetous miser can meet with a rich vein of silver; 23. Being so oppressed, and shut up with God's indignation, that he knows no other way to turn himself! 24. For my meat doth but sustain a miserable life, which is filled up with heart-sinking sobs, and loud roarings on account of my troubles. 25. For whatever dreadful things I fear, they immediately come upon me, notwithstanding all my care to prevent them. 26. In my prosperity I never securely trusted in my riches, nor indulged myself in carnal ease; yet that has not preserved me from being miserable. And in this distress I have had no rest; and yet further billows of tossing troubles are still coming upon me.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—How dreadful are the days, the ages, in hell, on which heaven frowns, and which earth forgets, joy forsakes, and curses attend! The best, when left to themselves, may fall into the greatest folly and guilt; become mad in their wishes, liberal of their curses, cruel to their friends, and unthankful to their God! But how much better is the never-cursed day of our spiritual and eternal birth than that of our natural! How helpless are men when they come into this world: But kind is the care of providence about them. How levelling are the strokes of death! None of our earthly honours dare enter the grave. Happy only those in it who die in the Lord! What relief from trouble, what rest, what liberty, they enjoy! But sad is the case when inflicted troubles, and want of prospect of deliverance, make even saints to long for death, and bid it welcome. To quarrel with the life which God bestows is to sin against our own mercies. Fretfulness and impatience at our lot can only aggravate our sufferings. And to reflect on God's providence is to accuse himself. It is our happiness that our time is in God's hand. The more irksome this life is, we should be the more solicitous to prepare for a better. And they only are fit to die who are content to live; and, satisfied under every burden, wait cheerfully the Lord's pleasure.

CHAP. IV. Then Eliphaz, a descendant of Esau, replied, ver. 2. Thou wilt doubtless be incensed by the slightest attempts to offer a reply: but who can restrain himself from speaking the truth upon such a pressing occasion? 3. Behold, in former times thou hast, with great pains and success, instructed many under trouble, and corrected their mistakes; and by thy kind and pertinent advices, hast mightily encouraged the dispirited. 4. By thy discourse thou hast encouraged and supported those whose hearts were ready to sink; and hast settled them who trembled under the burdens of their adversity. 5. But now, when fallen into their condition, thou canst not practise thy own lessons, but faintest, and art struck with consternation. 6. Is not this the time to exercise thy piety, thy confidence in God, thy hope of blessings, and thy integrity of conversation? Or shall all thy religious appearances turn out a mere nothing? 7. Too good reason hast thou to suspect thyself an hypocrite: for think if thou canst remember one instance of an innocent and godly man who was ever punished with such remarkable strokes of divine vengeance as thou art. 8. For my part, aged as I am, I have always observed that it is the wicked devisers and practisers of horrible crimes who reap the fruit of their works in such a manner. 9. By the blasting and burning influence of God's fearful judgments, they are more suddenly, or more gradually, reduced to misery and ruin. 10. And though, like thee, and thy sons, they be oppressors, fierce and strong as lions, their power and influence are broken, and themselves afflicted. 11. The mightiest tyrants, and their posterity, are in due time stripped of their ill-gotten wealth and violently reduced to misery and servitude. 12—16. Moreover, in a vision, which exceedingly terrified me, I heard a spirit, whose form I could not comprehend, amidst profound silence all around, say, 17. Shall a wretched man be more righteous than God or justified before him? or even the most excellent man be pure before his Maker? 18. Behold! he put no firmness in his heavenly ministers, and can put no trust in them; and in his angels he has placed no ground of boasting, and can perceive defect of service and readiness to slide. 19. How then can he perceive perfection in mortal and sinful men,

Next, Eliphaz appeals to his own and other saints' experience, as testifying (1) That, though affliction be the common lot of mankind, 6, 7, (as our version reads), yet it is distinguished sins that brings on distinguished judgments; 1—5. (2) That in our trouble we ought, and if saints we shall, humbly apply ourselves to God, as our sovereign, almighty, and just Deliverer, able and ready to help us; 8—16. (3) That afflictions, rightly borne, in deep humility, and attended with prayer, issue happily, in respect of outward things; 17—27. In the two latter verses he advises Job to accept the punishment of his iniquity, and repent of his sin, which had occasioned it; and so to hope for a return of his temporal prosperity.

8 I 'would seek unto God, and unto God would I commit my cause:

9 'Who doth great things and unsearchable; marvellous things without number:

whom he can crush as easily as, or before the face of, a moth! 20. They are pricked, and bruised in a mortar of trouble, through their whole life; and quickly perish for ever, without any oppressing them, or regarding their fall. 21. Is not all their power and excellency a plucked-up nothing, is it not destroyed together? They pine and melt away for want of, and without ever attaining, wisdom, or any solid and well-connected good. And, though their dignity be ever so great, and their posterity ever so numerous, they die like so many beasts, which have no understanding of their latter end.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Such as are in sore trouble ought to be spoken to and dealt with in great tenderness. But affection must not hinder, but promote, faithfulness in our reproofs and admonitions. We must not for fear of offending, suffer sins upon our brother. And it is very edifying, when such as are noted in their profession lay out themselves for the instruction and encouragement of others in the Lord's way; warning the unruly, supporting the weak, and comforting the feeble minded. Yet, through the corruption of our nature, it is far easier to give good counsel than to take it. Extremely trying is the situation when Satan employs the saints' godly friends to make them raise their hopes, and acknowledge themselves hypocrites. The charge of hypocrisy is most frequently laid against the people of God, and is one of the hardest to be borne. But exceeding sinful is the indulgence of a censorious spirit. We must never judge of a man's state from a particular failing, or from his outward lot. Though tyrannical oppressors, and other sinners, be recompensed in this life, yet no man knows either love or hatred by all that is before him. What singular intimacy with God might saints enjoy, if duly weaned and withdrawn from the things of this life! Were our tempers duly holy, even our dreams might be means of our noted fellowship with God. O how men's spirits shrink under visits from the other world! What then must be the terrible majesty, infinite holiness and equity, of God himself! Insignificant and impure are all creatures in comparison of him. Mean are men while they live; and wretched in death, if driven away in their sins. But for senseless, sinful, dying, worms to impeach the wisdom, goodness, or equity, of JEHOVAH's dispensations of providence, or to plead their own worth and excellency in his presence, is the boldest presumption. How strange is it that, amidst so many and remarkable warnings of an entrance into eternity, most men should live entirely unconcerned about it! And scarcely less strange that even good men should so often wrest God's oracles to serve their own humours. This oracle, which Eliphaz heard, gave ground to rebuke Job for his murmuring, but none to condemn him as an hypocrite.

CHAP. V. Call now, if there be indeed any that will answer this oracle in thy favour! And to which of the saints canst thou turn as an advocate for thy cause, or as an example of thy condition? 2. For the just vengeance and holy jealousy of God shall destroy foolish and wicked men: and their own rage at providence, and envy of other men's happiness, shall render them miserable. 3. Even when I have seen wicked men flourishing in apparently fixed prosperity I have judged them unhappy, and predicted their fall, and quickly seen them and their families rendered miserable. 4. Their posterity are exposed to great dangers and calamities: they are oppressed and ruined in their law-suits, or are openly punished, while there is none to deliver them. 5. The hungry vagabonds eat up their crop; and, notwithstanding all the means used to secure it, or the danger to the taker, the sweeping scourge, and savage robber, such as the Chaldeans or Sabeans, carry off their whole substance and wealth. 6, 7. Affliction never comes to men without the just influence of God, and the deserving influence of men's sin, even though it be altogether common and natural for men to meet with trouble. And men, outrageous in iniquity, and abandoned to gross impiety, shall not long flourish on the earth; but if, as born in it, a man be obstinate in gross wickedness, the flaming thunderbolts of God's vengeance shall fly aloft to destroy him. 8. Truly therefore, were I in thy case, I would humbly address myself unto God, and refer myself to his disposal. 9. I would refer myself to God, who works so many things, the nature, causes, and immediate ends of which we do not understand, and so is able to help or punish as he pleases. 10. To God, who waters the earth with rain, and who causes the fountains to spring and rivulets to run along the streets and fields; 11. That by plentiful crops he may enrich and dignify men of low condition, and exalt those that mourn in sordid baseness and misery to an extended happiness and safety; 12. To God, who defeats the craftiest designs of subtle men to raise or enrich themselves, that it is not in their power to execute the schemes which they have most cunningly contrived; 13. Who makes their own devices to produce what they studied to avoid, and to hurry them, contrary to their expectation, into dreadful ruin. 14. So that, when every thing seems plain and prosperous, they suddenly stumble into mistakes and misery; and, in the very midst of their wisdom and felicity, unexpected danger seizes upon them. 15. By which means God delivers those who fear his name from the open fury, and from the treacherous flatteries and calumnies of these powerful oppressors; 16. That, by observation and experience of this, the poor and oppressed may be encouraged to hope in God for help and deliverance, and wicked men may be confounded and silenced.—17. And, moreover, God makes all the afflictions of his people to work remarkably for their good; therefore never complain of his corrections, but esteem them as a distinguished favour. 18. For he not only makes us grieved, and pained with trouble, for our good, but quickly removes his rod, and bestows his comforts. 19. When manifold troubles are inflicted on others, thou shalt escape, if thou refer thyself to God's disposal. Nay, be thy own troubles as many as they will, they shall do thee no real hurt. 20. God shall supply thee with food in times of famine, and protect thee in the day of battle. 21. No malicious reproachers or false witnesses shall be able to hurt thee; and thou shalt be secure amidst the depopulations of countries. 22. No pestilence, nor famine, nor ravenous beast shall be allowed to hurt thee, or even mar thy cheerfulness. 23. The stones of the field, as if in league with thee, shall neither hurt thy person nor crop; and even the wild beasts shall submit to thee as thy conquered servants. 24. Thou shalt by experience, find thy dwelling, family, and substance, wherever it is, in safety and quietness: and thou shalt be enabled to manage thy household-affairs without any allowed iniquity; and

CHAP. VI.

Not convinced by what Eliphaz had said with such assurance, Job here proceeds to justify himself, and condemn his friend's reasoning. (1) He pleads that he had just reason to complain, when God's hand was so heavy upon him, and all his comforts were withdrawn, and such insipid hints suggested to him; 1—7. (2) He repeats his passionate wishes, that a sudden stroke of death might speedily deliver him from his miseries, under which he could not support himself; 8—13. (3) He reproves his friends for wretchedly disappointing his hopes of comfort by them; and for their uncharitable censures and unkind treatment of him; 14—30.

BUT Job answered and said, 2 Oh that my grief were thoroughly weighed, and my calamity laid in the balances together!

3 For now it would be heavier than the sand of the sea: therefore my words are swallowed up.

4 For the arrows of the Almighty are within me, the poison whereof drinketh up my spirit: the terrors of God do set themselves in array against me.

5 Doth the wild ass bray, when he hath grass? or loweth the ox over his fodder?

6 Can that which is unsavoury be eaten without salt? or is there any taste in the white of an egg?

7 The things that my soul refused to touch are as my sorrowful meat.

8 O that I might have my request, and that God would grant me the thing that I long for!

9 Even that it would please God to destroy me; that he would let loose his hand, and cut me off!

10 Then should I yet have comfort; yea, I would harden myself in sorrow:

let him not spare; for I have not concealed the words of the Holy One.

11 What is my strength, that I should hope? and what is mine end, that I should prolong my life?

12 Is my strength the strength of stones? or is my flesh of brass?

13 Is not my help in me? and is wisdom driven quite from me?

14 To him that is afflicted pity should be shewed from his friend; but he forsaketh the fear of the Almighty.

15 My brethren have dealt deceitfully as a brook, and as the stream of brooks they pass away;

16 Which are blackish by reason of the ice, and wherein the snow is hid:

17 What time they wax warm they vanish: when it is hot they are consumed out of their place.

18 The paths of their way are turned aside; they go to nothing, and perish.

19 The troops of Tema looked, the companies of Sheba waited for them.

20 They were confounded, because they had hoped; they came thither, and were ashamed.

21 For now ye are nothing; ye see my casting down and are afraid.

22 Did I say, Bring unto me? or, Give a reward for me of your substance?

23 Or, Deliver me from the enemy's hand? or, Redeem me from the hand of the mighty?

24 Teach me, and I will hold my tongue: and cause me to understand wherein I have erred.

25 How forcible are right words! but what doth your arguing reprove?

26 Do ye imagine to reprove words, and the speeches of one that is desperate, which are as wind?

27 Yea, ye overwhelm the fatherless, and ye dig a pit for your friend.

prosperity. But, if these animals complain in their distress, why should I be hindered? 6. Can ever such empty and unsavoury discourse as yours, without any seasoning of grace, prudence, and moderation, be either acceptable or edifying to one in such distress! 7. Those grievous afflictions, which I was once afraid to touch, I must now in anguish endure; and yet I have nothing afforded me for comfort but your loathsome and empty discourses. 8. O that God would quickly fulfil my request for death, and grant me that which I earnestly hope and long for! 9. Even that, without leaving me to languish in this miserable condition, he would, with one effectual stroke, put an end to my present life. 10. The near views of this would comfort my spirit, and strengthen me to endure the severest pains: to obtain this, I would gladly endure what he pleases; as I am conscious that I have not hypocritically denied, disregarded, or concealed, his truths. 11. My strength is so spent, that I can neither hold out nor expect recovery. I neither have, nor hope for, comfort in this life, that I should desire it; nor do I apprehend any hurt in death, that I should fear it. 12. My strength is quite incapable of bearing such troubles; nor can I but feel their terrible pressure. 13. And, though I cannot deliver myself, am I therefore destitute of solid reason and true virtue? Have not I the testimony of a good conscience? Do not I know my own integrity, and the nature and degree of my sufferings, better than you? 14. Surely he who is in distress should meet with pity and compassion! and he, who, instead of pitying a friend under great affliction, censures and reproaches him, shews that he has not the true fear of God, and is in a fair way to apostatize from his service. 15—20. My dearest friends promised me help and comfort; but failed me in a time of need; as torrents, which in winter make a great noise, and run with a violent stream, when the melted ice and snow fall thick into them; but in the summer, when water is much needed in these hot and parched countries, are quite dried up: the water is so diverted into other channels, exhausted by the dry desert, or exhaled into the empty air, that one can scarcely tell where they ran: and the Arabian travellers, who expected to refresh themselves with the water, find themselves shamefully and miserably disappointed. 21. Just so are ye deceitfully disappointing me in my adversity, when I most need your help. Instead of comforting me, you, seeing my distress, shrink from me, as if you were afraid I should prove burdensome or disgraceful to you. 22, 23. But, since I never asked ought of you for either my subsistence or deliverance, can you not afford me a few comfortable words? 24. If you can convince me of any mistake, I shall submit, cease my complaints and hearken to your counsels: 25. For solid arguments have a marvellous power to convince and persuade; but your reproofs are to no purpose, as they proceed wholly on mistakes. 26. To what purpose rail ye at words, or critically censure the speeches of a man desperate with trouble? 27. Mean ye to oppress me, when so helpless and destitute, with your bitter calumnies and revilings; and designedly to add to my shalt take an account of them without disappointment. 25. And, however bare thou now appearest, as the earth in winter, thou shalt find thy posterity very numerous, prosperous, and beautifully connected. 26. And, when thou hast arrived at an uncommon age, thou shalt enter into thy grave with an easy smile, and shouts of joy, as one fully ripened for the glories of heaven. 27. Doubt not of this; for we have thoroughly examined the point, and find it as I have said. Hear, consider, and practise it, for thy present and everlasting advantage.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—The best of men quickly grow confident in their own mistakes. And it is the greatest discouragement to one in sore trouble to find no saint in his case or sentiment. But how foolish and silly are the greatest of sinners! Their own wickedness fearfully corrects them, and their backslidings ruin themselves, their families, or property. It is stupid and heathenish to think that any thing happens to us by chance. And, the more we are acquainted with the sinfulness of our nature, we shall see the less reason to murmur at our afflictions. Under sore troubles it is necessary to search out and remove the sinful cause, and to turn all our fretful murmurs into humble supplications. How encouraging is it to have an Almighty, condescending, and gracious, God to apply to! No craft, no strength, no plots of devils or men, need discourage us when we have him on our side. If our mind be brought down to our circumstances, let us never quit our hope: it is in a faithful promiser. Our malignant opposers may for a while open their mouths wide against us, and their oppressing hand may lie heavy on us, but quickly their arms shall be broken, and their lips sealed up in death. But great and holy caution is necessary under trouble, that we may neither be averse to it, nor think ill of it, nor overlook and disregard it. For when blessed of God they are remarkably advantageous. They but open God's way for bestowing his distinguished favours. And those who dwell under the shadow of the Almighty shall enjoy the surest protection, inward quietness, peace with God and his creatures, comfort in their families and seed, and joy and honour in their death. Let us then attend to, and profit by, every truth we hear.

CHAP. VI. But Job replied to Eliphaz. 2. O that my oppressive trouble, allotted me in God's indignation, and my extensive, unavoidable, and sinking, calamity and sorrow, were but impartially and thoroughly weighed! 3. It would be found so heavy as to hinder, and far surpass, complaints: therefore are my words full, of burning rage and tossing disquiet. 4. For grievous pains in my body, and impressions of God's wrath on my conscience, by their violence, quite dispirit my soul, and waste my life. His terrible judgments shut me up on every side, and set themselves as in battle array against me. 5. You do no more than brute beasts when you are easy and unconcerned amidst your

CHAP. VII.

Still justifying his request for death, here (1) Job complains of the useless, restless, and hopeless condition of his life, and the noisome state of his body; 1-6. (2) Expostulating with God for a sudden death, he pleads that his life was vanishing in a hopeless and useless manner; 6-10; that his misery was so great he could not support himself under it; 11-16: and that it was below God thus to contend with him; that he would act like himself in pardoning his iniquity and immediately slaying him; 17-21.

IS there not *†*an appointed time to man upon earth? are not his days also like the days of an hireling?

2 As a servant earnestly desireth the shadow, and as an hireling looketh for the reward of his work; misery? 28-30. Consider therefore my case and words more deliberately and impartially: you can easily detect me if I speak false, or maintain a bad cause. Fairly try my cause over again, and you will find me innocent of the hypocrisy and wickedness which you have laid to my charge. Have I uttered aught that is false or wilfully wicked? or am I so stupid that I cannot distinguish that which is vain, false, or impious, from that which is true, gracious, and edifying.

3 So am I made to possess months of vanity, and wearisome nights are appointed to me.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—How insupportable is inward trouble, either felt or feared; and, of all our evils, none more intolerable than a sense of God's wrath. They, in general, are partial judges of other men's troubles who live in ease and plenty themselves. And it adds greatly to afflictions to meet with nothing under them but uncharitable censures and insipid comforts from our Christian friends. It is difficult to keep either heart or lips aright under such complicated troubles. Ungoverned passion grows more violent when it meets with rebukes and checks. But it is most unbecoming when it gets into our very prayers to God, and by our folly turns them into sin. There is great need of always living faithful for God, since we know not how soon troubles may render us weary of our life. And those, who are by grace prepared for another world, can see little in this to make them fond of staying in it. But it is not self-hardening, but humility, under trouble that makes us ripe for deliverance. Alas! how often dejected spirits preach despair to themselves, and refuse to be comforted; forgetting how God can strengthen or recover for his own glory, as he pleases! It is a mercy then to have wisdom and grace, that will remain with us in the very worst of times. Unjust, yea impious, is the want of compassion to those who are under heavy afflictions. And it is bitter to find the friends on whom we depended prove faithless. Yet created comforts commonly disappoint us, and become gall and wormwood, when we come to have most need of their encouraging and supporting influence. Upright souls are averse to be a burden to their friends. And the importunity of want often provokes the abuse of the uncharitable. But how contrary to sense—to reason—to pity—to patience—to equity—to a desire after truth—do friends act when God makes them scourges to us! Truth is a mighty weapon when wielded by the weakest arm. And they who have truth on their side will never shun the light, but court inquiry: and nothing then can be more unreasonable than to refuse them a patient hearing.

CHAP. VII. Is there not a warfare of trouble, and the set time thereof appointed, for wretched man upon earth? Are not his days fixed and determined, and full of toil and labour? 2. As a servant wearied with the toils of the day desires a place of refreshment, and as an hireling looks for the end and reward of his work, so I long for death, to deliver me from my miseries, and bring me to my glorious reward: 3. For I have now allotted me for my por-

10 He shall return no more to his house, neither shall his place know him any more.

11 Therefore I will not refrain my mouth; I will speak in the anguish of my spirit; I will complain in the bitterness of my soul.

12 Am I a sea, or a whale, that thou settest a watch over me?

13 When I say, My bed shall comfort me, my couch shall ease my complaint;

14 Then thou scarest me with dreams, and terrifiest me through visions;

15 So that my soul chooseth strangling, and death rather than my *†*life.

16 I loathe it; I would not live away: let me alone, for my days are vanity.

17 What is man, that thou shouldest magnify him, and that thou shouldest set thine heart upon him?

18 And that thou shouldest visit him every morning, and try him every moment?

19 How long wilt thou not depart from me, nor let me alone, till I swallow down my spittle?

20 I have sinned; what shall I do unto thee, O thou *†*Preserver of men? why hast thou set me as a mark against thee, so that I am a burden to myself?

21 And why dost thou not pardon my transgression, and take away mine iniquity? for now shall I sleep in the dust; and thou shalt seek me in the morning, but I shall not be.

CHAP. VIII.

Lately Job's messengers had followed one another with evil tidings; now his friends follow one another with their harsh censures. Satan had employed those to deprive him of his integrity; now he employs these to deprive him of the comfort of it. Bildad proceeds upon the same plan as Eliphaz, and attempts to convince Job (1) That he and his children had certainly been punished for some distinguished wickedness; 1-4. (2) That, if he would now truly repent, God would quickly restore his prosperity; 5, 6, 7. (3) That it was common for God to extinguish the joys and hopes tion months of wretchedness and vanity, without any solid comfort: and in the night, when others rest from their sorrows, I can but restlessly increase mine. 4. I am scarcely laid down on my bed when, through agony and pain, I wish to be up again; and I am continually tormented both in body and mind: 5. For my body is overspread with ulcers, filled with worms, and crusted over with scabs, which have made such clefts in my skin, that I am become loathsome to myself. 6. My happy days have quickly run over in a moment, and there is no hope that I shall recover them. 7. Remember, O God, how short and unsubstantial my life is, though once it was pleasant; and, when once dead, I shall never return to my possessions and worldly prosperity. 8. My friends shall never more see me in this mortal state. Thou dost but frown upon me, and I vanish out of this world. 11. Since there is no hope that my condition will be better in this world, therefore I will give some vent to the extremity of my sorrow, by complaining. 12. Am I so strong and unruly that nothing but such strong chains of affliction can tame, rule, or restrain me? 16. Either cease from afflicting me, or from preserving me in life; for my days have no need to be made more miserable and fading than they are of themselves. 17. What is man, that thou shouldest honour him so much as to contend with him, and set thyself against him, in rendering him so miserable? 18. And that thou shouldest visit him with new afflictions every morning, and try him with new strokes every moment? 19. If thou art so patient and kind to the generality of mankind, why wilt thou not turn away thy displeasure from me, and at least give me time to breathe? 20. I cannot satisfy thy justice for my sins, O thou Observer of men: yet why hast thou set me up as a mark for thy vengeance to shoot at and run against, so that I am a burden to myself and to thee? 21. Why wilt thou not forgive me my sin, and at least release me so far from its punishment, that I may die? for if thou come not speedily to help me it will be too late.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—Our life hath its bounds and form unalterably fixed by God's decree. But how short-lived and hard is the condition of mankind on earth! Surely then we ought to be humble, whose bodies are so vile, and our days so empty and short! And sweet must the heavenly rest be to those who get thither through so much tribulation. It is proper therefore to die with affections quite weaned from this world, and set on things above. But if the saints' afflictions can be so terrible, so constant on earth, what must hell be to the wicked for evermore! How terrible to be driven thither in our wickedness! to fall into the hands of an angry God! The views then of our near approaching death ought to animate our confessions of sin, our cries for pardon of it, and deliverance from it. It is a mercy that the blood of Jesus Christ cleanses from all sin, the most unadvised and desperate expostulations with God not excepted: and, sprinkled with this, we may cheerfully bid adieu to this valley of tears and sorrows.

of wicked hypocrites, such as he was; 8—19. (4) That, if God did not speedily appear for his relief, it would be uncontestedly evident that he had been but an hypocrite; 20—22.

- THEN answered Bildad the Shuhite, and said,
- 2 How long wilt thou speak these things? and how long shall the words of thy mouth ^{be} like a strong wind?
- 3 Doth God pervert judgment; or doth the Almighty pervert justice?
- 4 If thy children have sinned against him, and he have cast them away ^{for} their transgression;
- 5 If thou wouldest seek unto God betimes, and make thy supplication to the Almighty;
- 6 If thou wert pure and upright; surely now he would awake for thee, and make the habitation of thy righteousness prosperous.
- 7 Though thy beginning was small, yet thy latter end should greatly increase.
- 8 For inquire, I pray thee, of the former age, and prepare thyself to the search of their fathers:
- 9 (For ^{we} are but of yesterday, and know nothing, because our days upon earth are a shadow):
- 10 Shall not they teach thee, and tell thee, and utter words out of their heart?
- 11 Can the rush grow up without mire? can the flag grow without water?
- 12 Whilst it is yet in his greenness, and not cut down, it withereth before any other herb.
- 13 So are the paths of all that forget God; and the hypocrite's hope shall perish:
- 14 Whose hope shall be cut off, and whose trust shall be a spider's web.
- 15 He shall lean upon his house, but it shall not stand: he shall hold it fast, but it shall not endure.
- 16 He is green before the sun, and his branch shooteth forth in his garden.

- 18 If he destroy him from his place, then it shall deny him, saying, I have not seen thee.

19 Behold, 'this is the joy of his way; and 'out of the earth shall others grow.

20 Behold, God 'will not cast away a perfect man, neither will he 'help the evil doers:

21 Till he fill thy mouth with laughing and thy lips with rejoicing.

22 They that hate thee shall be clothed with shame; and the dwelling place of the wicked shall come to nought.

CHAP. IX.

We have here Job's answer to Bildad, in which he speaks honourably of God, humbly of himself, and feelingly of his troubles, without any reflections upon his opponents. (1) He asserts the exact justice of God; and proves it from his infinite wisdom, power, and sovereignty; 1—13. (2) He acknowledges himself unable to contend with God, either in law or in battle; 14—21. (3) He maintains that men's characters are not to be judged of by their outward condition; 22, 23, 24. (4) He complains of the greatness of his trouble; and that his confusion of mind was such, that he knew not what to say or do before an infinite and frowning God; 25—35.

THEN Job answered and said,

2 I know it is so of a truth: but how should man be just ^{with} God?

3 If he will contend with him, he cannot answer him ^{one} of a thousand.

4 He is wise in heart and mighty in strength: who hath hardened himself against him, and hath prospered?

5 Who removeth the mountains, and they know not: who overturneth them in his anger.

6 Who shaketh the earth out of her place, and the pillars thereof tremble.

7 Who commandeth the sun, and it riseth not: and sealeth up the stars.

CHAP. VIII. Not without a mixture of mistake, rage, and pride, Bildad replied, 2. How long wilt thou outrageously pour forth what is dishonourable to God and unprofitable to men; and brutishly violent, noisy, and presumptuous? 3. Can God, who has no reason to fear the displeasure or court the favour of any, wretchedly and wickedly deal unjustly to man? 4. Suppose he has fearfully punished thy children for their wickedness, 5. Yet thy humble, speedy, and penitent, supplication to him for mercy would meet with due regard. 6. And wert thou thyself sincere in heart, and upright in conduct, he would all of a sudden bestir himself to help thee, and restore thee and thy family to its wonted peace and prosperity. 7. And, however low and contemptible thy condition is at present, he would render thy happiness and glory more eminent than ever. 8—10. And, as you look on us as mere ignorant upstarts, carefully inquire of the most aged and best informed, and they will assure you that God never punished but for sin, and never rejected a penitent person. 11, 12. And that, as rushes and flags, without abundant moisture, quickly wither of their own accord; 13, 14. So, without true piety and a real enjoyment of the divine favour, the highest professions of religion, and the greatest prosperity and most extensive hopes of happiness, will quickly issue in apostasy, infamy, disappointment, and self-wrought wretchedness. 15. The wicked man may attempt to rely on his friends, family, or wealth, and may exert himself to the utmost to retain what he has, but to no purpose. 16. The external smiles of providence may render his prosperity remarkable for a little time; and his family, wealth, and honour, may greatly flourish and increase. 17. He may appear deep-rooted amidst outward enjoyments; and, in height of glory and apparent stability, may vie with the loftiest buildings of marble; 18. But quickly shall his native soil swallow him up into ruin; and he, and all that he had, shall quickly disappear and be forgotten. 19. Such is the mad and unsubstantial joy of the wicked, and the issue of their flourishing prosperity, while others are exalted, from meanness and poverty, to fill their place in the world. 20. For—mark it as a certain and important truth—the mighty God will never despise, or loathe, or refuse to help and comfort, an upright saint; nor will he strengthen, support, or deliver, evil-doers. 21, 22. Wert thou perfect, or thoroughly penitent, he would bless thee till his favours had overwhelmed thee with raptures of thankful praise: they who hate thee, and rejoice at thy present troubles, should be confounded at thy restoration, while they and theirs should irrecoverably perish.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—Men readily follow one another in running down those who are singularly distressed. And much sooner do they perceive other men's sins marked in their judgments than their own. But in every affliction it is always wise to have recourse to God for help. His blessing can soon make a remarkable change for the better in our lot. And, if he knows our integrity, it matters little, though men esteem us as hypocrites. God often gives his people indirect hints of the kindness which he intends for them, by words never intended for that purpose by the speakers. And the knowledge and experience of others ought carefully to be improved for our instruction and comfort. What a common sin among professors is hypocrisy and dissimulation! What a sad source of it is forgetfulness of God! But the hope of hypocrites will put the most fearful cheat upon themselves. Though it flourishes awhile, it perishes at last. And the things of nature around us suggest the most important admonitions, did we but consider them aright. The most precious truths are often abused, through the misapplication of them, to make the heart of the righteous sad and the souls of the wicked to triumph. Let me therefore never be a harsh judge of others, and never too mild with respect to myself. Let me never judge of people's character by their outward lot. It is not time, but the last judgment and eternity, that will reduce all things to apparent order.

CHAP. IX. Immediately Job replied, 2. I know indeed that God is righteous, and that he ordinarily punishes the wicked and favours the godly. But what frail man can, in your sense, be just before God? 3. If God please to call him to a strict account, he cannot answer for one of a thousand of his thoughts, words, or actions. 4. And, while God is infinitely righteous, his knowledge, wisdom, and power, are so unbounded, that it is impossible for any to harden himself in rebellion against him and peacefully prosper. 5—10. Against him, who can in a moment remove and overturn the largest mountains,—who can shake the earth out of its place, and shatter its rocky foundations,—who can at pleasure forbid the rising of the sun or shining of the stars,—who at pleasure spreads out or dispels the clouds, and triumphantly treads upon the swelling waves of the sea, all being subject to his will,—who makes and governs all the starry constellations which appear in the north or south parts of our world; 10. And does works unsearchably marvellous and unnumbered. 11. In his providential dispensations he can pass before and attack me; can quickly pass by and rush upon me, and continually set his works before me; and yet I cannot perceive him, nor understand them. 12. Behold! he can suddenly or forcibly snatch away whatever a man has, and none can resist his infinite power, or make him to restore it, or even bring him to account for his conduct. 13. If he, the object of our adoration, continue the displays of his terrible majesty and almighty wrath in the infliction of just punishments, the most proud, powerful, and fierce, helpers and avengers must yield to his influence, and confess their inability to relieve us. 14. How then can I, a poor, weak, unbefriended wretch, answer him in judgment; or choose, give sense to, and order, my words in debating with him! 15. Though my case were ever so just, nothing would become me, but to make humble supplications to my tremendous and omniscient Judge, who contends with me. 16. And, if he had graciously accepted my supplication, and even promised to grant the request of such a poor and wretched creature as I am, I could not believe it. 17. Since, without my being conscious of any uncommon wickedness, he breaks me to pieces by a fiery whirlwind of his judgments, and multiplies my painful afflictions. 18. He allows me no interval from trouble, no ease under it, but fills me with the most tormenting troubles, and bitter griefs. 19. Should I be inclined to dispute with him by force, lo! he is infinitely more powerful than I. Should I be inclined to cite him at law, who, higher than he, could be our judge, and appoint us a time or place of hearing? 20. Though I am guilty of no allowed crime, yet his majesty and holiness would make me to condemn myself: and, though I be no hypocrite, my attempts to justify myself before him would prove me perverse. 21. Though I were ever so perfect, I durst not, on my own consciousness, debate the matter with him, nor insist that my soul were really such in his view; but I would undervalue, disapprove, and loathe, my practice before his infinite holiness; and would rather lose my life than dare to contend with one of boundless majesty. 22. All that I have affirmed and insist upon is this important truth, that God, in sovereignty, fearfully afflicts the righteous as well as the wicked. 23. When the most fearful calamities fall upon and suddenly kill men, he often, with seeming pleasure, for their trial, grievously afflicts the most innocent. 24. Who but he prospers the wicked, and gives the earth to be possessed and ruled by such as blind judges, by bribery or misinformation, or condemn them to death for their righteous decisions? 25, 26. I myself am an instance of his sovereign management. My days of prosperity have quickly passed away without substantial comfort; and my natural life, amidst inexpressible misery, posts on to an end, more swiftly than the boat of paper reeds is hurried down the rapid stream, or the hungry eagle alights upon his prey. 27, 28. If I attempt to forget my calamities, lay aside my mournful looks, pluck up my spirits, and cause my face to shine with a smile, my tormenting pains and sorrows terrify my mind: and I find by experience that thou, O God, wilt not remove my trou-

26 They are passed away as the swift ships; as the eagle that hasteth to the prey.

27 °If I say, I will forget my complaint, I will leave off my heaviness, and °comfort myself;

28 I °am afraid of all my sorrows, I know that thou °wilt not hold me innocent.

29 If I be wicked, why then labour I °in vain?

30 If I °wash myself with snow water, and make my hands never so clean;

31 Yet shalt thou °plunge me in the ditch, and mine own clothes shall °abhor me.

32 For he is °not a man as I am, that I should answer him, and we should come together in judgment.

33 Neither is there ||any °day's-man betwixt us, that might °lay his hand upon us both.

34 Let him take his rod away from me, and let not his fear °terrify me:

35 Then would I speak, and not fear him; †but it is not so with me.

CHAP. X.

Here Job, in great confusion, continues his complaint to God, perhaps hardly knowing all that he had said. (1) He complains that the hardships which God had put upon him did not well become his infinite goodness, knowledge, and power; 1—7. (2) He comforts himself that he was in the hands of that God who had formed him, and pleads for his pity; 8—13. (3) He again complains of God's severity towards him, in strictly marking his sins, and fearfully punishing him for them; and that his life seemed given him to render him miserable; 14—19. (4) He prays for death, in hopes that it would comfort him; 20—22.

MY soul is °weary of my life; I °will leave my complaint upon myself; °I will speak in the bitterness of my soul.

2 I will say unto God, Do not °condemn me; °shew me wherefore thou contendest with me.

ble, as if I were innocent. 29. I see that I shall be held and punished as one that is wicked.—Why then do I thus fatigue myself in vindicating my innocence? 30. Though I could wash myself by the most effectual vindications, and thoroughly purge my practice with purity itself, 31. Thou, O infinitely holy God, wouldst plunge me into depths of noisome afflictions and of filthy ulcers; and my discovered wickedness and manifest troubles should hold me forth as quite abominable. 32. For God is so infinitely above me, that I cannot, dare not, enter into a debate or plea with him. 33. Neither, indeed, is any umpire or arbiter to be found who could order us to silence, or oblige us both to stand to his award. 34, 35. If he would remove from off me this heavy trouble, and not terrify me with the dread of his power and majesty, then would I freely speak, without any slavish fear of him, in my own vindication; for I am not such an hypocrite as you allege. But, alas! sorrows and fears oppress my spirit.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—O the infinite greatness of God! And what is man, so mean, so sinful, that he should be mindful of him! How incapable of advancing a justifying righteousness before him! Dreadful is the case of those devils and men who harden themselves against him. His excellencies are plainly marked in his works of creation and providence. Happy are they whose God is JEHOVAH! and inexpressibly miserable his most powerful and proud opposers! In incontestible sovereignty he often afflicts the righteous, and prospers the wicked. And it is hard to complain much of our troubles without mingling somewhat reproachful to God. Let therefore the thoughts of my own meanness, sinfulness, and mortality, keep my mind low and silent before him. It is his mercy, not my merits, that must be my only plea. Conceit of my sinless perfection, and of the worth of my righteousness, will but manifest my ignorance of the spirituality of his law, and of my own corruption. Let me always stand in awe of him and the power of his wrath. Let me tenderly pity such as are wounded in spirit, and earnestly pray for them, as they can sometimes scarcely pray for themselves. Let me always entertain kind and honourable thoughts of God; as hard thoughts of him are inlets to much sin and sorrow. But, above all, let me bless him that Jesus Christ is the Mediator between himself and me, and that my soul is not under extreme anguish and disquiet. And, while I walk in the light of the Lord, let me rejoice therein, but rejoice with trembling. Who knows what change a night or a day may bring forth!

CHAP. X. My soul bursts asunder with weariness of being detained in the cords of natural life. I will therefore permit my complaints to vent themselves freely, be the issue what it will. I will speak fervently in the bitter anguish of my soul. 2. I will say to God, Do not condemn and punish me as a wicked man, but cause me to know for what sin or reason I am so peculiarly afflicted,

CHAP. XI.

Job's wounds were still bleeding and sore running; but Zophar, another friend, proceeding on the same plan with the two former, pours more vinegar into them. (1) He exhibits a high charge against Job, as guilty of pride and falsehood in justifying himself; 1—4. (2) He appeals in this matter to God; and begs that he would take Job to task, and convince him of his unerring wisdom, inviolable justice, unsearchable perfection, uncontrollable power, and of his exact cognizance of mankind; 5—12. (3) He assures Job that, upon his repentance and reformation, God would restore him to his wonted prosperity and safety; 13—19: but, if he continued wicked, it was in vain to expect it; 20.

THEN answered Zophar the Naamathite, and said,

2 Should not the multitude of words be answered? and should ^a a man full of talk be justified?

3 Should thy ^b lies make men hold their peace? and, when thou ^c mockest, shall no man make thee ashamed?

4 For thou hast said, ^d My doctrine is pure, and I am clean in thine eyes.

5 But, ^e O that God would speak, and open his lips against thee; allowed a short reprieve from trouble. 21, 22. Before I go to the dark region of the grave, where there is no orderly succession of day and night, summer and winter, labour and rest, but one perpetual night of gross darkness?

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—To be weary of life, before God send us our discharge, is to be unfaithful to the post which he hath given us to maintain. In suffering times we should inquire into their cause, that we may answer their end; and chiefly plead for the removal of our sin, and of the condemnation on account of it. But those, who are awed by the majesty of God, often attempt easing their mind in sinful resentments. And under extraordinary troubles it is hard to forbear impeaching the goodness or equity of God by sinful murmurings. The most humble prayers are often mingled with the most peevish and proud expostulations. Neither the views of his omniscient discernment of all our sins, nor the almighty power of his correcting hand, can awe our souls into quiet submission. Nothing but the largest supplies of grace can bridle the tongue in such a case. But, when God hides himself as a Saviour, his work, as a Maker and Preserver, should lead us to admiration and thankfulness. When he changes his way towards us we are to believe that he hath reasons hid for it in his heart, which will be shortly manifested. Alas! how sin stares the best of men in the face when God lays them under heavy troubles! Happy are they whose iniquities are pardoned, and in whom the fruit of afflictions is to take away the sin that procured them. But if sins be great, troubles heavy, life and its comforts short, death and its darkness near, let us give ourselves unto prayer. Every trouble is a call from God; and every moment of reprieve from death is an opportunity to prepare for it.

CHAP. XI. Then Zophar the Naamathite replied, 2. Dost thou think to stop our mouths with a multitude of words, or by thy talkativeness to persuade us thou art innocent? 3. Must no one confute thy false allegations concerning thine own innocence or God's dispensations of providence? And, when thou hast so insolently scoffed at God and thy friends, must none expose thee to shame by pointing forth thy wickedness? 4. Wilt thou dare pretend to God himself that thou art quite pure and unspotted in thy principles and practice? 5. Truly my earnest wish is, that he would fully and freely debate the cause with thee, and confute thy mistakes; 6. And that he would shew thee the hidden methods of his providence, and reasons of his wise counsels, which infinitely transcend thy conceptions, and make thee to know that thou hast deserved far more affliction than has been laid upon thee. 7. Darest thou pretend, by thy inquiries, fully to know the secrets of his providence, or the

3. Is it either pleasant, profitable, or honourable, to thee, or is it just and equal, that thou shouldst spoil me of all I had, and thus load me with tormenting troubles? or that, with an enraged mind, thou shouldst condemn the work of thine hands as good for nothing but to be a spectacle of misery? or that, by thy providential dispensations, thou shouldst appear to confirm the thoughts, or encourage the practices, of the wicked? 4—6. Are thy views of my conduct and state short-sighted, biassed, or malignant? Are thy days so short that thou must punish me in this sudden and severe manner all at once? Are thy researches after truth tedious, that thou shouldst thus by tortures attempt to force a confession of guilt from me? 7. Thou canst not but know that I am no hypocrite, and that if thou punish none can deliver me from thy judgments. 8. By thy creating power I have been curiously and elaborately bound together with sinews; bound together in my whole frame: and wilt thou, as a raging lion, utterly tear me asunder, and swallow me up? 9. Remember that thou, as my Potter, hast formed me out of the clay; and wilt thou, in this sudden and fearful manner, so quickly reduce me to dust by death? 10. Didst thou not, in the womb, purify my substance as milk, and curdle and compact the liquid matter of which my body was framed? 11. Didst thou not cover my inward parts with skin and flesh, and curiously fence and weave me together with bones and sinews? 12. Didst thou not grant me the entrance and continuance of life? And hath not thy providential care and kindness preserved me from dangers and death? 13. And, notwithstanding, hadst thou a secret purpose thus to afflict me?—I find, by experience, that it was then determined with thee, 14. That, if I should sin, thou wouldest watch over me to punish me, without the least patience, pardon, or pity. 15. That, if I should be wicked, fearful judgments should fall upon me; and, though I should live holy and innocent, I should nevertheless be oppressed with trouble. I am full of confusion and shame, on account of my uncommon circumstances; therefore look with pity on my inexpressible misery. 16. Shall my trouble still increase, and exalt itself over me? Wilt thou follow me close with plagues, as a fierce lion hunteth his prey? Wilt thou, by repeated strokes of vengeance, set me up as a distinguished spectacle of thy marvellous power and wrath to all around me? 17. Wilt thou bring fresh plagues upon me, as witnesses of thy continued displeasure? Wilt thou still afflict me more and more? Shall nothing but divers forms and multitudes of trouble assaunt me? 18. Why then didst thou bring me out of the womb at all? Why did not I die in the womb, without ever being seen on this wretched earth? 19. Or die in the birth, that I might have been carried from the womb to the grave? 20. Shall not the momentary duration of my life quickly cease? Shall I not then be

CHAP. XII.

In this and the two following chapters Job replies to Zophar and, as formerly, first reasons with his friends and then expostulates with his God. Here, in his address to his friends reasons of his procedure! 8, 9. Thou mayest sooner measure the height of heaven, or fathom the depth of hell, and describe the surfaces and boundaries of the earth and sea. 10. If he attack a person or family, and shut them up in chains or nets of affliction, or bring them to his public tribunal, who can resist or refute him, or cause him to restore them to liberty? 11. For he knoweth the lovers of, and dealers in, falsehood and vanity. He exactly observes and understands what emptiness and wickedness takes place, however unimportant it appears to us, and thus hath reasons for inflicting trouble that men overlook. 12. Let then the dull and self-conceited pretender to knowledge, who just now spoke, be endued with solid wisdom; and let him, who appears as rude and blockish as an ass, be formed into a man of understanding. 13. If thou art truly wise, forbear disputing; and, in the exercise of faith and hearty repentance, apply thyself to humble supplication. 14. Reform thyself and family from whatever wickedness thou hast indulged. 15. Thus shalt thou be quickly delivered from thy loathsome disease and lamentable condition, and be firmly established in holiness and happiness. 16. The greatness of thy prosperity shall make thee forget all thy present trouble, as if it had never been. 17. The remainder of thy life shall be filled up with the most glorious and ever-increasing felicity. Thy present labour, under confounding trouble, shall issue in a fresh, clear, and pleasant, morning of prosperity. 18. Thy mind shall be quiet, and free from terrors, in the well-grounded confidence of God's favour and protection. Thou shalt dig thy wells of water, or entrench thyself for security, and nothing shall disturb thee or thine. 19. And, whilst thou art in perfect peace, without any thing to disquiet thee, many, even of the great, shall humbly court thy favour and friendship. 20. But wicked men shall never enjoy the happiness they desire or expect; their refuge from, help under, or escape out of, misery, is utterly perished. Their firmest hope of happiness is but as a noisy puff of breath, or giving up of the ghost, all on a sudden leaving them miserable and desperate.

(1) He condemns the judgment which they had all given of his

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—It is highly indecent and sinful to be abusive and passionate in religious controversy; and cruel to deal harshly with them whose spirits the Lord has wounded. Harsh censures readily exceed the bounds of truth. Such as are forward in giving the lie to others are ordinarily too guilty of falsehood themselves: and none are more forward in making their appeals to God than they whose cause is bad. How little we know of God's unbounded excellencies, or of the mysteries of his wisdom and will! men often talk well concerning them to serve a bad purpose. But surely it is very unreasonable to complain under troubles, when we have not only a God of deep character, and complains of the pride and cruelty with which they had given it; 1—5. (2) He contradicts what they had said of the certain misery of the wicked in this life; and shews, by the most glaring evidences, that they often prosper; 6—11. (3) He consents to that which they had said of God's wisdom, power, and sovereignty, over all men, and confirms and enlarges on it; 12—25.

AND Job answered and said, 2 No doubt but ye are the people, and wisdom shall die with you.

3 But I have understanding as well as you; † I am not inferior to you: yea, † who knoweth not such things as these?

4 I am as one mocked of his neighbour, who calleth upon God, and he answereth him: the just upright man is laughed to scorn.

5 He that is ready to slip with his feet is as a lamp despised in the thought of him that is at ease.

6 The tabernacles of robbers prosper and they that provoke God are secure; into whose hand God bringeth abundantly.

7 But ask now the beasts, and they shall teach thee; and the fowls of the air, and they shall tell thee:

8 Or speak to the earth, and it shall teach thee: and the fishes of the sea shall declare unto thee.

9 Who knoweth not in all these that the hand of the LORD hath wrought this?

10 In whose hand is the soul of every living thing, and the breath of all mankind.

11 Doth not the ear try words, and the mouth taste his meat?

12 With the ancient is wisdom, and in length of days understanding.

13 With him is wisdom and strength, he hath counsel and understanding.

14 Behold, he breaketh down and it cannot be built again: he shutteth up a man, and there can be no opening.

15 Behold, he withholdeth the wacounsels and unsearchable perfections to deal with; but, in providence, have a mixture of undeserved mercy in the most severe afflictions we meet with. Men often proudly imagine they know much when they are amazingly ignorant: and, the more ignorant they are, so are they the more unsettled and ungovernable. But in trouble there is need of a thorough reformation of ourselves and families. Yea, to have our nature changed, our heart lifted up to God in holy desires and self dedication, and our practice rectified. And the most holy confidence towards God; holy composure in our own mind; comfortable reflection on troubles; and joyful expectation of peace, joy, and honour; attend upon sincere and gospel repentance. If God establish us we shall not fail; nor need we fear what all the powers of hell and earth can do against us. Though we may for a little suffer an eclipse, we shall at last, without spot, shine forth in the kingdom of our Father. If the anchor of our hope be fixed on the faithfulness of God, no storms can hurt or endanger our security.—But unavoidable misery awaits the impenitent: and, if not before, the hope of the wicked always expires in death.

CHAP. XII. To this Job replied, 2. No doubt, you think yourselves the only men upon earth who understand divine things, by whose death all solid knowledge will be rooted out from the world. 3. But, believe it, I, and even the weakest of mankind understood all that you have said of God's infinite wisdom, power, and justice. 4. I am indeed insolently mocked by you, my fellow professors, even while you promise me great prosperity in answer to my prayers. But it has been the common lot of upright men to be made the butts of derision by their wicked neighbours. 5. The best of men, when reduced to the point of perishing, are generally contemned and hissed at by those who wallow in worldly ease and affluence. 6. But it is certain that the most wicked and mischievous persons often prosper remarkably in this world. 7, 8. The beasts and fowls which they live upon, or are served by, can teach you pretenders to wisdom this: the earth, that affords them her plentiful and delicious fruits, and the fishes of the sea, which gratify their appetites, plainly manifest this. 9, 10. And even the most stupid of mankind must know that this is ordered by the providence of God, who is the Creator, Preserver, and Governor, of both animals and men. 11, 12. Cannot our mind distinguish truth from falsehood as exactly as the palate can do sweet from bitter? And the older we grow the more wise we ought to become. 13. Much more with the eternal God is there wisdom to know all, and strength to do every thing. He never mistakes in his conceptions, nor miscarries in his purposes. 14. Behold he destroys cities, families, persons, and things; and none can restore them. He shuts up men in prisons or troubles, and none can bring them out. 15. At one time he

CHAP. XIII.

Here Job continues his address to his friends, in which (1) He maintains that he was not their inferior in knowledge. (2) He condemns them as guilty of falsehood, rash judging, partiality, and deceitfulness, under pretence of pleading God's cause; 4-8: threatens them with the judgments of God on account of it; 9-12: and desires them to be silent; 13, 17. They complying with his wish, (3) He turns his address to God, in which, 1. His faith is sometimes very bold and strong; 15, 16, 18: 2. His passion is too warm in expostulating concerning his extreme distress; 14, 19: in complaining of the confusion he was in; 20, 21, 22: and of the rigour of God's procedure against him, who was so mean and unable to bear it; 23-28.

withholds rain, or restrains the springs, and the waters dry up. Anon he sends forth the rains and fountains with unbridled liberty, and the torrents of water overturn the strongest banks: 16. Nor is his wisdom inferior to his power. The sin of the deceiver, and the sufferings of the deceived, are both ordered by him to his glory. 17. He defeats the projects of the wisest statesmen, and insatuates the ablest senators. 18. He deprives kings of their royal majesty and authority, and reduces them to slavery and imprisonment. 19. The most devout priests, or the noblest ministers of state, he renders captives; and overthroweth the most powerful armies of warriors. 20. Eloquence, fidelity, and prudence, gained by long experience, are rendered quite unavailable for the protection of princes or kingdoms. 21. He renders the greatest princes contemptible, and the strongest persons or armies weak. 22. He brings to light the most secret plots; makes plain the mysteries of doctrine or providence; and advances such as were poor, obscure, condemned, or imprisoned, to liberty and glory, to honour and wealth. 23. At his pleasure he increases nations in number, power, wealth, and honour; and anon diminishes them by famine, war, and pestilence. He enlarges their boundaries, and anon shuts them up into corners. 24. Princes, magistrates, and others, he deprives of courage and wisdom; and throws them into such confusion that they know not which way to turn themselves. 25. Without either sense or success, they seek for ways to help themselves and their people out of trouble; but, by his providential influence, they are quite uncertain in their counsels, and doubtful what course to take.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—Nothing is more disgusting and offensive than proud boasting; and a high conceit of our own importance is extremely foolish and sinful: contempt is all that is ordinarily gained by it. It is but just to allow others a share of reason and wisdom as well as ourselves. But often they, who riot in prosperity, condemn and reproach the afflicted, especially if they be religious. And peevish minds are sometimes apt to take well-meant reproofs for ill-natured reproaches. Mankind are rarely able to give things of importance a fair trial. Those, who are fast running to hell, often get large portions of earthly things, even the most delicate, in their way to it. But their abuse of God's creatures in this world shall witness against them, and will but increase their torments in the next. The most instructive lessons concerning God are afforded us in the volumes of creation and providence. But how mad and criminal is it to attempt contending with Him who hath all possible excellency in possession, and doth according to his will in the armies of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth! No king is so high but he can bring down; no politician so crafty or eloquent, but he can insatiate; no plot so well laid, but he can frustrate; no nation so mighty, but he can destroy with his nod; no general so brave, but he can intimidate. Be thou wise, my soul, to observe these things; so shalt thou understand the loving kindness of the Lord.

CHAP. XIII. Behold, all these things I know from my own experience and observation, or have learned from others; whereby you may see that I need none of your instructions on these points. 3. It is with God himself that I wish to debate my own integrity, and to answer his objections against it; 4. For ye are all forgers of false doctrines and accusations against me; you unskillfully and unfaithfully prescribe bad remedies for my affliction, and misapply good ones. 5, 6. It would be more agreeable to me, and shew more wisdom in you, if ye would never speak a word more on the subject, but carefully listen to what I can say in my own behalf. 7. Doth God stand in need of your false doctrines, or your false accusations of me, contrary to the dictates of your own conscience, to justify his proceedings against me? 8. Hath he so little right on his side, that you must shew him favour, and oblige him by wronging me? 9. Would it be for your honour or advantage that he should narrowly examine your discourses, and the springs and motives of them? Do ye think that he will be deceived with your flatteries and high pretences to piety? 10. No; he will certainly, fearfully, and openly, chastise you for your hypocritical attempts to gratify him by condemning me. 11. Should not his infinite majesty, holiness, and awful justice, make you afraid to deal unjustly, even on his behalf, or to speak rashly of his ways and counsels? 12. Ye yourselves are but mean worms, sprung out of the dust before him; and your boasted remonstrances on his behalf, and your bulwarks of arguments, are worthless and weak, as heaps of dirt or clay. 13. Keep silence therefore, and do not interrupt my speech; let me but speak out my mind, be the penal issue of it what it will. 14. I am so conscious of my integrity, that I must wonder why I suffer such enraging miseries, and am exposed to such evils; and I could risk all danger to obtain a thorough reasoning with God. 15. Lo! should he utterly cut me off, and not leave me the least glimmering of hope, I would, to the last gasp, maintain mine integrity. 16. Nay, I am confident that he himself, with whom no hypocrite dare lodge his appeal, will in due time vindicate me, preserve me in, or deliver me from, trouble; and save me with an everlasting salvation. 17, 18. Hear me then with care and attention: I have formed a process against myself, and digested what I have to say for myself; and I know that, in the issue, I shall be cleared from every charge of hypocrisy, and manifested a righteous person. 19. What impartial person dare charge me with hypocrisy, or can prove his point? If he could, I should be silent, die with shame, and be strangled with grief. But, when it is otherwise, it is death to me to neglect my own just vindication. 20-22. Do thou, great Judge, remove thy oppressing rod from off me, and let not the overwhelming awe of CHAP. XIV.

In this continued address to God, Job, having mentioned the perishing state of his body, (1) Mournfully describes man's life as short and sorrowful; 1, 2: as sinful; 4: and as precisely limited by God; 5, 14. (2) Represents man's death as putting an end to present life; 7-12: as hiding us from its calamities; 13: finishing its hopes; 18, 19: dismissing us from its business; and keeping us in utter ignorance about our most endeared relations; 20, 21, 22. (3) In the view of both life and death, he pleads that God would not contend with him, but grant him some respite; 3, 6: and deal less severely with him: 16, 17: and engages himself to prepare for death, and the resurrection, in which he expected comfort; 14, 15.

thy majesty terrify me: then will I, in the most bold and free manner, debate my cause with thee. 23. What, and how many, O God, are those heinous sins which require such grievous punishments? Or, if I am thus afflicted for some particular crime, cause me to know it. 24. Why shouldst thou in anger thus withhold thy favours and comforts? Why shouldst thou hold and treat me as an enemy to thee? 25. How canst thou find in thy heart so violently to toss and grievously persecute me, who am so mean, weak, and contemptible, in thy sight? And what honour canst thou acquire by it? 26. Thou passest the most severe sentences against me; and, by afflicting me with the most tormenting troubles, bringest to my mind, and punishest me for, the crimes which were committed before I well knew what I did. 27. Thy fearful judgments compass me in so close and tormenting a manner that I cannot escape. They follow me at the very heels; the tokens of thy wrath are engraven on the very soles of my feet. 28. And under these my frail carcass gradually rots into death.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—Hot disputants generally magnify themselves and undervalue their opponents; and too seldom do they adhere to truth with proper exactness. There is great need then to pray that the Lord would mortify our pride, and keep us from the way of lying; and, so far as is for his glory, keep us out of temptation. Deliberate lying is of all things most infamous. But what insignificant physicians are all but Christ to a sin-sick or wrath-sick soul! It is singularly criminal to manage the cause of God in a wicked and deceitful manner. What men call pious frauds are with God impious cheats; and devout persecutions are but horrid profanations of his name. Strict will be the scrutiny, and severe the rebukes of God, with respect to those found guilty of these things! No good intentions, no pious pretence, will avail at his awful bar. Let us then stand in awe of his perfections. Never let us, who are so mean and mortal, dare to condemn or trample on our neighbour. Never let us dare to exhibit weak and carnal remonstrances on God's behalf. But how supporting is it under trouble to have the testimony of a good conscience! and it is relieving to get our minds vented in kindly complaints. It is glorious, in the extremity of trouble, to be strong in the faith, giving glory to God, and coming boldly to his throne of grace, to ask mercy and obtain grace to help us in the time of need. But how awful is it to find the greatest saints mingling their passions with their prayers! Lord, what is man, even in his best estate, if left to himself! And what an hell on earth sin sometimes forms for the chief favourites of God! Sins long before committed fall with an awful weight on their conscience, and cause them to roar through disquiet of spirit. If then I find myself deserted of God; if I find my sins of youth remembered by him, and my present miscarriages strictly annidverted

6 ^{Turn} from him, that he may ^{rest}, till he shall accomplish, as an hireling, his day.

7 For there is ^{hope} of a tree, if it be cut down, that it will sprout again, and that the tender branch thereof will not cease.

8 Though the root thereof wax old in the earth, and the stock thereof die in the ground;

9 Yet through the ^{scent} of water it will bud, and bring forth boughs like a plant.

10 But man dieth, and ^{wasteth} away: yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?

11 ^{As} the waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up;

12 So man ^{lieth} down, and riseth not: ^{till} the heavens ^{be} no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their ^{sleep}.

13 O that thou wouldest ^{hide} me in the grave, that thou wouldest keep me secret, until thy wrath be past; that thou wouldest ^{appoint} me a set time, and remember me!

14 If a man die, ^{shall} he live ^{again}? all the days of my appointed time will I wait till my ^{change} come.

15 Thou shalt ^{call}, and I will answer thee: thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands.

16 For now ^{thou} numberest my steps: dost thou not watch over my sin?

17 My transgression is ^{sealed} up in a bag, and thou sewest up mine iniquity.

18 And surely the mountain falling upon; if I find myself wasting away under his heavy hand; let me never murmur at his dispensations. Let me, holding fast his promise, believe him to be my friend, even when he puts on the appearance of an enemy. Let me firmly expect the performance of his promises, even when all the ways leading to it are seemingly shut up. Let me rejoice in the Lord when he hath left me nothing else; and in dying moments let me derive from him my everliving consolation.

CHAP. XIV. Man that is born of a poor, weak, frail, woman, through whom he derives guilt, curses, corruptions, and infirmities, is of few days, and so surfeited with troubles, that he needs pity, rather than a violent hand to cut him off. 2. He makes a sparkling and fair show for a few days or hours, and then is cut down by an untimely death, or gradually, and without substantial happiness, posts through age into the eternal state. 3. And wilt thou, O God, debase thyself to take notice of, frown on, or contend with, such an insignificant creature, or to hale to thy tribunal, and execute strict justice upon me! 4. How is it possible for such as are sinfully corrupted themselves to produce innocent children! Why then should I, who am by nature no worse than others, be so peculiarly punished? 5, 6. Since the period of every man's life is unalterably fixed by thy purpose and providence, why shouldst thou now torment, and not let me alone, till I have contentedly accomplished my appointed service, and obtained the wished-for evening of death? 7-12. And the rather, since there is no hope that men once dead will revive into life like the stumps of old trees in a well-watered soil; but will lie crumbled into dust, and quite insensible, till the last day. 13. Oh that thou wouldest hide me in the state of the dead, and cover me with a vail, till this storm of thy wrath blow over! or set some limit of time and degree to thy wrath, and in pity remember me! 14. Then, however impossible it be for men to rise from the dead before the last day, I should patiently, all the days of my troublesome warfare, wait for my dying hour; and no less patiently wait for my glorious change at the resurrection. 15. Then, in love to thy poor creature, thou shouldst by death call me to thy judgment seat, and I should readily come: and at the resurrection thou shalt, in love to me, call me up from the grave, and I will gladly obey. 16. But now thou wrathfully observest all the steps of my life, and, as it were, greedily markest the smallest trips of my conduct, in order to punish them. 17. The least of my sins of infirmity is as carefully preserved in thy remembrance against me as if it were a precious treasure; and thou huntest after forged calumnies to add to my sin, and punish me for it. 18, 19. But there is no more hope of men's recovery from death, or of me from this calamity, than that fallen mountains should raise themselves up, or removed rocks resume their place, or worn stones should grow again; or that which is carried away by a flood should be brought back, and the devastations repaired.

CHAP. XV.

Perhaps Job imagined that he had silenced, if not convinced, his friends; but they were too fond of their own sentiments to part easily with them. Still taking Job's uncommon trouble to be an evidence that he was a wicked hypocrite, Eliphaz here (1) Angrily reproves Job for justifying himself; and charges him with absurdity, impiety, arrogance, contempt of good advice, and direct opposition to God, on that account; 1—13. (2) To render Job penitent and humble before God, he labours to convince him of his own and mankind's dreadful sinfulness; 14, 15, 16. (3) To awaken him, he represents how wicked men's defiance of God, carnal security, and self-enriching robbery, are attended with, or issue in, terror and agony of mind, and a providential crossing of all their attempts in favour of themselves and posterity; 17—35.

THEN answered Eliphaz the Temanite, and said,

20. None can resist thy deadly stroke, but must pass into eternity whenever thou requirest. Thou wrathfully changest his countenance, spoilest his beauty, and expellest him as a leper from thy camp on earth. 21. And then, whatever glory, power, or honour, or whatever debasement, disgrace, or misery, his posterity meet with, he neither knows nor regards it. 22. But his body, after pains in death, shall corrupt in the grave; and his soul, imbibed in death, often removes to an eternal anguish in hell.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—If human life be so short, so sinful, and so wretched; if death and an awful eternity be so near; why should any be proud! Why unconcerned about spiritual, about eternal happiness! Why not live on that gracious God who hath a feeling of our infirmities; and look and long for that rest which remaineth for the people of God! Awful and awakening though comfortable and heart-composing, are believing views of death and of the resurrection from the dead: and happy is the thought that, while my body, as precious dust, sleeps in Jesus' arms of kindly care, my soul shall retire to sit with him on his throne, and there wait, till my great, my last, change come! If grace has changed my heart, death has changed its nature to me: and the hope of a glorious resurrection is enough to support me under every human trouble. Every thing around admonishes me of death: and nothing can resist it when God gives it the commission. Sharp are its pains, and strange is the change it makes! It separates the chiefest friends! In view of it, to render me always content, let me maintain kind thoughts of God and a deep sense of my sin. And at last let it find me weaned from this perishing world, disengaged from all but a God in Christ; and singing, O death, where is thy sting! O grave, where is thy victory!

CHAP. XV. Filled with indignation at the contempt which Job had discovered for him and his friends, Eliphaz replied. 2. Shouldest thou, who pretendest to wisdom, presume to throw forth such unsubstantial and boisterous nonsense; or to satisfy thy own conscience with such pernicious fancies? 3. Shouldest thou, instead of solid arguments, pour forth unprofitable wranglings? 4. Nay, shouldest thou cast off, and break through, all reverential regard to God, and refuse to pour forth thy humble complaints and prayers before him; and even tempt

I need produce no evidence of thy impiety; thy own words sufficiently manifest and prove it. 7. Wast thou formed before every other creature, that thou pretendest to be wiser and better than other men? 8. Hast thou been acquainted with the most secret counsels and mysteries of God, that thou shouldest engross all wisdom to thyself? 9. What secrets hast thou learned that we do not fully comprehend? 10. Darest thou to condemn the divine admonitions and comforting promises which we have suggested, and undervalue our kind and consoling discourses, as if thou knewest some better way of comfort? 12. Why do thy inward lusts thus violently transport thee into such pride, fury, and scornful contempt. 13. Consciousness of guilt keeps him in perpetual terror of approaching mischiefs. And never is the destroyer more ready to attack him than when he is in the height of his prosperity. 22. In trouble he desponds of deliverance; in the night he dreads being killed before morning; every where he fears; and is indeed exposed to the most certain and sudden destruction. 23. In the most destitute and vagabond manner he is obliged to wander for bread. He finds, by experience, that terrible and inevitable ruin is just ready to seize him. 24. CHAP. XVI.

Begins Job's reply to Eliphaz. (1) He upbraids his friends with their needless repetitions, their unskilful, their endless, impertinence, and obstinacy in their mistakes, and cruelty towards their distressed friend; 1—5, 9, 10, 11, 20. (2) He represents the extremity of his affliction; his family being destroyed or scattered; his body wasted in a loathsome manner; his God, and other enemies, a terror to, and tormentors of him; all around abusive; and, in fine, his honour and comfort quite gone; 6—16. (3) As a dying man, he appeals for his integrity to God against the unjust condemnation of his friends; 17—22.

THEN Job answered and said, 2 I have heard many such things: ^amiserable comforters are ye all.

3 Shall ^bvain words have an end? or what emboldeneth thee that thou answerest.

4 I also ^ccould speak as ye do: if your soul were in my soul's stead, I could heap daring impiety, because he defied and set himself in opposition to the Almighty. 26. Daring to sin in the most insolent and presumptuous manner, even amidst the tokens of the divine indignation, inflicted or impending; 27. Because, grown rich, powerful, and successful, his only care is to pamper himself, and wallow in ease and luxury; 28. Dwelling in cities and stately houses, from whence he had driven or murdered the righteous proprietors; and which, by the curse of God, for his sake, shall be quickly reduced to heaps of ruins, and he be obliged to shift for himself in the most miserable manner. 29. The riches and glory which he hath gotten by violence and oppression shall neither be lasting, complete, nor firmly rooted. 30. Having once entered into terrible and confounding troubles, he shall never get out of them. The lightning, like flames of God's wrath, shall destroy his flourishing family and substance; and he himself shall be ruined and driven to hell by the threatened judgments of God amidst his proud boasting. 31. Let therefore no one, who is seduced to wickedness or carnal security, trust in the uncertain profits, pleasures, or honours, of this world; for vexations, losses, disappointments, and troubles, shall be all he will get by them. 32, 33. These shall come upon him far sooner than he thinks. His riches, hopes, or children, shall scarcely make their appearance, when, blasted by the vengeance of God, they shall all be reduced to ruin. 34. Thus suddenly and fearfully shall the stock and numerous family of hypocrites be utterly destroyed; and some terrible judgment of God shall consume the house built up by, or stored with, ill-gotten goods. 35. With no small pains such wicked men plot and practise mischief against others; but in the issue it usually brings ruin on themselves.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—Men too often hold fast the false principles which they have once imbibed: and it is much easier to treat an adversary with contempt than to answer him with reason. Disputants often turn revilers rather than reasoners; and charge their opponents with things which they utterly abhor. And none are more ready to indulge pride and self-conceit in themselves than those who rage against it in their neighbours! Old men often rather boast of their knowledge and wisdom than possess it. But surely it is an humbling sight to see men so corrupt in nature, so abominable in practice; and amazing that God should love any such, and deliver them from the pit of corruption! In the study of true knowledge, the experience and observation of others, as well as our own, are an excellent help. But how unbounded is the patience of God, that can bear with wicked monsters so long! Yet little external happiness have they even in this world. Their seemingly purest prosperity is mingled with gall and wormwood. But, if they are miserable in this world, which is their heaven, what must they be in death, in judgment, in hell!

CHAP. XVI. To this Job replied, 2. Thou hast but repeated the senseless up words against you, and ^dshake mine head at you.

5 But ^eI would strengthen you with my mouth, and the moving of my lips should assuage your grief.

6 Though I speak, ^fmy grief is not assuaged: and, though I forbear, ^gwhat am I eased?

7 But now he hath made me ^hweary: thou hast ⁱmade desolate all my company.

8 And thou ^jhast filled me with wrinkles, which is a witness against me: and my leanness, rising up in me, beareth witness to my face.

9 He ^kteareth me in his wrath, who hateth me: he gnasheth upon me with his teeth; mine enemy sharpeneth his eyes upon me.

10 They ^lhave gaped upon me with their mouth; they have smitten me upon the cheek reproachfully; they have gathered themselves together against me.

11 God ^mhath delivered me to the ungodly, and turned me over into the hands of the wicked.

12 I was ⁿat ease, but he hath broken me asunder: he hath also taken me by my neck, and shaken me to pieces, and ^oset me up for his mark.

13 His ^parchers compass me round about; he cleaveth my reins asunder, and doth not spare; he poureth out my gall upon the ground.

14 He ^qbreaketh me with breach upon breach; he runneth upon me like a giant.

15 I have ^rsewed sackcloth upon my skin, and ^sdefiled my horn in the dust.

16 My face is foul with weeping, and on mine eyelids is the shadow of death?

17 Not ^tfor any injustice in mine hands: also my prayer ^uis pure.

and tormenting jargon which I had heard before. Instead of comforting, you plague, harass, and tempt me to despair. 3. When wilt thou make an end of such idle and impertinent discourse? What has instigated and emboldened thee to answer me in this censorious, scornful, and peremptory manner? 4. Were your condition and mine exchanged, I could easily insult you with a multitude of words, and deride you in a grave and scornful manner. 5. I could furiously bear you down with my mouth, and restrain my lips from uttering a single sentence of consolation;—though I hope I should rather attempt to encourage, strengthen, and comfort you. 6. But now, indeed, whether I boldly defend my innocence and pour forth my complaints, or whether I forbear, my frightful sores and griefs are nothing eased. 7. This terrible trouble has quite tired me out, and made my life a burthen to me. Thou, O God, hast with thy thunderbolts and fiery tempest, utterly destroyed my large family, and all that pertained to me. 8. While others murder my character, and torment my spirit, thou, by plagues and griefs, hast so wasted and disfigured my body, that it testifies my great affliction, and is employed against me as a witness of my great wickedness. 9. Meanwhile, my pretended friends, who indeed implacably hate me, tear my reputation, and torment my spirit with their speeches. They reproach me in the most spiteful and outrageous manner; and, while their eyes sparkle with anger, they cruelly set themselves to spy out every, even the least occasion to calumniate me. 10. They behave like wild beasts, gaping to devour or deride me: they treat me with the most cruel and abusive scorn and contempt; they have met together to satisfy their infernal malice in tormenting me. 11. And God hath quite abandoned me, chained me up, and dreadfully cast me down into the hands of these and other wicked men, to be abused by them as they please. 12. Great was my former happiness and prosperity; but now God has trodden and bruised me in the press of his wrath, and made me, as it were, to boil over with dregs of trouble and desperate complaints. In the most tormenting manner he has ruined my soul, my body, my children, and all that I had: he has set me up as a distinguished butt of his fearful indignation. 13. Devils, wicked men, calamities, and diseases, as the instruments of his vengeance, compass me round about. Without mercy he torments me with the most exquisite pains in my body, anguish of mind, and terrors of conscience. 14. As a battering ram he breaks through me with breach upon breach, still adding one dreadful plague to another: he furiously rushes upon me with the almighty force of his wrath, which I can, by no means withstand or support. 15. The sackcloth I had put on all over my body, to mark my deep mourning and humiliation under his mighty hand, sticks to my ulcers; and, exhausted with wounds of trouble, I have sat down on this dunghill, where all my former authority and honour are changed into contempt. 16. My face is terribly burnt, and fermented with trickling tears; and the very substance of my eyes is almost consumed with weeping, so that I look like one dead and rotting; 17. Although I was never a violent oppressor of men, or

CHAP. XVII.

Might well have been joined with the former. In it Job (1) Continues his address to God, and as a dying, despised, and grieved man, appeals to him for a vindication of himself against his uncharitable friends; 1—7. (2) Comforts himself that, though his treatment would surprise the godly, yet it would not stop their perseverance and growth in grace; 8, 9. (3) In expectation of a speedy death, he reflects on his friends as foolish in attempting to feed him with hopes of prosperity in this life; 10—16.

MY *breath is corrupt; my days are extinct: 'the graves are ready for me.

2 Are there not 'mockers with me?
and doth not mine eye 'continue in their provocation?

3 Lay down now; 'put me in a surety with thee: who is he that will strike hands with me?

4 For thou hast 'hid their heart from understanding: therefore shalt thou not exalt them.

5 He that 'speaketh flattery to his friends, even the eyes of his children shall fail.

6 He hath made me also a 'by-word of the people; and 'aforetime I was as a tabret.

7 Mine eye also is 'dim by reason of sorrow, and all ||my members are as a shadow.

8 Upright men shall 'be astonished at an hypocritical worshipper of God. 18. O earth, if I have been guilty of bloodshed or oppression, conceal it not: let the dogs lick my blood when I am dead, and let neither God nor men regard my complaints or cries for pity while I am alive. 19. But what need these imprecations, when even now the all-seeing God, who dwells in the lofty regions of heaven, is the ear and the eye-witness of my virtue and true piety. 20. My companions mock and scoff at me as an hypocrite; but my soul, with floods of tears, earnestly appeals to God, and begs, 21. That he would thoroughly and clearly examine my cause, and give a decision between me and my reproaching friends; 22. Since, if it be not done quickly, my troubles will soon make an end of me, and then it will be too late.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—Often much is said, and yet nothing to the purpose: and miserable comforters to a wounded spirit are all duties, all friends, if God continue his frowns! Nothing but Jesus' blood—nothing but JEHOVAH'S mercy—can grant any solid relief. Nay, alas! men are often most cruel and harsh when they ought to be most tender and compassionate; and those who riot in prosperity and ease seldom lay much to heart the case of their extremely distressed brethren. But though complicated and terrible are the troubles of saints in this world, unspeakably more so are the troubles of the wicked in hell, where there is nothing but curses—but torment in all its perfection! Happy are they who are here purged in God's furnace! They sow in tears, but shall reap in joy. And, however hard it be to bring down their mind to their lot, the testimony of their good conscience, sprinkled with Jesus' blood shall comfort them now. They have a good God to appeal to as their judge and friend. Their tears shall be put into his bottle, and marked in his book; and death, but destitute of his sting, shall soon set the prisoners free into a glorious eternity.

CHAP. XVII. My spirit is maimed, broken, and confounded with trouble; and my breath stinks as in dying persons: the days of my life are thunderstruck, shortened, and debased: nothing but the grave remains for me. 2. O God, do not my friends bitterly mock and deride me as a wicked hypocrite? And does not my mind so dwell and pore on their proud, insolent, and exasperating speeches, that I cannot sleep, or mine eyes refrain from tears? 3. Come, then, give me undoubted assurance that thou wilt take my cause in hand and do me justice; or give me an impartial man like myself, who in thy stead shall debate the matter with me. 4. For, as for these my friends, thou hast withheld from them a common capacity to understand thy providential dispensations, therefore they can never be honoured to judge my plea. 5. He who flatters friends in their wickedness because of their prosperity, or who manifestly makes a prey of them, his posterity shall pine away in disappointment and misery. 6. Alas! both God and my friends now combine to expose me to the common contempt of the people, though lately I was their darling and the matter of their praise. 7. My eyes are rendered dim, and my mind stupified with grief, and my body is wasted to a skeleton. 8. Upright saints in after times shall be astonished at the sovereign dispensations of God, and the cruel abuse of my friends, with respect to me; and shall be excited to the utmost this, and the innocent shall 'stir up himself against the hypocrite.

9 The righteous also shall 'hold on his way, and he that hath 'clean hands 'shall be stronger and stronger.

10 But as for you all, do ye 'return, and come now: for I cannot find 'one wise man among you.

11 My days 'are past; my purposes are broken off, even *the thoughts of my heart.

12 They 'change the night into day:
the light is 'short because of darkness.

13 If I 'wait, the 'grave is mine house: I have made my bed in the darkness.

14 I have 'said to corruption, 'Thou art my father; to the worm, 'Thou art my mother and my sister.

15 And where is now my 'hope? as for my hope, who shall see it?

16 'They shall go down to the bars of the pit, when our rest together is in the dust.

CHAP. XVIII.

Not convinced, but exasperated, by Job's reasonings, Bildad makes a second attack, more peevish and unmerciful than the first. Here (1) He upbraids Job with his talkativeness and disregard of the instructions given him, haughty contempt of his friends, outrageous passion, and arrogant inclination to give law to the providence of God; 1—4. (2) With a plain application to Job, he enlarges on his former doctrines concerning the certain misery of the wicked man in this life; hinting that God, devils, and men, would concur to ruin him, by calamities in life, terrors of mind, a wretched death, total extirpation of his family, and rendering his memory forgotten or odious; 5—21.

THEN answered Bildad the Shuhite,
and said,

2 How long will it be ere ye 'make an end of words? mark, and afterwards we will speak.

3 Wherefore are we counted 'as beasts, and reputed vile in your sight?

4 He 'teareth *himself in his anger:
shall the earth be forsaken for thee?

detestation of hypocrites, who uncharitably censure the afflicted. 9. And, notwithstanding every scandal or discouragement, persons truly righteous shall persevere in their course of piety and virtue, and become more and more confirmed and active in it. 10. And, as for you, my friends, either repent of your rash censures, or examine my cause over again; for hitherto none of you have spoken to the point. 11. Whatever hopes you give me of recovering my wonted prosperity, I find I am a dying man, and all my designs, even the most fixed and dear, are at an end. 12. My tormenting pains and anxious thoughts keep me awake through the whole night; or if I get any moments of ease, it is but little, and soon over. 13. I expect, I wait for, nothing now but an entrance into the state of the dead; and I have prepared for, and expect speedily to lie down in, the grave. 14. In the form of my trouble, and in the exercise of my mind, I have contracted a relation to, and familiarity with death, corruption and worms. 15. The future prosperity with which you attempt to flatter me, and the temporal happiness you would have me expect, are a mere imagination: 16. These hopes shall quickly appear buried in the grave along with myself.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—Happy are those who have spiritual breath which cannot corrupt; life that can never fail; who have their portion in eternal blessedness, and are ready for their grave! If cruel friends exasperate my spirit, and drive sleep from mine eyes, let Jesus, as my surety and righteousness, be the ground of all my hope, and the source of all my joys.—God can easily infatuate the wisest when they abuse his gifts. And it is mad to pursue honour and advancements by sinful methods, particularly in employing the wisdom which he has given against his cause and interest. Vain is the unconstant applause of men. While we are great the world admire us; but when depressed and poor they contemn or abhor us. But, though we see things in providence which we cannot account for, we must not stagger through unbelief. And, if we are faithful to God, we must be zealous for his cause, and take part with his oppressed people, whose bitterest enemies are usually formal hypocrites. They who are once brought into God's new covenant way, Jesus Christ, and a course of holiness, never utterly faint or fail; nay, even difficulties and opposition quicken them. Many great pretenders to wisdom can give no profitable instructions in a day of trial; and empty are the promises, and vain the hopes of carnal minds. How debasing to proud men are death and the grave! And even good men are apt to despair of that which God really intends for them. Happy are they who rest in Christ here—they shall rest in death, and in heaven for ever and ever!

CHAP. XVIII. In no small heat of spirit, Bildad replied; 2. How long wilt thou cast forth such confused, double-meaning, and unintelligible words, as if you wanted to entrap us? Declare plainly what you intend, and after that we shall deliver our minds with the utmost clearness, freedom, and boldness. 3. For to what purpose is it to talk with one who looks upon us as a company of dull beasts, into whom nothing of wisdom can enter? 4. With impatient rage you tear and torment yourself. Must God, to humour thee, suspend or cease his government of the world, and leave every thing to chance: or must he

CHAP. XIX.

In answer to Bildad, Job (1) Complains, 1. That his pretended comforters, by their speeches, added to his affliction; 2—7. 2. That his God, whom he depended on as his great friend, had been the principal author of his manifold and sore troubles; 8—12. 3. That his friends and relations had become shy of him, or undutiful and cruel to him, in his great distress; 13—22. (2) He comforts himself with the assured expectation of happiness in the other world, when he had so little in this; and solemnly professes his faith in Christ and his salvation; 23—27. (3) He warns his friends to take heed how they persecuted one, who was a real though afflicted saint, lest it should issue in their own ruin; 28—29.

THEN Job answered and said,

2 'How long will ye 'vex my soul, and break me in pieces with words?

3 These 'ten times have ye reproached me: ye are not ashamed that ye *make yourselves strange to me.

4 And be it indeed that I have erred, mine error remaineth 'with myself.

5 If indeed ye will 'magnify yourselves against me, and plead against me my reproach;

6 Know now that 'God hath overthrown me, and hath compassed me with his net.

7 Behold, I 'cry out of †wrong, but I am not heard: I cry aloud, but there is no judgment.

8 He hath 'fenced up my way that I cannot pass; and he hath set darkness in my paths.

9 He hath stripped me of my 'glory, and taken the crown from my head.

10 He hath destroyed me 'on every side, and I am gone: and mine 'hope hath he removed like a tree.

11 He hath also 'kindled his wrath against me, and he 'counteth me unto him as one of his enemies.

12 His 'troops come together, and raise up their way against me, and encamp round about my tabernacle.

13 He hath 'put my brethren far from me, and mine acquaintance are verily estranged from me.

14 My 'kinsfolk have failed, and my familiar friends have forgotten me.

makes them to misinterpret every thing said or done by their antagonist; nay, makes them to misapply the most precious or tremendous truths of God! They suspect affronts that were never intended. They even torment themselves—their pride and passion proving hurtful to both soul and body. But to what terrible judgments of God, in time, in death, and chiefly in eternity, are the wicked exposed! Short lived and unsubstantial is their prosperity, and heavy the curse that is upon them! Being abandoned of God, Satan first ensnares and afterwards torments them. Agitated by their lusts, they rush headlong into ruin; till death, in all his stings and terrors, devours them! Then friends, physicians, and all human supports, are vain! Their glorious prosperity is quickly turned into everlasting shame and contempt.

CHAP. XIX. Job replied, Will ye never cease tormenting my soul, and bruising me as in a mortar, with your senseless revilings! 3. Ye have too often wounded me with the vilest reproaches. Ye have been shamelessly obstinate in your rebukes and cruel usage of me. 4. If I indeed had been mistaken in my opinion or practice, I have sufficiently smarted for it in my own person and estate; and so am a fit object of pity rather than of your reproach. 5. If you will still insolently declaim against me, and allege my debasing calamities as a proof of my impiety. 6. Know that I am sensible that it is God who hath in this fearful manner cast me down from my prosperity, and compassed me about with unavoidable miseries. 7. And my case is the more pitiable that, while friends abuse me with reproach, God, to whom I have repeatedly committed my cause, refuses to redress my wrongs, or vindicate my innocence. 8. Nay, his plagues so surround me on every side that I can find no way of escape; and I am so overwhelmed with perplexity that I know not whither to turn myself. 9. He has deprived me of all my dignity, authority, wealth, and family. 10. In respect of children, wealth, honour, authority, and health, he has entirely destroyed me; and all my hopes of future comfort in this world he hath plucked up by the roots. 11. He has in the most violent and furious manner afflicted me, as if I had been one of his principal enemies. 12. Whole armies of troubles have, by his order, invaded me; and, as with raised batteries, so straitly besieged me that not the smallest comfort I had could escape their fury. 13. While friends and neighbours are alienated from me, and refuse to do me any office of kindness, my maidens and men servants treat me with the utmost disobedience and contempt.

and my maids, count me for a stranger :
I am an alien in their sight.
16 I called my servant, and he gave me no answer : I entreated him with my mouth.
17 My breath is strange to my wife, though I entreated for the children's sake of mine own body.
18 Yea young children despised me ;
I arose, and they spake against me.
19 All my inward friends abhorred me : and they whom I loved are turned against me.
20 My bone cleaveth to my skin, *and to my flesh ; and I am escaped with the skin of my teeth.
21 Have pity upon me, have pity upon me, O ye my friends, for the hand of God hath touched me.
22 Why do ye persecute me as God, and are not satisfied with my flesh ?
23 Oh that my words were now written ! oh, that they were printed in a book !
24 That they were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock for ever !
25 For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth :
26 And, though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God :
27 Whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another ; though my reins be consumed *within
me.
28 But ye should say, Why persecute we him, seeing the root of the matter is found in me ?
29 Be ye afraid of the sword : for wrath bringeth the punishments of the sword, that ye may know there is a judgment.

CHAP. XX.

Nothing satisfied, or even mollified, by all that Job had said, Zo-phar again attacks him with the utmost vehemence. (1) After a short, but passionate, preface, he, in a kind of appeal to Job,

17. My wife regards my complaints and cries no more than if she were a mere stranger, though I have begged her sympathy for the sake of our dear children, who have been so dreadfully hurried into death. 18. The very children and ignorant people about, following the example of the rest, despise me, and treat me with the most abusive language. 19. The very men whom I had trusted with my secrets, and who had received the most distinguished tokens of my affection, abhor and hate me. 20. I am wasted with afflictions till I am little more than skin and bone ; I am bruised till the teeth have fallen out of my head ; and I have scarcely left me a mouth to complain. 21. O my friends, have pity upon me, when God's afflicting hand has so grievously smitten and wounded me ! 22. Why do ye persecute and harass me, as if ye were an avenging God ! Why, as if unsatisfied with my external calamities, do ye cruelly torment my spirit ? 23. O that my protestations of uprightness, and appeals to God, were in the most legible and indelible manner registered in a book of public records for my vindication, and for the encouragement of other upright persons under sore troubles ! 24. O that they were registered in the most indelible manner in some marble rock or pillar, to continue legible to all generations ! 25. For, notwithstanding these present miseries, I by faith know, and am firmly persuaded, that Jesus Christ, my Kinsman-Redeemer, liveth, having life in himself ; and shall victoriously stand as the last Adam, upon the dust of the earth, in his incarnation, resurrection, and appearance to judgment. 26. And, though these vermin, bred, or breeding, in my afflicted body, should quickly devour the whole of it, yet even in this body, when fashioned like unto his glorious body, shall I see God in my nature ! 27. Whom I shall see for my own particular comfort, in my own person, when raised from the dead. Though at present I am at the point of death through sore trouble, and earnestly longing for deliverance. 28. Ye should therefore say, Why do we persecute one in whom there is such soundness and strength of faith, and who hath the right cause in the present debate ? 29. Beware, lest God punish your inhuman cruelty to me with some terrible judgments. Such rage as yours deserves, and such wrath as God's, provoked by your sin, will bring fearful calamities upon you, that ye may know, to your cost, that God vindicates his own people and punishes their enemies.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIX.—Hard is the trial when inward vexation and outward reproach meet together ; and distressing the situation when those who ought to comfort us again and again reproach and disquiet us ; and especially when men abuse us with revilings, and God shuts out our prayer, and asserts, in general, that the prosperity of the wicked in this world is short, and their ruin certain and sudden ; 1—9. (2) He more particularly asserts, that, to punish their fleshly lusts, their love of the world, and their violent oppressions, their hopes shall be disappointed, their bodies diseased, their conscience disquieted, their estate ruined, and their family beggared ; 10—21. (3) He describes the form of their ruin ; that, springing from God's just wrath, it shall be inevitable, total, terrible, and ruinous, to themselves and families, however insensibly it may come on ; 22—29.

Before Christ

THEN answered Zophar the Naamathite, and said,

2 Therefore do my thoughts cause me to answer, and for this I make haste.

3 I have heard the check of my reproach, and the spirit of my understanding causeth me to answer.

4 Knowest thou not this of old, since man was placed upon earth,

5 That the triumphing of the wicked is short, and the joy of the hypocrite but for a moment ?

6 Though his excellency mount up to the heavens, and his head reach unto the clouds ;

7 Yet he shall perish for ever, like his own dung : they which have seen him shall say, Where is he ?

8 He shall fly away as a dream, and shall not be found : yea, he shall be chased away as a vision of the night.

9 The eye also which saw him shall see him no more ; neither shall his place any more behold him.

10 His children shall seek to please the poor, and his hands shall restore their goods.

11 His bones are full of the sin of his youth, which shall lie down with him in the dust.

12 Though wickedness be sweet in his mouth, though he hide it under his tongue ;

13 Though he spare it, and forsake it not, but keep it still within his mouth ;

14 Yet his meat in his bowels is turned, it is the gall of asps within him.

15 He hath swallowed down riches, loads us with trouble ! But, when God strikes a saint, almost every person and thing is ready to second his blow ; and then the sparing of his relations becomes a heavier cross than the removal of them by death. It is hard to discern God's love and endeared affection amidst many and heavy strokes of paternal wrath. But happy are those who, when earth is turned into a kind of hell to them, can by faith solace themselves with the views of a future judgment, and of being for ever with Jesus Christ—their Relation, their Husband, their Deliverer, their Lord ! It is dangerous to persecute the saints while their Kinsman-Redeemer lives, and sees ; and shall quickly judge the world. But here let me stand still, and with pleasure remark that there is a Kinsman-Redeemer provided for fallen men ; that he is a living and divine Redeemer ; that I have a new covenant interest in him, and know that I have it ; that there will be a last day, when time shall be no more ; that then my Redeemer, who stood as the last Adam upon earth, shall appear without sin unto my salvation ! and so shall I be for ever with the Lord ! I shall be like him, for I shall see him as he is ! Let me blush to behold an ancient patriarch, amidst his darkest nights of trouble, with clearer views of Jesus and eternal things, and his happy interest therein, than I, upon whom the light of the glorious gospel hath so clearly shined.

CHAP. XX. Interrupting Job, Zophar the Naamathite, in no small fury, replied, 2. My thoughts make me burn and swell with matter of refutation, and oblige me to answer ; therefore, highly provoked with thy speech, I make haste to the dispute, as a person fully prepared. 3. I have indeed heard a most reproachful answer to my own and my friend's former speeches ; but my heart enables me to answer in the most prudent and considerate manner. 4, 5. Knowest thou not, that all along from the creation the prosperity of a wicked man and hypocrite has been very short-lived and momentary. 6. Though his high-towering excellency mount up to heaven, and his temporal honours and happiness be advanced to the highest pitch, 7—9. He shall quickly perish in the most disgraceful and contemptible manner, without any hope of recovery. 10. His children, in their wretchedness, shall court the favour of the meanest, or attempt to satisfy them for the wrongs done to them by their father ; and the works of his hands shall render him sorrow for his reward. 11. His youthful and secret wickedness shall bring such distempers upon him as shall hasten him to his grave, and shall attend him to hell. 12—14. If he with great fondness and pleasure indulged himself in his wickedness, it shall prove most bitter, unwholesome, painful, and destructive, to him, in the fear-

29 This is the portion of a wicked man from God, and the heritage appointed unto him by God.

CHAP. XXI.

Finding that his mournful complaints nothing moved the pity of his friends, Job, in this and the following replies, insists less upon ful miseries attending it. 15. The riches which he has greedily and unjustly got into his possession he shall be forced to restore with great shame and torment. God shall so torment him with trouble and anguish of mind that he shall be sick of them. 16. That which he has been so eager in getting shall bring upon him the most terrible, painful, and destructive, judgments. 17. Never shall he enjoy the least real comfort in all his plenty of outward things. 18. He shall be obliged to restore the hire which he unjustly withheld ; nay, even what he laboured for shall be cursed to him, and quickly lost along with his unjust gain ; and he shall have no comfort in any thing he has. 19. Because he furiously oppressed the poor till he rendered them destitute, and violently seized houses which he built not. 20. Therefore shall he have no solid satisfaction in his own mind, but be in pain, as a travailing woman ; and shall be deprived of all his desirable things. 21. He shall scarcely have wherewith to sustain himself in life, and shall have no goods left for any to look after. 22. In the very height of his prosperity he shall be terribly distressed ; and even his fellows in impiety shall concur to render him miserable. 23. Whenever he shall attempt to satisfy himself in what he has, some extraordinary judgment shall of a sudden overtake him. 24. When he shall attempt to avoid one danger, another more dreadful shall overtake him. 25. And terribly shall the judgments of God torment and destroy him. Horrors of conscience shall seize upon him, as one who cannot live, and who dares not die. 26. Every kind of fearful calamities shall be reserved for him as his treasure, and shall follow him wherever he thinks to hide himself. Some awful judgment, which comes none knows how, shall consume him. His posterity and family shall, for his sake, be cursed of God, and entirely wasted and ruined. 27. God, by remarkable judgments of thunder, lightning, or the like, shall discover his notorious wickedness ; and all creatures on earth shall exert themselves for his ruin. 28. His estate, which he had got by the labour of his family, shall quickly be taken from him, or destroyed, in the day when God manifests his wrath against him. 29. This is the portion and reward which God has allotted to impious and insolent sinners.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—Alas ! the most confident and forward in a dispute are seldom in the right ; and with such the kindest warning is interpreted into an affront, and returned with insolence ; and the dictates of passion pass for the arguments of reason. The truths of God are often, as here, excellently them, and attempts more closely to prove that outward prosperity was no certain mark of piety, nor remarkable judgments of distinguished impiety. Here, after a preface calculated to move their pity and beg their attention, 1—6 ; he labours to convince their judgment and rectify their mistake, shewing that, though not always, yet most commonly, wicked men are permitted of God to live in prosperity, and to depart this life without any visible strokes of distinguished judgment. (1) He describes the great prosperity of wicked men ; 7—13. (2) Shews what great impiety they are hardened in by their prosperity ; 14, 15, 16. And (3) that from want of constant example, from the diversified forms of men's death, and from common experience, the discriminating destruction of wicked men is chiefly reserved for the future state ; 17—34.

9 Their houses are safe from fear, neither is the rod of God upon them.

10 Their bull gendereth, and faileth not ; their cow calveth, and casteth not her calf.

11 They send forth their little ones like a flock, and their children dance.

12 They take the timbrel and harp, and rejoice at the sound of the organ.

explained, but miserably applied. Short lived is a wicked man's prosperity, and a hypocrite's profession. If not in this life, sin and ruin shall in the next appear certainly inseparable. And, the higher men tower in sinful prosperity, their fall into the pit of destruction shall be the more dreadful. What terrible consequences have the often unthought-of sins of youth ! Bitter are the issues of those sins which are reckoned sweet ; and inexpressible the loss of those which are reckoned gainful. Where God's curse lies there can be no real felicity. But dreadful shall it be to the wicked when all their dreams of happiness shall be disappointed, their secret sins revealed, and the wrath of God shall take an everlasting hold of them ! Let the sound of destruction—terrible destruction—everlasting destruction, that is in my ears, drive me to Jesus Christ, and the everlasting redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of my sins, according to the riches of his grace

CHAP. XXI. Job immediately replied, 2. Instead of pretending to comfort me, patiently and attentively hear my speech. 3. Permit me freely to declare my mind, without interrupting me ; and, when I have finished my pertinent reasoning, mock on as long as you please. 4. I have made my appeal to God ; and, had it been to man, I could not but be vexed to find myself thus interrupted, reproached, and abused. 5. To see in me a religious and upright man so fearfully afflicted might overwhelm you with the most confounding astonishment at the awfully-sovereign providence of God, and at least make you willing to hold your peace while I speak. 6. For truly, when I think on it, I am filled with the most terrifying awe of his sovereign judgments. 7. But, if wicked men always meet with such fearful calamities as you have pretended, whence it is that many of them for a long time flourish in uncommon prosperity and power ; 8. Nay, live to see their children, and children's children, settled and prosperous ; 9. Their habitations and families live in peace and security, and are not loaded with any afflictions ; 10. While their cattle are extremely healthful, prosperous, and fruitful. 11, 12. Their wives with the greatest ease bring forth multitudes of children, who employ themselves in nothing but carnal joy and mirth. 13. Even unto old age they spend their days in earthly prosperity and carnal indulgence, and at last die very easily, without any sense of pain. 14, 15. Gratiified and puffed up with their prosperity, they, in the most daring manner, testify their dislike and contempt of the knowledge, service, and worship, of God. 16. It is God, however, not themselves, who renders

CHAP. XXII.

Job had spoken of the prosperity of the wicked as a mystery of providence. His friends understood him as maintaining that providence countenanced their wickedness; hence two of them give him a third attack. Here (1) Eliphaz rebukes Job for his complaints of God's severity, and shews that God neither would nor could do him wrong; 1—4. (2) Upon mere supposition, he exhibits a terrible charge of oppression, injustice, atheism, and infidelity, against him, as the causes of God's judgments upon him; 5—14. (3) To awaken Job's conscience, he compares his case to that of the old world destroyed by the flood; 15—18. (4) After remarking the joy and safety of the godly amidst the destruction of the wicked, 19, 20, he administers excellent advice to Job; importing, that, upon his knowledge of and correspondence with God, resignation to his will, obedience to his law, and turning to him by faith, repentance, and reformation, he would remove his afflictions, allow him intimacy with him, succeed his designs, and bless his labours; and even hear his prayers in behalf of others; 21—30.

THEN Eliphaz the Temanite answered and said,

2 Can a man be profitable unto God, as he that is wise may be profitable unto himself?

3 Is it any pleasure to the Almighty that thou art righteous? or is it gain to him that thou makest thy ways perfect?

4 Will he reprove thee for fear of thee? will he enter with thee into judgment?

5 Is not thy wickedness great, and thine iniquities infinite?

6 For thou hast taken a pledge from thy brother for nought, and stripped the naked of their clothing.

7 Thou hast not given water to the weary to drink, and thou hast withholden bread from the hungry.

8 But, as for the mighty man, he had the earth; and the honourable man dwelt in it.

9 Thou hast sent widows away empty, and the arms of the fatherless have been broken.

10 Therefore snares are round about thee, and sudden fear troubleth thee;

11 Or darkness, that thou canst not see; and abundance of waters cover thee.

12 Is not God in the height of heaven?

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXI.—Those who are once engaged in hot disputes often lose their way, through want of attention to their opponents. But what a mercy it is that saints have a gracious God to complain to when their friends refuse to hear what they say, or to regard their distress! And, though the present dispensations of providence sometimes stagger the faith and hope of the best of men, the last judgment will make all clear and plain. What a certain fact, and often a sad stumbling-block to the godly, is the prosperity of wicked men! It often hardens them in presumptuous impiety, to their own destruction. But it will never reconcile a tender saint to their manner of life. It entails upon themselves and families at last the greatest misery. And, however different their lot on earth, or the manner of their death, or pompous their burial, everlasting punishment in hell shall be their final portion. Let therefore their heart, their counsel, their practice, be far from me. And, while I adore the high sovereignty of God in his providence, let me never comfort myself with vain words! Where there is no truth there can be no solid comfort.

CHAP. XXII. Imagining that Job had accused God of injustice, in suffering the wicked to prosper and the righteous to be afflicted, Eliphaz, in great anger, replied, 2. Darest thou imagine that God is a gainer by our virtue, as we ourselves are, and so bound to reward us for it? 3. Can it add anything to his joy or profit that thou art ever so righteous and perfect? 4. Dost thou imagine that he corrects thee out of reverence to thee, or for fear thou shouldst hurt him? Will he, for fear of thee, either punish thee, or give thee an account of his conduct? 5. Are not thy own monstrous and unnumbered iniquities the true cause of thy fearful sufferings? 6. For without any just cause thou hast taken pledges from thy very brethren, and hast in the cruellest manner deprived the poor of their small remains of the preservatives of life. 7. Most inhumanly thou hast withheld, from the weary and starving, the most cheap and common supports of their life. 8. But the man who was high born, wealthy, and honoured, was thy favourite, and had thy land and estate at his service, and was sure to carry his cause at thy tribunal. 9. Thou hast spoiled widows of their just property, and cruelly oppressed, broken, and crushed, the orphans, depriving them of all their supports and comforts. 10. Therefore entangling troubles and dangers are every where round about thee; and sudden fears and terrible judgments affright thee. 11. Fearful troubles and perplexities so overwhelm thee, that thou hast neither a comfortable sense nor hope of relief left; and multitudes of afflictions have with violence burst forth upon thee.

them wealthy and powerful. Yet far be it from me to join with them in their impiety: 17. But let facts speak for themselves. How often are wicked men's shining prosperity and honour extinguished by fearful judgments, and justly merited destruction? How often does God, as by lot, distribute to them entangling bonds of trouble and sorrow in his anger? 18. How often are they of a sudden fearfully carried away before the sweeping whirlwinds of his awful judgments? 19. How often are either wicked men's children or themselves rewarded with fearful punishments? 20. How often do wicked men on earth experience the distinguishing judgments and hot burning wrath of the Almighty? 21. And, though their children should prosper, what pain, care, or pleasure, can they have about their house and family after they are cut off by an early death? 22. Dare any of you pretend to teach God how to govern the world, and whom to prosper and whom not? or to prescribe rules by which he must judge men, who, even the highest, are in death but the food of worms? 23, 24. Some men, both good and bad, die in the very prime of their life and height of their prosperity, and in a very easy manner. 25. Others die amidst torments of body and anguish of mind, without ever partaking of earthly happiness or pleasure: 26. They lie down together in the same condition in the grave, and the vermin make an equal prey of both; so that none can tell who is good or who is bad by any external events. 27. I can indeed easily foresee what you, in your reproachful speeches and imaginations, will think and say. 28. You will ask, What is become of my own once princely family, and of the dwellings of my children? And if providence had not plainly marked us out for wicked, by the fearful judgments which have befallen us? 29, 30. But cannot even the most common passenger tell you, that they have observed that wicked men are often preserved, as in a secret place, amidst destructive judgments, and are carried forth with pomp in the day of overflowing wrath, and the punishment of their crimes reserved for the other world? 31. Their power is often so great on earth, that nobody dare reprove or can punish them for their crimes. 32. Nay, they are brought in pomp to the grave, and honourably and quietly rest in their tombs. 33. They sleep as quietly in their graves as the best; and all men, whether good or bad, by little and little, follow them into that state of the dead, without any visible difference betwixt them. 34. Why then attempt ye to comfort me with unsubstantial hopes of future happiness? And why doth the vilest prevarication, inconsistent with the cause of God or your duty, continue to be the whole sum of your discourses?

14 Thick clouds are a covering to him, that he seeth not; and he walketh in the circuit of heaven.

15 Hast thou marked the old way which wicked men have trodden?

16 Which were cut down out of time; whose foundation was overflown with a flood;

17 Which said unto God, *Depart from us; and what can the Almighty do †for them?

18 Yet he filled their houses with good things: but the counsel of the wicked is far from me.

19 The righteous see it, and are glad: and the innocent laugh them to scorn.

20 Whereas our substance is not cut down, but the remnant of them the fire consumeth.

21 Acquaint now thyself †with him, and be at peace: thereby good shall come unto thee.

22 Receive, I pray thee, the law from his mouth, and lay up his words in thine heart.

23 If thou return to the Almighty, thou shalt be built up, thou shalt put away iniquity far from thy tabernacles.

24 Then shalt thou lay up gold as dust, and the gold of Ophir as the stones of the brooks.

25 Yea, the Almighty shall be thy defence, and thou shalt have plenty of silver.

26 For then shalt thou have thy delight in the Almighty, and shalt lift up thy face unto God.

27 Thou shalt make thy prayer unto him, and he shall hear thee, and thou shalt pay thy vows.

12. Is not God higher in place and dignity than the loftiest stars which thou observest? 13, 14. But, like an Atheist, you seem to think that God cannot know, or doth not care, what is done upon earth, but merely amuses himself in walking round the heavens. 15. Hast thou not eagerly followed, rather than prudently observed, the conduct or fate of those companions of vanity and wickedness who lived before the flood? 16. To whose horrid impieties God put a stop, by destroying them before their time, and carrying them off the earth by an overflowing deluge; 17. Who, in the most insolent manner, wished to have nothing to do with God, and imagined that nothing he could do for them could really profit them? 18. Yet it was he who granted them their whole prosperity. But God forbid that I should ever join in either principles, purposes, or practices, with such abandoned wretches. 19. The righteous shall with pleasure behold the destruction of such men as a vindication of the honor, holiness, and justice of God; and shall deride their folly in taking such courses as issue therein. 20. While the estates of such as are truly pious and virtuous remain unhurt by the providence of God, those who imitate these ancient sinners, are consumed by thunder, lightning, or some other fearful judgment. 2. But, since God hath not entirely consumed thee, try, without a moment's delay, to get the spiritual knowledge of God; accustom thyself to him by repeated supplications; receive peace from him; and quietly submit to him, by an unfeigned repentance. Thus shall all manner of blessings, temporal and eternal, come to thee. 22. Receive, and duly meditate on, the instructive revelations which he may be pleased to afford thee. 23. If by a true faith and sincere repentance thou turn to the Lord, thou shalt be again advanced to thy former honours and prosperity; and the punishment which thy sins have brought upon thee shall be removed far from thee, and whatever belongs to thee. 24. Then shalt thou lay up gold, and fine gold, in such amazing plenty, and with such ease, as if they were the most common things. 25. For the all-sufficient and almighty God shall be thy portion, and the protector of thy treasures; and thou shalt have astonishing heaps of silver. 26. Thou shalt delight thyself in the enjoyment of God's love and favour; and shalt with confidence and comfort present thyself at his throne of grace; and hope for his eternal felicity. 27. With sweet pleasure shall he hear thy prayers; and thou shalt pay thy vows of gratitude to him with the warmest affection. 28. Whatever thou hast purposed shall be accomplished; and divine direction, success, and comfort, shall attend all thy proceedings. 29. When wicked men around thee are distressed or destroyed, thou shalt confidently expect honour and felicity; and God shall bring to eminent and extensive happiness the person who is cast down in his own eyes. 30. Nay, at thy request he shall marvellously deliver, not

28 Thou shalt also decree a thing, and it shall be established unto thee: and the light shall shine upon thy ways.

29 When men are cast down, then thou shalt say, There is lifting up; and he shall save the humble person.

30 He shall deliver the island of the innocent: and it is delivered by the pureness of thine hands.

CHAP. XXIII.

Perhaps pleased with Eliphaz' excellent advices, Job answers more calmly in an address to God, and another to his friends. Here, in his address to God, he (1) Complains of his calamitous condition, and especially of God's withdrawal from him, that he could not get his cause heard; 2—5: nor discern the meaning of God's dealings with him; 8, 9: nor conceive any hope of relief; 13, 14: which made a grievous impression on his spirit; 15, 16, 17. (2) He comforts himself with the views of God's mercy; 6, 7: and of his own integrity before him; 10, 11, 12.

THEN Job answered and said, 2 Even to-day is my complaint bitter: my stroke is heavier than my groaning.

3 O that I knew where I might find him! that I might come even to his seat!

4 I would order my cause before him, and fill my mouth with arguments.

5 I would know the words which he would answer me, and understand what he would say unto me.

6 Will he plead against me with his great power? No; but he would put strength in me.

7 There the righteous might dispute with him; so should I be delivered for ever from my judge.

8 Behold, I go forward, but he is not there; and backward, but I cannot perceive him:

9 On the left hand, where he doth work, but I cannot behold him: he hideth himself on the right hand, that I cannot see him:

10 But he knoweth the way that I take: when he hath tried me I shall come forth as gold.

11 My foot hath held his steps; his way have I kept, and not declined.

only many innocents, but even the guilty, and their country, by means of thy prayers, piety, and virtue.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXII.—Nothing can be more absurd than to imagine that we can make God our debtor by any thing which we can do. We have nothing good in us, or done by us, but what is God's gift. None are too great for God to humble. And, if he spare the wicked, it is not for fear of them, but in patient pity towards them. Even good men, from a pretended regard to God, are apt to charge their neighbour with things which he heartily abhors. But, if God's greatness, omniscience, and equity, should deter men from crimes, they should also deter us from unjustly charging our neighbour with them. He that condemns the righteous is an abomination to the Lord. How tremendous are the judgments of heaven, and happy they who can safely rejoice amidst them; or who, in a Christian manner, take warning from them! Through ignorance of, and enmity against, God; through neglect and contempt of his word; and through obstinate continuance in sin; men lose the greatest blessings, and incur the greatest evils. But O the delight in God, the bold confidence towards him, the intimate fellowship with him, the satisfaction even in managing outward affairs, the safety in times of common calamity, and usefulness towards others,—that knowledge of and peace with God, spiritual improvement of God's word, and sincere repentance, do produce!

CHAP. XXIII. Job replied, 2. Notwithstanding all your pretended advices and comforts, I have as much reason for bitter complaints as ever; and my sufferings far exceed my expressions of grief. 3. O that I were admitted into God's own immediate presence, and allowed to present myself before his judgment-seat! 4. I would in an orderly manner set the justice of my cause before him, and fully support it with arguments, vindicating myself, and confuting your reproachful allegations. 5. I would insist for his decision whether I be an hypocrite or not; and that he would shew me plainly why he hath so afflicted me. 6. Would he employ his infinite power and majesty to bear me down? No; but would mercifully strengthen and encourage me to plead with him. And, suppose he should plead against me in the multitude of his strength, he certainly would lay no false charge against me, nor make any hostile attack upon me. 7. For at his throne of grace a righteous person, such as I am, may argue the matter with him; and by this means I should fully and for ever escape condemnation, being acquitted by him as my Judge. 8, 9. I have tried all methods to obtain a fair hearing of my cause before him, but have not hitherto been able to procure it. 10. But he knows the integrity of my 12 Neither have I gone back from the commandment of his lips; ¹⁴ I have esteemed the words of his mouth more than ¹⁵ my necessary food.

13 But he is in one mind, and ¹⁶ who can turn him? and ¹⁷ what his soul desireth, even that he doth.

14 For he performeth the thing that is ¹⁵ appointed for me: and ¹⁶ many such things are with him.

15 Therefore ¹⁶ am I troubled at his presence: when I consider, I am afraid of him.

16 For God ¹⁷ maketh my heart soft, and the Almighty troubleth me:

17 Because I was not cut off ¹⁸ before the darkness, neither hath he covered the darkness from my face.

CHAP. XXIV.

Having vented his griefs to his God, Job here defends his character and sentiment against his friends. After hinting that the instances of God's ordinarily punishing the wicked in this life are not discernible to his favourites, he shews, (1) That those who most openly injure, oppress, and enslave, the poor, are not punished, nor the poor redressed, in this life; 2—12, 21, 22. (2) That many, who are secret practisers of mischief, murder, adultery, and theft, go both undiscovered and unpunished in this life; 13—17. (3) That, even when God punishes sinners with secret judgments in this life, he reserves the more visible ones till death and eternity; 18, 19, 20, 23, 24, 25.

WHY, seeing ¹ times are not hidden from the Almighty, do ² they that know him not see his days?

2 Some ³ remove the land marks; they violently take away flocks, and ⁴ feed thereof.

3 They ⁵ drive away the ass of the fatherless; they take the widow's ox for a pledge.

4 They ⁶ turn the needy out of the way; the poor of the earth hide themselves together.

5 Behold, as ⁷ wild asses in the desert, go they forth to their work, rising ⁸ betimes for a prey: the wilderness yieldeth food for them and for their children.

6 They reap every one his ⁹ corn in the field; and ¹⁰ they gather the vintage of the wicked.

7 They ¹¹ cause the naked to lodge without clothing, that ¹² they have no covering in the cold.

8 They are ⁹ wet with the showers of the mountains, and embrace the rock for want of a shelter.

9 They ¹⁰ pluck the fatherless from the breast, and take a pledge of the poor.

10 They ¹¹ cause him to go naked without clothing, and they take away the sheaf from the hungry;

11 Which make oil within their walls, and tread their wine presses, and suffer thirst.

12 ¹³ Men groan from out of the city, and the soul of the wounded crieth out: yet God ¹⁴ layeth not folly to them.

13 They are of those that ¹⁵ rebel against the light; they know not the ways thereof, nor abide in the paths thereof.

14 ¹⁶ The murderer, rising with the light, killeth the poor and needy, and in the night is as a thief.

15 ¹⁷ The eye also of the adulterer waiteth for the twilight, saying, No eye shall see me: and ¹⁸ disguiseth his face.

16 ¹⁹ In the dark they dig through houses, which they had marked for themselves in the day time: they ²⁰ know not the light.

17 For the morning is to them even ²¹ as the shadow of death: if ²² one know them, they are in the terrors of the shadow of death.

18 He is ²³ swift as the waters; their portion is cursed in the earth: he ²⁴ be- holdeth not the way of the vineyards.

19 Drought and heat ²⁵ consume the snow waters: so ²⁶ doth the grave those which have sinned.

20 The womb shall forget him; the worm ²⁷ shall feed sweetly on him; he ²⁸ shall be no more remembered; and wickedness shall ²⁹ be broken as a tree.

21 ³⁰ He evil entreateth the barren that beareth not; and doth ³¹ not good to the widow.

22 He ³² draweth also the mighty with his power: he riseth up, ³³ and no man is sure of life.

23 Though ³⁴ it be given him to be in safety, whereon he resteth, yet ³⁵ his eyes are upon their ways.

posing our minds. Let him do what he will, he cannot but do right. However terrible he is in himself, in Christ he is infinitely engaging. Let us therefore always acquiesce in his works, and delight in himself. There is no reason rashly to wish for death, when God can so quickly render life a comfort to us and a service to his church.

CHAP. XXIV. But if God always punishes the wicked in this world, as you pretend, why are not particular seasons of it fixed by him? and why do not those who are best acquainted with him observe those days of vengeance on their enemies? 2. Certain it is that in this world some are notoriously covetous and unjust, and even open robbers. 3. They cruelly oppress widows and fatherless children. 4. They harass, terrify, or even imprison, the meek, poor, and afflicted. 5. In the most unconcerned manner they carry on their oppressions; and by rapine and violence maintain themselves and families in the desert. 6. They reap fields and gather vineyards not their own. 7, 8. They force from the poor whatever they have, till they reduce them to absolute misery, in a state similar to that of wild beasts. 9—11. While they inhumanly deprive infants of their provision that the enslaved mothers may work, and deprive their poor underlings of the meanest necessities of life, they force them to labour in the hardest services. 12. Those whom they have oppressed, wounded, or unjustly condemned, mightily cry to God for vengeance against them; yet he punishes them not, even in the slightest manner. 13. They conspire impudently in the face of the sun, and against the light of nature, conscience, and revelation: they do not approve, delight in, or observe, God's laws; and, if at any time they stumble on a good action, they quickly give it over, however easy and reasonable. 14—17. Hating the light, robbers and unclean persons, in defiance of an all-seeing God, earnestly carry on their murder and whoredom in the night season. 18. Lighter than froth, they rush on every opportunity of uncleanness or bloodshed; their inheritance is spent in the most accursed manner; and they quite disregard the management of the vineyards, or other most profitable business. 19. After all, the grave, in a quick and easy manner, consumes these notorious sinners. 20. Their very mother easily forget their death, it is apparently so pleasant. Rottenness shall be sweet to them. They do not become infamous in the world, but their crimes are quickly and altogether forgotten. 21, 22. They abuse barren women, injure widows, and with great activity, craft, and cruelty, oppress every body around heart and life; and whenever I am tried at his bar I shall come off sufficiently vindicated; and it is to render me more holy and pure that he tries me in this furnace of affliction. 11. I have always in the most fixed and steady manner, followed his pattern and guidance. I have stedfastly observed his commandments, without ever swerving from them. 12. I have never apostatized from his doctrines nor precepts; and have more earnestly sought, more highly prized, more heartily delighted in, and more carefully stored up, his words of revelation than my necessary food, or most valuable and precious things. 13. But his purposes are unchangeable, and he immovably persists in afflicting me, and does whatever he pleases, without giving to any a reason for his conduct. 14. Whatever trouble he has intended for me he will inflict: and in his purposes and providential conduct there are many instances of high sovereignty, of which, though both wise and just, we cannot see the reason. 15. In consideration of his infinite majesty, and sovereign and irresistible power, I am troubled at the tokens of his anger; and when I leisurely consider his hard dealings with me, I am afraid of him. 16. For, in his infinite power, he hath quite broken and melted my heart with fiery tribulations; and I am in perpetual terror of his inflicting still heavier strokes. 17. For he keeps me still alive under these terrible troubles and perplexities, and refuses me the favour of dying by his fearful and confounding strokes.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIII.—Our groanings should never be heavier than our strokes. God allows us to complain of our troubles, but never to murmur at them. It is becoming for saints to be earnestly desirous of close dealing with God; and to be particular and importunate in their requests at his throne of grace. However men abuse us, God will not only deal in equity, but even in great mercy, with his people. And it is proper always to keep up kind and exalted thoughts of him. They who fly to him in distress shall find their spiritual strength increased by every application; and, if he acquit us, we need neither fear nor care who condemn us. But O what dark and perplexing nights of desertion and perplexity are God's choicest saints often afflicted with! Happy are those who, amidst all, cleave to his commandments, walk uprightly in his way, and feed daily by faith on his word! Their trials shall issue to their lasting honour and advantage. But it is sad when the immutability of God's counsels, and the exact execution of them, the irresistibility of his power, and ordinary methods of providence, disquiet instead of com-

24 They are 'exalted for a little while, but are gone and brought low; they are taken out of the way as all other, and cut off as the tops of the ears of corn.

25 And, 'if it be not so now, who will make me a liar, and make my speech nothing worth?

CHAP. XXV.

Unable to confute the proofs which Job had advanced, Bildad, as one sick of the dispute, drops it, and only suggests that God was infinitely too high for Job to make such bold appeals to him; [chap. xxiii.] (1) He represents God as sovereign Lord of all creatures; adored and submitted to by all the heavenly hosts; and that his power is irresistible, and his providence extends to all; 2, 3, 5. (2) He represents man as exceeding mean and impure before God; 4, 6.

THEN answered Bildad the Shuhite, and said,

2 'Dominion and fear are with him; he maketh peace in his high places.

3 Is there any 'number of his armies? and upon whom doth not his light arise?

4 'How then can man be justified with God? or how can he be clean that is born of a woman?

5 Behold 'even to the moon, and it shineth not; yea, the stars are not pure in his sight.

6 How 'much less man that is a worm; and the son of man which is a worm?

CHAP. XXVI.

In answer to Bildad, Job (1) Ridicules his speech as nothing to the present purpose, however true it might be in itself; 1—4. (2) To shew Bildad how needless it was to instruct him in such things, he descants more largely on God's power and wisdom, as manifested on earth, in the sea, in hell, and in heaven; 5—13. (3) Suggests that it was but very little any of mankind knew or could speak concerning the excellencies of God; 14.

BUT Job answered and said,

2 How hast thou 'helped him that is without power? how savest thou the arm that hath no strength?

3 How hast 'thou counselled him that

23. And, though men give them presents, that they may have their protection and friendship, they still watch for opportunities to injure these dependants. 24. After being exalted a while, they come to their graves, as seasonably, in appearance, and as easily, as their neighbours. 25. But, if you will insist that the wicked are always fearfully punished in this life, I dare challenge the whole world to find me the person who can disprove the facts which I have now stated.

N. B. Ver. 18—20, 23, 24, may be interpreted as a representation of the miserable state of wicked men after all their prosperity.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIV.—God fixes his time and manner of punishing sinners as he pleases: and none can know either love or hatred by all that is before him in his outward lot. While the saints and poor, who are the special charge of God, are remarkably afflicted, the most daring sinners are often remarkably prosperous in this world. But the Lord has not forsaken the earth: he takes notice of every injury done to his children. And, however long his patience may bear with the presumptuous insults of sinners to his character and government, he will resent their wickedness at last. Even when they are most secure they are least safe. Though their success promise them impunity a while, and though their crimes should be concealed on earth, they will be openly discovered at last, and punished for ever. Amidst the perpetration of crimes, terror often seizes them; but how much more in sharing the certain, the fearful, the eternal, punishment of them!

CHAP. XXV. Bildad replied, 2. To God belongs that supreme authority over all things in heaven and earth, and that infinite majesty which strikes every beholder into solemn awe. In perfect quietness and order he rules all the luminaries in the firmament, and all the angels and glorified saints above. Why then darest thou pretend to find fault with him? 3. His creatures are absolutely innumerable to us, and every one shares of his light, his benefits of nature or grace;—why then contend with him? 4. And how then can a poor wretched man stand as righteous before God; and he that is born of a sinful woman be pure before him? 5. In his view the bright luminaries of heaven are spotted and dark. 6. How mean and vile then must the frail and dying children of a corrupted progenitor and covenant-head be in his sight!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXV.—After long and hot disputing, people often come to see that there was less difference between them than they thought. Job's friends were obliged to acknowledge that wicked persons might prosper for a time, and Job owned that they would be destroyed at last. It were a great mercy for religious disputants to have their hearts always filled with awful thoughts of God and humble thoughts of themselves. But how infinite is the condescension of God to hold fellowship with men, so mean, so loathsome! Let me never forget how JEREMIAH assumed my nature, and in it for me became a worm and no man; a reproach of men, and despised of the people! What manner of love hath the Father bestowed on us in thus sending forth his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, that we sinful worms might, through his blood, become the sons of God!

4 'To whom hast thou uttered words? and whose spirit came from thee?

5 'Dead things are formed from under the waters, and the inhabitants thereof.

6 'Hell is naked before him, and destruction hath no covering.

7 He 'stretcheth out the north over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing.

8 He 'bindeth up the waters in his thick clouds, and the cloud is not rent under them.

9 He 'holdeth back the face of his throne, and spreadeth his cloud upon it.

10 He 'hath compassed the waters with bounds until the day and night come to an end.

11 The 'pillars of heaven tremble and are astonished at his reproof.

12 He 'divideth the sea with his power, and by his understanding he smiteth through 'the proud.

13 By 'his spirit he hath garnished the heavens; his hand hath formed 'the crooked serpent.

14 Lo, these are part of his ways; but 'how little a portion is heard of him! but the thunder of his power who can understand!

CHAP. XXVII.

Convinced of their mistake, or despairing of success, in persuading Job that he was an hypocrite, his three friends give up the dispute. He therefore proceeds in a long speech. Here, (1) In a solemn appeal to God, he protests his own integrity, and his resolution to hold it fast while he lived; 1—6. (2) He expresses his dread of that hypocrisy with which they charged him; 7—10. (3) He maintains, that, though wicked men may prosper for a time in their family, estate, or person, yet the curse of God, which blasts their glory, constantly attends them in all things, and will at last render them miserable in death or after it; 11—23.

CHAP. XXVI. To this Job, in a derisive manner, answered, 2, 3. To what purpose serve these hints, either to support the cause of the Almighty, or to direct him in his government of the world, or to comfort a dispirited, and instruct an ignorant, soul? Who can be a whit bettered by aught you have so confidently uttered, that is quite foreign to the point in hand? 4. Do you imagine that I need to be instructed in these points? or that you, as one inspired of God, can by such hints revive and refresh my spirit? 5. I myself can discourse to far better purpose concerning God. While terrible monsters, minerals, pearl, coral, and the like, are formed in the bottom of the sea, or heart of the earth, and fishes and animals on the surface of it, the departed ghosts tremble, and travail in pain, in the deep and dark regions of misery. 6. The whole state of the dead, whether of soul or body is perfectly obvious to God's all-seeing eye; and all the depths and miseries of hell are perpetually visible to him. 7. He spreads the heavens over the apparently empty regions of air; and so balances the earth by his power, that it hangs like a ball in the air, supported by nothing. 8. He binds up large collections of water in the clouds (by which he covers his glory, and on which he rides in majesty) as in firm bags, till he please to make them distil in dew, rain, snow, or hail. 9. He conceals his own glorious abodes; he firmly fixes the visible heavens, and spreads his vailing collection of clouds over them, to conceal his glory and restrain the scorching beams of the sun. 10. Every where, while the revolutions of day and night continue, he has fixed the shores and boundaries of the sea, that, rage as it will, it cannot exceed them. 11. The lofty mountains, which seem the supporting pillars of heaven, tremble and shake when he corrects men by earthquakes, thunders, or tempests. 12. By his power he tosses the sea into a terrible fury, and as it were divides it into ridges and mountainous billows; and, by his wise government, he again calms it at pleasure, and mortally wounds the crocodiles, and other proud monsters which inhabit it. 13. By the influence of his holy Spirit he at first adorned the heavens by his power; he formed the milky way, and all their winding constellations. By his wind he clears up the sky; and his almighty power strikes prostrate the most direful and destructive monsters of sea or land. 14. Nay, behold, these are but the outlines, and a very small parcel of his works. It is but very little that we either hear or know concerning him; but the thunder-like declarations of his prevailing, his infinite excellency, who can comprehend?

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVI.—Sometimes self-conceited persons may be ridiculed out of their notions when reasoning is not effectual: and in disputes much is ordinarily said that is not to the present purpose; and not the edification of their neighbour, but victory over him, is the great aim of the disputants. Little is it remembered that not the displays of God's highness, but of his grace in Christ, can give ease to a wounded spirit. But it is happy when disputes end in men's glorifying God with one mind and one mouth. The perfections of the Deity are plainly marked in all his works of nature and grace; and all things must be well done where God himself is the sole or principal agent. Let me therefore in all behold his hand, his face. If he conceal the glories of his throne from this lower world, let me walk by faith, not by sight. If he has garnished the heavens, let me set my affections on things above, and not on things of the earth. If his perfections are unsearchable, let me always admire and adore him.

CHAP. XXVII. None offering to speak, Job continued his substantial, but dark and mysterious, discourse, saying, 2. I protest by the Almighty God, who refuses me an opportunity of clearing myself before him, and who has tormented me with all these fearful strokes of his vengeance, 3, 4. That, while I live, I will never utter an untruth, either to vindicate myself where I am guilty, or to condemn myself where I am innocent. 5, 6. God forbid that ever I should justify your opinions and censures, deny my own sincerity, and confess myself to be an hypocrite! 7. It is mine enemies and opposers whom God will condemn and punish as wicked. And indeed I could wish nothing worse to my greatest enemy and injurer than to be wicked.—So much I detest it. 8. For what avails the firmest hopes of an hypocrite in all his covetously-gained prosperity, or even inward tranquillity of soul, when he comes to die? 9. Will God always hear his prayers in the time of trouble and death? 10. Or will he find comfort in God when the world affords none? or will he in prosperity as well as in adversity continue in the earnest worship and service of God? 11. Attend therefore while, by God's assistance, I candidly inform you of some of the mysteries of his Almighty providence. 12. Certain it is that every one of you know from experience the truth of what I am to say. Why then should you thus absurdly attempt to prove the contrary? 13. Far be it from me to imagine that God loves hypocrites and oppressors. No; though for a time they prosper, the Almighty has reserved treasures of vengeance for them and their posterity, as the just reward of their wickedness. 14. The numerous and once-flourishing families are condemned to destruction by the sword of justice or war, or to be starved by famine. 15. Such as escape the sword and famine shall be cut off by the noisome pestilence. And, none adventuring to bury them, they shall lie unburied, or be interred in an ignominious manner; and their widows shall either want affection, or not be in life, to bewail their unhappy end. 16, 17. Though these wicked men should treasure up ever so much wealth or costly apparel, they shall only have the labour of procuring it; for God shall destroy them, and bestow their wealth upon such as will do more good with it. 18. They may build their houses as strong as they please, and settle their estates in the surest forms; but God will quickly shake them out of all, or render them useless to them. 19. In the twinkling of an eye death shall overtake these rich sinners, and carry them off, as wretchedly poor, into the eternal state; and even perhaps without an honourable burial or monument on earth. 20. Manifold terrors seize upon them; and some surprising calamity often hurries them unexpectedly into the other world, where 17 He may prepare it, but ^ythe just shall put it on, and the innocent shall divide the silver.

18 He buildeth his house ^zas a moth, and ^aas a booth that the keeper maketh.

19 The rich man shall ^blie down, but he shall not be ^cgathered: he ^dopeneth his eyes, and he is not.

20 ^eTerrors take hold on him as waters; ^fa tempest stealeth him away in the night.

21 ^gThe east wind carrieth him away, and he departeth; and as a storm hurleth him out of his place.

22 For God shall ^hcast upon him, and not spare: ⁱhe would ^jfain flee out of his hand.

23 ^kMen shall ^lclap their hands at him, and shall hiss him out of his place.

CHAP. XXVIII.

To shew that it is no wonder we cannot comprehend every dispensation of providence relative to the prosperity or punishment of men, Job here observes (1) Concerning worldly riches, what pains men have to take, what contrivances to frame, and what hazards to run, for them; 1—11. (2) Concerning true wisdom, that its value is far beyond all riches of this world; 12—19: and its residence more secret; 13, 14, 20, 21, 22. (3) That there are secret mysteries, which God hath reserved to himself alone; 23—27: and a wisdom relative to right knowledge and practice, revealed to men for their study and advantage; 28.

SURELY there is ^aa vein for the silver, and a place for gold, where ^bthey fine it.

2 Iron is taken out of the ^cearth, and brass is molten out of the stone.

3 He setteth an end to darkness, and ^dsearcheth out all perfection; the stones of darkness and the shadow of death.

4 The flood breaketh out from the inhabitant; even the waters ^eforgotten of the foot: they are dried up, they are gone away from men.

5 As for the earth, ^fout of it cometh bread; and under it is turned up as it were ^gfire.

6 The stones of it ^hare the place of ⁱsapphires; and it hath ^jdust of gold.

the terrors of God shall overwhelm them as the waters did the old world; and in that eternal night shall the sweeping tempest of infinite wrath unexpectedly seize on and ruin them. 21. Some violent and pestilential affliction, some raging and burning storm of God's just vengeance, hurls them out of their wonted felicity, residence, and life, and deprives them of all the good which they expected. 22, 23. While God pursues them with manifold forms of unmixed and unavoidable vengeance, men, who are thereby delivered from their oppressions, shall deride them, rejoice at their fall, and detest their memory.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVII.—Appeals to God ought to be necessary, deliberate, serious, and in matters of importance. Prevarication or concealment is as much perjury before God as direct falsehood asserted. But how often our high praises of God are mingled with something unkindly and disparaging! Not our most solemn vows, but Jesus' blood and Spirit, must chiefly maintain our purity of conscience and integrity of life. And, while he enables us to exercise a conscience void of offence towards God and men, we ought never to believe either devils or men suggesting that we are hypocrites. But it is best to refute the calumnies cast upon us by living well. Miserable indeed are hypocrites, whose hopes will never be crowned with enjoyment, their prayers never accepted nor graciously answered, and whose religion is neither comfortable nor constant! And yet, alas! how many such, amidst a glare of profession, continue with hearts unrenewed! Miserable is the condition of the wicked, even at its best, in this life; and what then must it be in hell? When once dead, their riches strangely vanish, and even fall into the hands of the godly, whom they hated: nor is any habitation secure and lasting but that which is not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. And in the most alarming forms of death God often ushers wicked men into eternal fire!

CHAP. XXVIII. No wonder that I cannot tell you the reasons why God punishes some wicked men in this world and not all, when, after all our researches, we have so scanty a knowledge of natural things.—There are secret mines for the silver, and a country for gold, which men melt and refine, 2. And iron is, with art and labour, dragged from the dust, and stones are melted into brass; 3. The miners, in the most earnest and daring manner dig till they have quite lost the light of day, and bring their ore from the dark caverns of the earth, where pestilential damps and other dangers often prove mortal. 4. While, with infinite labour, they drain off the springs that disturb them, they break into veins of metal about the bottom of mountains; and, unheeded by the men who walk above them, they wander in the dark bowels of the earth. 5, 6. While the surface of the ground produces herbs and corn for food to animals, lime, brimstone, and such other combustibles, are found in its bowels; nay, the most precious stones and gold in some parts of it. 7, 8. So mysterious are the passages of these miners, that the most quick-sighted fowls never looked into them, and the most fierce and courageous animals never dared to enter them. 9. But the miners artfully cut their way through rocks of flint, and dig to the bottoms of mountains, to come at the precious metals. 10. They make passages for draining off the water that breaks in upon them, and cleave asunder the veins of ore, and earnestly discover the precious stones and metals. 11. They stop the springs from overflowing their mine, turning them another way, and bring up these precious gems or metals, which had been long sealed up in the heart of the earth.—12. But to find out solid wisdom, or obtain the knowledge of God's reasons in his providential conduct, is still more difficult. 13. God hath so disposed it, that no man knows the order, method, or importance, of his procedure; and no man on earth can attain to it. 14. No search into the depths of the earth or sea can procure it. 15—19. Not all the precious metals or gems in the world can purchase it. 20, 21. No not the most quick-sighted creatures on earth can point out a method to obtain it. 22. The solid consideration of death and hell are a proper introduction to true wisdom; and yet in death and damnation there are manifold instances of God's wise procedure, which are not sufficiently comprehended in the reasons of them. 23—27. God alone; who is infinite in wisdom and knowledge, and who orders and disposes all things at his pleasure; who manages winds, waters, rains, and thunders, in all their circumstances, degree, time, place, or form; properly understands the reason of whatever he does, particularly his dealings with men. 28. But what he inculcates and bestows upon men, as their proper wisdom, is such a knowledge and filial awe of his unbounded excellencies as makes them to flee to him as their only refuge and portion; and, hating every thing sinful, to love him and keep his commandments.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVIII.—Alas! how men rack their wits, and toil their members, to obtain riches, which, while enjoyed, are unsubstantial, and which quickly take to themselves wings and fly away, as an eagle towards heaven! Why are we not more industrious in digging for Jesus' hidden treasures, 26 When he made a decree for the rain, and a way for the lightning of the thunder, 27 Then did he see it, and declare it; he prepared it, yea, and searched it out.

28 And unto man he said, Behold, the fear of the LORD, that is wisdom; and to depart from evil is understanding.

CHAP. XXIX.

None of his friends offering to speak, Job, to move their pity, and excuse, if not justify, his own complaints, in this chapter, represents the height of prosperity from which he had fallen, and in the next the depth of adversity he had fallen into. Here he shews (1) What abundant comfort he had at home, in his protecting and smiling God, his numerous family, and large estate; 1—6. (2) What distinguishing honour and power he had in his country, and what respect was paid to him by all sorts of people; 7—11. (3) What remarkable good he did in his station as a magistrate, helping the destitute, checking the oppressors, and administering justice to all; 12—17. (4) What an encouraging prospect he had of the continuance of his happiness at home; 18, 19, 20: and influence abroad; 21—25.

MOREOVER, Job continued his parable, and said,

2 Oh that I were as in months past, as in the days when God preserved me;

3 When his candle shined upon my head, and when by his light I walked through darkness;

4 As I was in the days of my youth, when the secret of God was upon my tabernacle;

5 When the Almighty was yet with me, when my children were about me;

6 When I washed my steps with butter, and the rock poured me out rivers of oil;

7 When I went out to the gate through the city, when I prepared my seat in the street!

8 The young men saw me, and hid themselves; and the aged arose, and stood up.

9 The princes refrained talking, and laid their hand on their mouth.

10 The nobles held their peace, and their tongue cleaved to the roof of their mouth.

11 When the ear heard me, then it blessed me; and, when the eye saw me, it gave witness to me:

12 Because I delivered the poor that cried, and the fatherless, and him that had none to help him.

13 The blessing of him that was ready which answer all things, and endure for ever! Surely Jesus and his mysteries, Jesus and his grace, must be strangely mistaken when men can thus prefer created trifles and rareties of dust! But how great is that God whose eye overlooks all, whose power effects all, whose purpose fixes all things! Let me never dare to pry into his private counsels, whereby he regulates his conduct. Let me leave the secrets of other men's hearts, and the deep mysteries of providence to the Lord. And let me and my children study what he has revealed to us as the standard of our faith and practice. Let us learn the wisdom which comes from above, which is pure and peaceable, manifested in fearing the Lord, and departing from evil.

CHAP. XXIX. After another pause, Job proceeded in his spirited vindication of himself, saying. 2. O that God would re-establish me in my former prosperity of person, family, and estate, as in the days wherein he watched over and protected me! 3. When his blessing and favour directed and prospered me in all my affairs, and made me to pass untouched through all the troubles and inconveniences of life, and the various dangers, difficulties, and calamities, which befel others around me. 4. When God Almighty continued so kind to and familiar with me, and my children and servants were round about me; 6. When, whithersoever I turned myself, I abounded in all sorts of the choicest blessings; 7. When I took my seat in the places of judicature and concourse, 8. The young men stood in the most profound awe of me, and the aged stood up in reverence, and ceased to speak. 9, 10. Nay, from regard to my superior authority, princes, the most noble not excepted, refrained from speaking. 11. They who heard me judge in a cause pronounced me highly favoured of God, and richly endowed with his gifts and grace, and prayed for his distinguished blessings upon me: and they who observed my just procedure, attested my pious, just, and blameless, conversation; 12. Because I never failed to redress the grievances of poor, fatherless, and destitute persons, who complained to me. 13. Many blessed me, as the instrument of delivering them when they were upon the point of being ruined by false accusations; and I caused the widow's heart to sing with

CHAP. XXX.

But how is the fine gold changed! Here is (1) Job's great adversity, correspondent to his great prosperity. 1. He had lived in great honour, respected by the highest; but now he was fallen into great disgrace, and contemned and vilified by the meanest; 1—14: 2. He had enjoyed much inward comfort; but now he was become a terror and burden to himself; 15, 16: and overwhelmed with grief; 28—31: 3. He had enjoyed a confirmed state of health; but now he was sick and in pain; 17, 19, 29, 30: 4. Once the secret of God was with him; now God had shut him out from intimacy with him; 20—22: 5. Once he had promised himself long life; but now he saw death at his door; 23. (2) The aggravating and alleviating circumstances of his trouble. Two things made it more heavy; viz. that it had surprised him when he expected prosperity; 26, 27: and that the change was so very great; 31: and two things gave him some relief under it; viz. that his trouble would not follow him to the grave; 24: and that in his prosperity he had sympathized with those that were in misery; 25.

BUT now they that are *younger than I 'have me in derision, whose fathers I would have 'disdained to have set with the dogs of my flock.

2 Yea, whereto might the strength of their hands profit me in whom old age was perished?

3 (For want and famine they were †solitary; 'fleeing into the wilderness †in former time desolate and waste:

4 Who 'cut up mallows by the bushes, and juniper roots for their meat.

5 They 'were driven forth from among men, they cried after them as after a thief);

6 To dwell in the clefts of the valleys, in ‖caves of the earth, and in the rocks.

7 Among the bushes they 'brayed; under the nettles they were gathered together.

8 They were children of fools, yea, children of *base men: they were viler than the earth.

9 'And now I am their song, yea, I am their by-word.

10 They 'abhor me, they flee far from me, 'and spare not to spit in my face.

11 Because 'he hath loosed my cord, and afflicted me, they have also 'let loose the bridle before me.

12 Upon my 'right hand rise the youth; they push away my feet, and they raise up against me the ways of their destruction.

13 They 'mar my path, they set forward my calamity, they have no helper.

14 They came upon me 'as a wide breaking in of waters: in the desolation they rolled themselves upon me.

15 'Terrors are turned upon me: they pursue †my soul as the wind: and my welfare passeth away 'as a cloud.

16 And now my 'soul is poured out upon me; the days of affliction have taken hold upon me.

17 My 'bones are pierced in me in the night season; and my sinews take no rest.

18 'By the great force of my disease is my garment changed: it bindeth me about as the collar of my coat.

19 He hath 'cast me into the mire, and I am become like *dust and ashes.

20 'I cry unto thee, and thou dost not hear me: I stand up, and thou regardest me not.

joy for her great and unexpected deliverances, and the favours which I granted her.

14. In all my sentences I fixed my attention on what was just and upright; and the decisions I gave were an honour to me.

15. I instructed, directed, and assisted, such as could not manage their own affairs; and was ever ready to help and comfort such as could not help themselves.

16. I was a kind teacher, provider, and protector, to the poor; and carefully inquired into their circumstances, as well as into their difficult and obscure pleas.

17. By proper punishments and restraints I rendered the wicked incapable of oppressing; and forced them to restore that which they had violently extorted.

18. Then I vainly imagined that, after a long life of amazing prosperity, I should die quietly in my own house, among my children and friends;

19. That my remarkable happiness should certainly continue, as I had every mean of preserving and securing it;

20. That the honour and respect which I had from others, and my abilities and powers, should still continue with me;

21, 22. That men should still regard my advices and decisions with the profoundest respect;

23. That they should always be exceedingly desirous to hear my opinion and judgment on a point;

24. That, though I carried myself familiarly towards them, they should still stand in awe, and carefully avoid every thing which might deprive them of my favour;

25. And that I should still be regarded as their principal director in their conduct, and affectionate comforter under their troubles.

N.B. Ver. 20—25 may also be read in the past time, as in our translation.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIX.—What holiness, comfort, and honour, God bestows upon his favourites when it is for his glory and their good! But those who prosper in youth know little what dark and cloudy days may be in reserve for them. It is pleasant, however, to commemorate our early intimacies with God, and his kind protection of us, or communications of light, life, and comfort to our heart: and, if they be lost, God allows us to pray for the restoration of our mercies, spiritual and temporal. Faith in God, and intimate fellowship with him, remarkably contribute to render men truly honourable and useful in this world. And it is comely in a state when judges are grave, solemn, and impartial, helpers to the poor, and terrors to the oppressors; and when people are modest, submissive, and grateful: but, when men have great wealth at home, and are regarded as the oracle, the darling sovereign, and comforter, of their country, how apt are they to suppose their felicity secured, and to forget the evil day!

CHAP. XXX. But now, alas! the youths, who durst scarcely look me in the face, mock and deride me, even those whose infamous parents I would have disdained to have employed in attending my dogs, or in other of the vilest services;

2. Being indeed so lazy, listless, and weak, that it was in vain to employ them in any thing, after they had lived so long abandoning themselves to wickedness;

3—8. Base and beggarly fellows, who, ashamed of their poverty, and to prevent the punishment of their wickedness, had fled into deserts, and there, like wild beasts, lived upon roots and herbs, and lodged in dens, caves, and bushes.

9. But now they triumph over me, and make my calamities the subject of their songs and merry conversation.

10. Heartily abhorring me, they disdain to come near me, unless it be contemptuously to spit in my face.

11. Because God has deprived me of my authority, wealth, and honour, and has grievously afflicted me, they take an unrestrained liberty in their insolent behaviour towards me.

12. The very boys place themselves as my accusers; they insolently abuse me; and attempt, by different methods, to destroy me.

13. They endeavour to obstruct all means of comfort and relief to me. They so disturb my mind that I know not what to do. Without having or needing any assistance, they in the most presumptuous manner increase my calamities.

14. With the most furious and destructive violence, they assault me: and, when God has deprived me of my substance, family, and health, they insult me in the most noisy forms.

15. Terrors, directed by God against me, seize upon me in the most violent and irresistible manner; and my abundant prosperity is quickly, in a moment, over and gone.

16. By reason of my terrible afflictions my courage and resolution are quite exhausted, and the powers of my soul so wasted that I can do nothing but melt into tears, and faint away with grief.

17. In the night, when others rest, my bones are, as it were, pierced and bruised with pain; and the worms, terrors, and agonies, that torment me, never take rest.

18. By their fearful force my boils, which cover me all over, are like an outer garment to me, and gird me round about; and their filthy matter stains my clothes, and glues them fast to my skin, that I can scarcely get them changed.

19. I am fearfully plunged into filthy troubles. My foul sores render me like dust and ashes, and

CHAP. XXXI.

Already Job had often protested his integrity in general; but, as his friends had charged him with particular sins; chap. xxii. 6—14: without any proof, he here purges himself on oath; 6, 14, 23, 35, 36, 37: from a variety of gross and secret sins; particularly (1) Wantonness and uncleanness of heart; 1—4. (2) Fraud and injustice in commerce; 5—8. (3) Adultery; 9—12. (4) Haughtiness and severity towards his servants; 13—15. (5) Unmercifulness to the poor, widows, fatherless; 16—23: and strangers; 32. (6) Carnal confidence in his wealth; 24, 25. (7) Idolatry; 26—28. (8) Revenge, 29—31. (9) Hypocrisy, in concealing his own sin; or cowardice, in conniving at the sin of others; 33, 34. (10) Oppression of labourers, and other violent invasion of other people's rights; 38—40: and meanwhile he shews that he had avoided these evils upon good principles, making the fear of God the spring of his justice and charity; 2, 6, 14, 28, 35.

Truly by thy thus dealing with me I see that I need look for nothing but death and the grave, that common sanctuary of mankind. 24. And I hope God will neither exert his almighty power to rescue me from the grave, nor let me in my passage cry out of pains; let friends entreat for my life as they will: nor use it to molest me there, but give me refreshing ease in the state of the dead. 25. Did not I always sympathize with others in their distress and poverty? And do not I now weep as one condemned to a period of trouble? How insupportable are the inward torments of my body, and the anguish of my soul! Days of fearful affliction have rushed upon me before I was aware. 28. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXX.—Unsubstantial, uncertain, and transient, are all things but God and the spiritual blessings of his new covenant. But sin, even on earth, makes many the most base and miserable of wretches: the youngest in age, the meanest in extraction, the poorest in property, and the most scandalous in character, are generally the most ready to contemn, insult, and abuse, the greatest and best, when Providence once frowns upon them. And it is hard for wounded spirits to bear up under complicated troubles, terrors of mind, loathsome and painful diseases of body, and frowns of God. But happy are they who can by faith take up the eternal enjoyment of God as a full balance to all the troubles which they can suffer on earth! Happy are they who have the testimony of a good conscience that in simplicity and godly sincerity they have had their conversation in this world!

CHAP. XXXI. Ver. 6. Let me be tried by an upright impartial judge, that God may acknowledge and approve mine integrity. 7, 8. If I have knowingly, willingly, and ordinarily, wandered out of the way of my duty, have indulged my heart in covetousness or lust, or my hands in bribery and injustice, let all that I have be bestowed on others, and my children, plants, and trees be rooted up. 9, 10. CHAP. XXXII.

Job's friends had no more to say in opposition to his character and sentiments, and he had no more to say in his own vindication; Elihu, therefore, a younger friend, interposes betwixt them as mediator. Here is (1) Some account of him, and his reason for speaking; 1—5. (2) His apology for speaking on a question which had been so largely and learnedly debated by his superiors:—in which he suggests, 1. That, though he had not the experience of an old man, yet he had the understanding of a man; 6—10. 2. That he had with great patience heard all they had to say; 11—13. 3. That he had something new to offer on the point; 14—17. 4. That his mind was so full of this matter that it would be a refreshment to him to give it vent; 18—20. 5. That he would speak impartially; 21, 22.

watched for opportunities to defile my neighbour's bed, let my own wife be a slave and a whore to others.—26, 27. If I have beheld the sun or moon with any idolatrous regard, or have had any inward inclination to esteem them as deities, or have given them any external worship.—34. Did ever fear of men terrify me from candid confession of my sin, or from any other duty;—or, if I have concealed my faults, let me be overwhelmed with the terror and contempt of men till I be ashamed to be seen.—35—37. O that I had but an impartial judge, and that my accuser would give a written charge! I should prize it as an honour, since every article would then be proved false:—I would, with undaunted courage, and confidence of success, give a candid account of my past conduct, to see of what he could accuse me.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXI.—How diversified are the forms in which inward corruption breaks forth among mankind. And there is great need of purifying the heart, of solemn dedication to God, of watchfulness over both soul and senses, and of constant, awful, and engaging, impressions of God, to promote an holy and circumspect life. It is highly honourable to be followers of those ancient patriarchs, who through faith and patience inherited the promises. But, alas, that many things, by them held horrid and detestable, are now become common and fashionable!—What dangerous enemies to our souls are fleshly lusts; and they call for especial watchfulness! If we would keep our heart pure, our eye must be single. However unexceptionable our outward conduct appear, there is a God who marks our secret sins; and no impurity of temper can consist with the enjoyment of him. Such as will lodge sin in their heart now must lodge in hell for ever. How rare truly honest men are in this world! None are more to be suspected of fraud than such as are full of talk in

SO these three men ceased to answer Job, because he was righteous in his own eyes.

2 Then was kindled the wrath of Elihu the son of Barachel the Buzite, of the kindred of Ram: against Job was his wrath kindled, because he justified himself rather than God.

3 Also against his three friends was his wrath kindled, because they had found no answer and yet had condemned Job.

4 Now Elihu had waited till Job had spoken, because they were elder than he.

5 When Elihu saw that there was no answer in the mouth of these three men, then his wrath was kindled.

6 And Elihu the son of Barachel the Buzite answered and said, I am young, and ye are very old; wherefore I was afraid, and durst not shew you mine opinion.

7 I said, Days should speak, and multitude of years should teach wisdom.

8 But there is a spirit in man: and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding.

9 Great men are not always wise: neither do the aged understand judgment.

10 Therefore I said, Hearken to me; I also will shew you mine opinion.

11 Behold, I waited for your words; I gave ear to your reasons whilst ye searched out what to say.

12 Yea, I attended unto you; and, behold, there was none of you that convinced Job, or that answered his words:

13 Lest ye should say, We have found out wisdom: God thrusteth him down, not man.

14 Now he hath not directed his words against me: neither will I answer him with your speeches.

15 They were amazed; they answered no more; they left off speaking.

16 When I had waited, (for they spake not, but stood still, and answered no more),

17 I said, I will answer also my part; I also will shew mine opinion.

18 For I am full of matter; the spirit within me constraineth me.

their worldly dealings. Honesty needs no varnish. The gains of covetousness, however secret, leave a blot in the sight of God, which nothing but Jesus' atoning blood can wash away. The fruits of injustice must either be restored, or they will damn us: and they who are conscious of integrity never shun a trial. What a crying sin is adultery; and how damning!—Great humanity and tenderness is due to servants and the poor, who have the same Maker and God as ourselves: and there is great need of grace to wean our hearts from this world, and from every rival of God. It is a hard task to forgive injuries without reluctance. But to rejoice in the fall of an enemy is malicious and murderous. The greatest provocation will never justify our revenge. Hypocritically to hide our sins is destructive to our souls. And it is very dangerous to be partakers with other men in their sins. Let us therefore avoid the fear of man, which causeth a snare. Let us never hear a good cause run down without vindicating it; nor see injustice committed without remonstrating against it. In all our conduct let us study to approve ourselves unto God.

CHAP. XXXII. Ver. 1. He was resolutely bent to justify himself, let them say what they would. 2. He insisted too much upon his own vindication. Yea not without reflecting upon the severity of God. 7, 8. Old men ought to instruct their inferiors in age in the matters of God. But I find that, whatever advantage old age may give for knowledge and experience, it is chiefly men's own rational soul, and the inspiring Spirit of God, which qualify them to apprehend the mysteries of religion and providence. 13. Lest you should think you have said all that needs to be said in the cause, and that God's immediate strokes upon Job are an evidence that he is an hypocrite.—14. Job hath given me no provocation to speak; nor will I use such weak reasoning and pro-

CHAP. XXXIII.

Having finished his address to Job's friends, Elihu, in this and the four following chapters, addresses Job; and, admitting him to be a real saint, attempts to render him humble and penitent under God's mighty hand. Here (1) He bespeaks Job's favourable acceptance of what he should say, and begs that he would receive him as the deputy and agent for God, whom he had formerly wished; 1—7. (2) In God's name he charges him with a variety of sinful reflections upon the providence of God, which had escaped him while disputing with his friends; 8—11. (3) To convince him of his folly and guilt, he shews him that God, being an absolute Sovereign, might do with him as he pleased; 12, 13: That God's care of men is so great, that he takes various methods with them to do them good; 14: That, if Job had had uneasy dreams, God oftentimes makes those the channels of useful instructions; 15—18: That, if he had been sore afflicted, God had often made that a blessed mean to increase men's acquaintance with himself, and to work in them patience, experience, and hope; 19—30. (4) He requires Job either to answer him or give him leave to proceed; 31—33.

WHEREFORE Job, I pray thee, hear my speeches, and hearken to all my words.

2 Behold, now I have opened my mouth, my tongue hath spoken in my mouth.

3 My words shall be of the uprightness of my heart: and my lips shall utter knowledge clearly.

4 The Spirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life.

5 If thou canst answer me, set thy words in order before me; stand up.

6 Behold, I am according to thy wish in God's stead: I also am formed out of the clay.

7 Behold, my terror shall not make thee afraid, neither shall my hand be heavy upon thee.

8 Surely thou hast spoken in mine hearing, and I have heard the voice of thy words, saying,

9 I am clean without transgression, I am innocent, neither is there iniquity in me.

10 Behold, he findeth occasions against me, he counteth me for his enemy,

11 He putteth my feet in the stocks,
he marketh all my paths.

12 Behold, in this thou art not just:
I will answer thee, that God is greater than man.

13 Why dost thou strive against him?
for he giveth not account of any of his matters.

14 For God speaketh once, yea twice, yet man perceiveth it not.

15 In a dream, in a vision of the night, when deep sleep falleth upon men, in slumberings upon the bed;

16 Then he openeth the ears of men, and sealeth their instruction,

17 That he may withdraw man, from his purpose, and hide pride from man.

18 He keepeth back his soul from the pit, and his life from perishing by the sword.

19 He is chastened also with pain upon his bed, and the multitude of his bones with strong pain:

20 So that his life abhorreth bread, and his soul dainty meat.

21 His flesh is consumed away, that it cannot be seen; and his bones that were not seen, stick out.

22 Yea, his soul draweth near unto the grave, and his life to the destroyers.

23 If there be a messenger with him, an interpreter, one among a thousand, to shew unto man his uprightness;

24 Then he is gracious unto him, and saith, Deliver him from going down to the pit, I have found a ransom.

25 His flesh shall be fresher than a child's: he shall return to the days of his youth:

26 He shall pray unto God, and he will be favourable unto him; and he shall see his face with joy: for he will render unto man his righteousness.

27 He looketh upon men; and if any say, I have sinned, and perverted that which was right, and it profited me not;

28 He will deliver his soul from going into the pit, and his life shall see the light.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXII.—In angry disputes there is ordinarily much to reprove on both sides. But when the disputants are warm they are loath to own that they have lost the cause. Yet it is much better to say nothing than to talk error and nonsense. When we have fault to find, it should be done before men, not behind their backs. A gracious heart is jealous for the honour of God, and cannot, unmoved, see him slighted. And it is highly commendable to shew an holy indignation against sin, and warmth in the cause of truth. In disputes it is proper that each should speak in his own order, and that each be animated by a true and discreet zeal for God. And it is extremely agreeable when great sense and courage are directed by great humility and modesty. In matters of doubtful disputation we ought to be diffident of our own judgment, and to be more swift to hear than to speak. Yet, after we have given others a long and patient hearing, it is but reasonable that we should be heard in our turn. And by-standers, who hear without prejudice, often see further into a dispute than those who have their minds blinded by passion. God deals very sovereignly in the disposal of knowledge, or other gifts. Men may have rational souls, and yet know little: but they ought to cultivate this distinguishing privilege. All the wisdom of fallen men in spiritual matters is but darkness, till the Spirit of God enlighten their mind.—And, alas, how often disputes are closed before the question be rightly stated or impartially handled! And hence the issue is so seldom a seeing eye to eye in the truth. They have therefore good right to speak who can set the cause of truth in a more convincing and striking light than had been formerly done. And they who speak for God ought to be earnest in their discourses, inflamed with zeal for his glory, and the good of souls; and to be so impressed with his perfections and laws, as to regard neither the fear nor the favour of men.

CHAP. XXXIII. Ver. 3. I shall not speak from passion or prejudice, as others have done before me, but from a sincere desire of doing thee good, and in such a clear manner that thou mayest be fully convinced of the truth of what I say. 4—6. I am a man like thyself, fit to reason with thee on equal terms, and inclined to plead the cause of God against thee. 7. There is nothing about me to terrify or torment thee. 8—11. Nor do I intend to charge thee with hypocrisy, but with uttering of self-justifying language, dishonourable to God, as if he had dealt more severely than was just with thee. 12, 13. Let thy former life be as holy and unblameable as it will, yet thou art certainly culpable in quarrelling with the dispensations of God, who is infinitely superior to thee in every respect, and accountable to none for his conduct. 14—18. Nay, so dull are men, that, when God takes repeated pains in dreams, visions, or the like, to instruct them effectually for their humiliation and eternal salvation, they do not take notice of, or do not understand, his meaning. 16—22. Hence for their awakening to a proper attention he severely afflicts them, till they are brought to the very point of death. 23, 24. If then by the instruction of some faithful minister, and especially by the instruction of Jesus Christ, the unparalleled Angel and Interpreter of the new covenant, the afflicted man be brought, not only to discern the equity of God in afflicting him, but to discern, and by faith apply, Jesus' imputed righteousness to himself, God intimates to his soul a full and free redemption through that all-covering atonement. 25, 26. In consequence hereof, not only the man's body and mind recover their wonted health and alacrity, but he is enabled with boldness and access to pour forth his requests before God, who allows him the comfortable sense and gracious reward of that righteousness imputed to, or implanted in, him. 27, 28. While God exactly observes, the man, all influenced by cordial gratitude, shall publicly confess his sinfulness of heart and life, and that the due reward of his deeds has never been rendered unto him; and shall profess his full assurance of faith, that God has redeemed him by the mighty price of his Son's blood, and will bestow his fulness of grace and glory upon him.

CHAP. XXXIV.

After pausing a while, Elihu proceeds, and (1) Bespeaks the attention, and even the assistance, of the hearers, in his attempt to set Job right: 1—4. (2) He charges Job with other indecent expressions dropped in the heat of his dispute, and which, he insinuates, became none but a profligate: 5—9. (3) By shewing him the incontestible justice; 10, 12, 17, 19, 23: sovereign dominion; 13—15: almighty power; 20—24: omniscience; 21, 22, 25: severity against sinners; 26—28: and overruling providence of God; 29, 30: he attempts to convince him that he had spoken amiss. (4) After suggesting what he ought to say unto God, he leaves the matter to Job's own conscience, and concludes with a sharp reproof of his peevishness and discontent; 31—37.

FURTHERMORE, Elihu answered
and said,

2 Hear my words, O ye wise men; and give ear unto me, ye that have knowledge.

3 For the ear trieth words as the mouth tasteth meat.

4 Let us choose to us judgment: let us know among ourselves what is good.

5 For Job hath said, I am righteous, and God hath taken away my judgment.

6 Should I lie against my right? my wound is incurable without transgression.

7 What man is like Job, who drinketh up scorning like water?

8 Who goeth in company with the workers of iniquity, and walketh with wicked men.

9 For he hath said, It profiteth a man nothing that he should delight himself with God.

10 Therefore hearken unto me, ye men of understanding: far be it from God, that he should do wickedness; and from the Almighty, that he should commit iniquity.

11 For the work of a man shall he render unto him, and cause every man to find according to his ways.

12 Yea, surely God will not do wickedly, neither will the Almighty pervert judgment.

13 Who hath given him a charge over the earth? or who hath disposed of the whole world?

14 If he set his heart upon man, if he gather unto himself his spirit and his breath;

15 All flesh shall perish together, and man shall turn again unto dust.

16 If now thou hast understanding, hear this: hearken to the voice of my words.

17 Shall even he that hateth right govern? and wilt thou condemn him that is most just?

18 Is it fit to say to a king, Thou art wicked? and to princes, Ye are ungodly?

19 How much less to him that accepteth not the persons of princes, nor regardeth the rich more than the poor? for they all are the work of his hands.

20 In a moment shall they die, and the people shall be troubled at midnight, and pass away: and the mighty shall pass away without hand.

21 For his eyes are upon the ways of man, and seeth all his goings.

22 There is no darkness, nor shadow of death, where the workers of iniquity may hide themselves.

23 For he will not lay upon man more than right, that he should enter into judgment with God.

24 He shall break in pieces mighty men without number, and set others in their stead.

25 Therefore he knoweth their works, and he overturneth them in the night, so that they are destroyed.

26 He striketh them as wicked men in the open sight of others;

27 Because they turned back from him, and would not consider any of his ways:

28 So that they cause the cry of the poor to come unto him, and he heareth the cry of the afflicted.

29 When he giveth quietness, who then can make trouble? and, when he hideth his face, who then can behold him? whether it be done against a nation, or against a man only:

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIII.—We ought seriously to hear out a discourse before we form a judgment on it. And they who speak for God ought to speak with great deliberation and plainness. Those who are in great trouble ought to be tenderly as well as convincingly, dealt with. And yet a faithful testimony must be borne against the dishonours which we see or hear done to God by even the greatest of saints. In the rage of temptation or dispute, or in the depth of trouble, they often speak things very unadvisedly; and yet their words are apt to be taken in a worse sense than they meant them. To make us conceive aright of God's providence, we must carefully keep in view his infinite greatness, sovereignty, grace, and wisdom. And there is great need to keep our heart with all diligence, that even in our dreams we may enjoy profitable fellowship with, and instruction from, God; which may humble our pride, and secure the salvation of our soul. For God at his pleasure makes the most fearful changes upon the bodies or minds of men. But honourable to God, and profitable to men, are sanctified troubles. They lead to Jesus and his word, as our instructors; to Jesus and his blood, as our atonement and ransom; to Jesus and his law, as our way in which we must walk; in our grateful returns for his mercies. They render our sins bitter and heavy, and our deliverances admired, and instigate us to invite others to share of his goodness. And often God brings men through great tribulation to their comforts on earth, as well as to their glories in heaven.—Departures from God issue in ruin, unless he recover us by grace. And so manifold are his admonitions, that, if we perish, our ruin lies at our own door.—The wiser men are, they are the more humble and willing to learn; and the more desirous to be undeceived if they have been mistaken.

CHAP. XXXIV. Ver. 2. I appeal to you, O men of sense, and I beseech you seriously to consider what I say. 3. For the mind can judge of the truth or falsehood of doctrines as well as the mouth can judge of the taste of food.

4. Let us, without any passion or prejudice, thoroughly examine this cause:
5, 6. For Job has uttered some very dangerous expressions in his own justification, as if he could not vindicate himself, without accusing God of unjust severe-ty towards him? 7, 8. Did ever a good man deride, not only his friends, but even his God, with such greediness and delight? Did ever a good man under trouble speak and act so like the wicked? 10—12. It is impossible that God can deny justice to any, or punish without cause, or forbear to reward men according to their deeds, either in this life or in that which is to come.
13—17. Without supposing him perfectly just, he could never govern the world; and men are so far from being able to give him his charge or directions, that their existence and life depend wholly upon his mere good pleasure and bounty.
18, 19. If it be improper rudely to charge earthly princes with wickedness and impiety, how daring is it to accuse him, who formed all mankind equally subject to his power and pleasure, and therefore regards the greatest no more than the least, and can never do any thing unjust, to gain their favour, or to avoid their anger. 20. At his pleasure whole nations, in their midnight security, are in a terrible manner, by earthquakes or the like, hurried into eternity; and the mightiest princes or warriors are, by his immediate influence, displaced from their station or deprived of their life. 21. His omniscient eyes discern enough in men for which he may justly punish them. 25. He takes a full and exact account of their works; and, because they are wicked, he rolls a night of destructive vengeance upon them; and they are bruised, as in a mortar, under the weight of it. 26. He suddenly, and with shame, hisses away these eminent ones in the open view of unnumbered spectators. 27. Because of their manifest apostasy from, and obstinate rebellion against, him: 28. That he may encourage mean persons to apply to him for relief; and may graciously hear the plaintive cries of the poor and afflicted. 29. And, if he give 35 Job hath spoken "without knowledge, and his words were without wisdom.

36 "My desire is that Job may be tried unto the end, because of "his answers for wicked men.

37 For he addeth rebellion unto his sin, he "clappeth his hands amongst us, and multiplieth his words against God.

CHAP. XXXV.

Convinced that Elihu's charges were in the main too just, or at least that he meant well, Job continues silent, and Elihu proceeds to fix upon him a humbling conviction and refutation of his hard speeches. (1) That he had represented religion as unprofitable; whereas, though men's sins cannot hurt nor their righteousness profit God, yet they certainly do hurt or profit themselves or other men; 1—8. (2) That he had complained of God as deaf to the cries of the oppressed; whereas it is their own neglect of, or coldness or insincerity in, their prayers, their overlooking of mercies, and unhumiliated temper under their trouble, that occasion it; 9—13. (3) That, on account of delay, he had despaired of the restoration of God's favour in life; whereas God delayed it for wise ends, and to punish his sinful distrust; 14, 15, 16.

ELIHU spake moreover, and said, 2 "Thinkest thou this to be right, that thou saidst, "My righteousness is more than God's?

3 For thou saidst, "What advantage will it be unto thee? and, What profit shall I have *if I be cleansed from my sin?

4 †I will answer thee, and thy companions with thee.

5 "Look unto the heavens; and see, and behold the clouds which are higher than thou.

deliverance, rest, and comfort, none can make trouble. If he withhold his favourable smiles none can procure help from him. 30. He also punishes wicked men, that their insolence may be controlled, and that their subjects may not be encouraged to imitate their impieties, or be perpetually held in the fetters of tyranny and oppressions. 31, 32. Instead of quarrelling with God's afflictive providences, we should kindly submit to them, and, with holy resolution to avoid it, beseech him to discover to us the sinful cause of them, however secret. 33. Has not God inflicted these troubles upon thee, as a part of thy due reward, because thou hast grievously murmured against him! Since thou hast chosen what I never would, declare plainly thy reason for it.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIV.—Mutual assistance is necessary in searching out truth, or convincing the mistaken. But often good men, in the heat of their spirit, speak worse than they mean; and reproach both themselves and their God, in speaking, or acting like the profane world. Just views of God's perfections are requisite, to prevent our sinful freedoms with him, or to render us penitent for them. The eye of God constantly observes our hearts and ways. How foolish is it then to hide our sin! Rejection of his warnings, and obstinate disregard of his will, fill up men's iniquity. And they who will not be guided by his word shall be smitten with his rod of judgment: and quickly will he resent the groans of the poor and oppressed, and redress their grievances. What God gives to nations or persons none but himself can take from them. If a soul enjoy a sense of his favour, through faith in Jesus, no accusation of sin, nor fears of death or hell, can any longer disturb him. And when God is our enemy the whole world cannot protect us. Let wicked men crouch as they will, and profess as they will, in order to obtain power, he can easily disappoint them in mercy to mankind. The more persons are humbled for sin, the less they will complain of their sufferings; but, conscious of the depth of iniquity in their heart, and the spread of it in their life, will search out the cause, and turn from it to God. Humble confessions of our ignorance and crimes, earnest supplications for necessary instructions and supplies of grace, and holy resolutions to walk in his way, are necessary in all our dealings with God. To struggle with him, who best knows how to manage us and does all things well, is at once extremely foolish and criminal. But, alas, how often the best of men, when left to their own passions, under heavy troubles, practically take part with God's enemies, insult his friends, and obstinately murmur against himself! And it is then distinguished kindness faithfully to reprove them, and to help them to see and be affected with their offence.

6 If thou sinnest, what dost thou against him? or, if thy transgressions be multiplied, what dost thou unto him?

7 "If thou be righteous, what givest thou him? or what receiveth he of thine hand?

8 Thy wickedness may hurt "a man as thou art, and thy righteousness may profit the son of man.

9 "By reason of the multitude of oppressions they make the oppressed to cry: they cry out by reason of the arm of the mighty.

10 But "none saith, Where is God my "maker, "who giveth songs in the night;

11 Who "teacheth us more than the beasts of the earth, and maketh us wiser than the fowls of heaven?

12 There "they cry, but none giveth answer, because of the pride of evil men.

13 Surely God will not hear "vanity, neither will the Almighty regard it.

14 Although thou sayest "thou shalt not see him, "yet judgment is before him; therefore trust thou in him.

15 But now, "because it is not so, "thou hath visited in his anger; yet || he knoweth it not in "great extremity:

16 Therefore doth Job "open his mouth in vain; he multiplieth words without knowledge.

CHAP. XXXVI.

Elihu, having reproved Job's passionate speeches, now endeavours to engage him to a patient submission; the want of which, and not his hypocrisy, as his other friends suggested, had prolonged his afflictions. Here is (1) His preface, begging attention, as || Job. his cause was good, his hints uncommon, his design honest, and his management upright; 1—4. (2) His account of the different methods of God's providence towards men, as they behave themselves well or ill; 5—15. (3) His warnings and counsels to Job how to forward his deliverance; 16—21. (4) His demonstration of God's sovereignty and omnipotence in a variety of instances in common providence; on account of which we ought always to adore and submit to him; 22—33.

ELIHU also proceeded, and said, 2 "Suffer me a little, and I will shew thee *that I have yet to speak on God's behalf.

CHAP. XXXV. Ver. 9—13. Many, under terrible troubles and inhuman oppressions, cry to God for relief, and for vengeance, on their oppressors: but as their prayers are mingled with no faith in God, or kind sense of his goodness, but merely forced from them by the pressure of their distress, and the haughty violence of their oppressors, God pays no regard to them. 14, 15. Therefore, although thou complainest that he hath not, and despairest that he will ever appear for thy relief, yet he still attends to wisdom and equity in every dispensation; therefore do thou patiently wait and earnestly look for him; and remember that it is because there is nothing of this in thy carriage that God has thus severely afflicted thee; and because of thy excessive pride he quite disregards thy former prosperity, and overlooks thy present extremity of trouble. 16. And it is owing to thy ignorance, or thoughtlessness of this, that so many foolish and wicked words have proceeded out of thy mouth.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXV.—There is great need to be well rooted in the knowledge and faith of God's infinite greatness and sovereignty, in order to prevent many fatal mistakes in principle or practice. We can never make him our debtor. The best we do is unworthy of his notice; and the worst he dispenses to us is less than our iniquities deserve. Whatever trouble now attends his service, it will appear infinitely profitable at last. But many groan under their troubles, who never shew any humiliation for sin or desire after God. Yet irreligious poverty and suffering is, of all human miseries on earth, one of the most deplorable. It cannot be expected that such men's selfish prayers, without any regard to God or the good of their soul, should issue in help from him. While they are insensible of the most distinguishing mercies they enjoy, they cannot reasonably expect deliverance from the evils they feel, or the experience of those divine joys which overbalance every sorrow and pain. While our unhumiliated hearts only murmur and groan under our troubles, it is a mercy to be denied the removal of them. But, when God corrects his saints severely for their humiliation, Satan is ever ready to drive them to despair. The greatness of their sufferings makes them to overlook their unbelief, impatience, and rashness; by which means they lose the comforts, and defer the removal, of them. It is only strong faith in God that can guide us aright through temptations and trouble. Despair of relief is as high a reflection upon his power and grace as impatience is on his goodness and wisdom. And, if our troubles are not removed, but increased, it becomes us to look well if we have not provoked God by our insolent behaviour under them.

3 I will fetch my knowledge from afar, and will ascribe righteousness to my Maker.

4 For truly my words shall not be false: he that is perfect in knowledge is with thee.

5 Behold, God is mighty, and despiseth not any: he is mighty in strength and wisdom.

6 He preserveth not the life of the wicked; but giveth right to the poor.

7 He withdraweth not his eyes from the righteous: but with kings are they on the throne; yea, he doth establish them for ever, and they are exalted.

8 And, if they be bound in fetters, and be holden in cords of affliction, 9 Then he sheweth them their work, and their transgressions that they have exceeded.

10 He openeth also their ear to discipline, and commandeth that they return from iniquity.

11 If they obey and serve him, they shall spend their days in prosperity and their years in pleasures.

12 But, if they obey not, they shall perish by the sword, and they shall die without knowledge.

13 But the hypocrites in heart heap up wrath: they cry not when he bindeth them.

14 They die in youth, and their life is among the unclean.

15 He delivereth the poor in his affliction, and openeth their ears in oppression.

16 Even so would he have removed thee out of the strait into a broad place, where there is no straitness; and that which should be set on thy table should be full of fatness.

17 But thou hast fulfilled the judgment of the wicked: judgment and justice take hold on thee.

18 Because there is wrath, beware lest he take thee away with his stroke; then a great ransom cannot deliver thee.

19 Will he esteem thy riches? no, not gold, nor all the forces of strength.

20 Desire not the night when people are cut off in their place.

21 Take heed, regard not iniquity: for this hast thou chosen rather than affliction.

22 Behold, God exalteth by his power: who teacheth like him?

23 Who hath enjoined him his way? or who can say, Thou hast wrought iniquity?

24 Remember that thou magnify his work, which men behold.

25 Every man may see it; man may behold it afar off.

26 Behold, God is great, and we know him not, neither can the number of his years be searched out.

27 For he maketh small the drops of water: they pour down rain according to the vapour thereof:

28 Which the clouds do drop and distil upon man abundantly.

29 Also can any understand the spreadings of the clouds, or the noise of his tabernacle?

30 Behold, he spreadeth his light upon it, and covereth the bottom of the sea.

31 For by them judgeth he the people: he giveth meat in abundance.

32 With clouds he covereth the light; and commandeth it not to shine by the cloud that cometh betwixt.

33 The noise thereof sheweth concerning it, the cattle also concerning the vapour.

CHAP. XXXVI. Ver. 2. Patiently permit me to inform thee a little further, for I have yet something more to speak on God's behalf. 3. While I treat of distant matters, and fetch my arguments from the inspiration of God's Spirit, or from his wonderful works, I will maintain the justice of God in all his proceedings, and give him the glory thereof. 4. And assure thyself I will not attempt to baffle thee with sophistical arguments; but, as I have thoroughly studied the point, I will make use of no reasoning but what is sincere and solid. 5. Behold, such is the infinite power and wisdom of God, that he never despises any, however mean! 6. He will bestow no solid happiness upon wicked men, but will do justice to the humble, poor, and afflicted. 7. He never ceases his special care of the righteous; but sometimes advances them, however poor, to the highest stations; and continues, establishes, and exalts, them therein. 8—10. Or, if they be brought into and fixed in sore troubles, he by that means makes them to consider their ways, discern their sinfulness, and turn from it to himself. 11. If their afflictions effect their reformation to piety and virtue, great and manifold shall be the blessings and comforts bestowed upon them here and hereafter. 12. But, if, notwithstanding their troubles, they continue obstinate in wickedness, they shall be cut off by some fearful calamity, and shall perish in their ignorance, folly, and sin. 13, 14. Thus hypocrites heap up treasures of wrath for themselves; they neglect to implore God's help and deliverance in their troubles; therefore their life is early cut off, in a fearful storm of his wrath, by some exemplary judgment in death; and through eternity he reckons them with, and punishes them as, the cursed and abominable. 15. But he delivers the poor and humble in their affliction, and teaches them to know and practise their duty under it. 16. And, hadst thou behaved thyself aright under thy pressure, he would even now have delivered thee from thy pressing and tormenting troubles into a state of freedom and affluence, in which there should be nothing to straiten thee; and that which fell from heaven upon thy table should be full of fatness. 17. But thou hast earnestly pleaded the cause of the wicked, and justified their reproachful murmurings against the providence of God; therefore his just indignation has already seized thee, and holds thee fast in bonds of fearful affliction. 18, 19. Since he is manifesting his hot displeasure against thee, take heed lest he cut thee off without remedy; and then no ransom, however great, can redeem thy life again; nor will all the united power and virtue in the world be able to deliver thee if God resolve to destroy thee. 20. Never wish for a period of awful judgments, in which multitudes of men are often destroyed amidst all their comforts and enjoyments. 21. Never give way to sinning, particularly to rash and intemperate speeches concerning God's providential procedure. Thus shalt thou be chosen in, and plucked out of, the furnace of affliction. But alas! hitherto thou hast preferred rash censuring of God's ways to a patient bearing of thy afflictions. 22. It is God alone who can effectually deliver and exalt men; and none can cast down, scourge, instruct, or govern, like him. Pretend not therefore to direct him. 23. None hath directed him how to govern the world, or can call him to account for his management. None can charge him with any thing unjust or imprudent. Never therefore rashly complain of him. 24. Instead of censuring, always admire and speak honourably of his works of creation and providence, which men cheerfully behold, and should cordially celebrate. 25. There are scarcely any so ignorant but they must observe these, and acknowledge his greatness and excellency in them. 26. Behold, such is the unbounded perfection of God, that we can never comprehend it; and such his eternal duration, that we cannot search it out. How unfit are we then to judge of and censure his conduct? 27, 28. It is he who exhales from the sea, and forms the drops of rain which fall from the clouds. 29. How incomprehensible are his spreadings of the thick clouds all along the face of the heavens, and the crashing thunder of his cloudy residence? 30. How marvellously he extends the flashing lightning all over the sky, makes it penetrate to the bottom of, or vails it with the rainy waters exhaled from, the sea! 31. By such rains, thunder, and lightning, he punishes wicked men for their sins; and, by rendering the earth fruitful, makes liberal and magnificent provision for his creatures. 32. By his hollow clouds he conceals the thundering flash as well as the bright and scorching sun; and restrains it by their interposing influence. 33. Its crashing noise informs concerning it; as a red flaming treasure of wrath, it hangs over the proud; or the noise of the clouds, as well as the motions of animals, portends the approach of the rain formed of vapours exhaled from the sea by the sun.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXVI.—Plain and important speeches for God deserve the most fixed attention. Faithful souls are always zealous to vindicate God's dispensations from men's foolish and sinful aspersions; and truth and simplicity of speech always become such as profess themselves teachers of God's good ways. It is proper that we should always retain exalted thoughts of God; that he thinks none below his notice, however mean; countenances none of the wicked, however great; is always ready to redress the injured; takes a peculiar pleasure to protect those that are good; and brings special ruin on hypocrites, as the treacherous enemies of his government. If God exalt me to honour, let me exert myself for the welfare of mankind, and prepare for giving my account to him. If he afflict me, let me thankfully believe it done to discover my past sins, and to dispose me to receive his sanctifying instructions; fully persuaded that deliverance and comfort shall appear whenever his merciful end is gained. If my deliverance be delayed, my continued sin is the cause. But, if I am not bettered by his rod, let me fear, lest my stupidity and dissimulation should issue, in the suffering of his everlasting vengeance. In affliction let me never be secure,

CHAP. XXXVII.

Is a continuation of the former. Here Elihu, perhaps alarmed with the thundering cloud in which God was just about to appear, (1) Extols the wonderful power of God in the formation and management of thunder and lightning, frost and snow, rains and wind; insinuating that, if we take the weather as God forms it, we should do the same with respect to our lot; 1—13. (2) To convince Job how incapable he was of judging as to the mysterious procedure of providence, he challenges him to explain a few common appearances relative to light, clouds, warmth, wind and sky, just before his eyes; 14—22. (3) He concludes summing up what he had proved, viz. the tremendous greatness, unsearchable excellency, power, wisdom, and justice, of God, as a reason for men's fearing him; 23, 24.

AT this also my heart ^atrembleth, and ^ais moved out of his place.

2 *Hear attentively the ^bnoise of his voice, and the sound ^cthat goeth out of his mouth.

3 He ^edirecteth it under the whole heaven, and his [†]lightning unto the [†]ends of the earth.

4 After it a voice roareth: he thundereth with the voice of his excellency; and he will not stay ^dthem when his voice is heard.

5 God ^ethundereth marvellously with his voice; ^fgreat things doth he, which we cannot comprehend.

6 For ^ghe saith to the snow, Be thou ^hon the earth; ^{||}likewise to the small rain, and to the great rain of his strength.

7 He ^hsealeth up the hand of every man, that all men may ⁱknow his work.

8 Then the beasts ^kgo into dens, and remain in their places.

9 *Out of the south cometh the ^lwhirlwind; and cold out of the ^mnorth.

10 By ⁿthe breath of God frost is given; and the breadth of the waters is straitened.

11 Also by ^owatering he wearieth the thick cloud; he ^pscattereth [†]this bright cloud;

12 And it is ^rturned round about by his counsels; that they may do whatsoever he commandeth them upon the face of the world in the earth.

13 He ^rcauseth it to come, whether for [†]correction, or for his land, or for mercy.

14 Harken unto this, O Job: ^sstand or make light of his stroke. Let me never hope to find out ways of my own to withstand or avoid it. Let me never dare to persevere in self-vindication or quarrelling with God;—never dare to prescribe to him, who is an absolute sovereign, an incomparable teacher, and unexceptionably just in all his procedure; and with whom neither riches can bribe nor darkness conceal. In the glory of his works let me discern the perfections of his nature. If he make the clouds fountains to the lower world, and vails to the upper, let me view every thing formed in them, rain, hail, snow, or thunder, as his workmanship. And, while I am here, let me live by faith, not by sight. Whom, having not seen, let me love; and in whom, though now I see him not, let me rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory.

CHAP. XXXVII. Just now my heart trembles, and is like to start out of its place, at the thought of hearing of the terrible thunder. 2. Hear attentively the roaring noise of JEHOVAH's voice, and the breathing murmur that proceeds from his lips. 3. By his providence he guides the forcible and straight darting of the thunderbolts along the whole extent of the sky, and makes the blaze of lightning to fly over the confines of the earth. 4. After the blazing flash of lightning the noise roars. He thunders with the voice of his Majesty: nor will he restrain the storm and rain when the roaring of his thunder is heard. 5. By thundering the mighty God produces many marvellous effects: he does many things in nature which we cannot comprehend. 6. At his command the snow falls, as also the gentle showers and the deluging rains, the impetuous showers and tempestuous storms. 7. By the winter storm he restrains men from labour, and keeps them within doors, that they may have opportunity to consider his works. 8. The very wild beasts are obliged to shut up themselves in their thickets and dens. 9. The whirlwind is generated in the moist clouds of the south as in a chamber; and cold proceeds from the scattering north winds. 10. By God's will and appointment the frost is produced, and the rivers are congealed that they cannot flow. 11. As by pouring down continual showers he wearieth the thick cloud, so his clear brightness dispels it; and by his light he disperses the transparent duskiess of the sky. 12. While the clouds are carried higher and thither at his pleasure, he himself on every side holds the reins of their motions, that he may accomplish his own purposes by them all over the world; 13. Whether it be for punishing the guilty by pestilential vapours and storms, or for rendering the earth fruitful, or for graciously rewarding his people with remarkable plenty. 14. Stop therefore thy censures of, and murmurings at, the dispensations of God's providence; seriously consider his won-still, and consider the wondrous works of God.

15 'Dost thou know when God disposed them, and caused the light of his cloud to shine?

16 Dost thou know ^athe balancings of the clouds, the wondrous works of him who is ^aperfect in knowledge?

17 'How thy garments ^aare warm when he quieteth the earth by the south wind?

18 Hast thou with him ^aspread out the sky, ^{which} is strong, and as a molten looking-glass?

19 'Teach us what we shall say unto him; ^{for} ^bwe cannot order ^{our} speech by reason of darkness.

20 Shall it be told him that I speak? If a man speak, surely ^che shall be swallowed up.

21 And now ^dmen ^asee not the bright light which is in the clouds: but the wind passeth, and cleanseth them.

22 ^{||}Fair weather cometh ^eout of the north: with God is ^fterrible majesty.

23 ^{Touching} the Almighty, ^gwe cannot find him out: ^{he} is ^hexcellent in power, and in judgment, and in plenty of justice: he ⁱwill not afflict.

24 Men do therefore ^kfear him: he ^lrespecteth not any ^{that} are wise of heart.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

As all parties had been desiring that God would appear to decide the controversy, now he speaks; and, taking up the thread of Elihu's discourse, in order to convince Job of his comparative ignorance and weakness, awfully calls him to answer his questions; 1, 2, 3. (1) Concerning the earth, in the forming and founding of it; 4, 7. (2) Concerning the sea, and its limitations; 8—11. (3) Concerning the making, management, motion, and influence, of the morning light; 12—15. (4) Concerning the fountains and dark recesses of the sea and earth; 16—21. (5) Concerning the waters in the clouds, and the direction of them; and concerning the production of rain, snow, hail, thunder, lightnings, and frost, by means of them; 22—30, 34—38. (6) Concerning the direction and influences of the stars; 31, 32, 33. (7) Concerning the formation of souls in men, and instincts in beasts; 36. (8) Concerning the provision made for beasts and birds, particularly lions and ravens; 39, 40, 41. And, if he appeared ignorant of, or incapable to act in, these common things, how could he presume to judge of the deep mysteries of God's government?

THEN the LORD answered Job out of the ^awhirlwind, and said,

2 ^bWho is this that darkeneth counsel by words without knowledge?

drous works; and think how little thou understandest of the most obvious of them. 15. Knowest thou how God lays his orders or impresses his powerful influence upon them? or how he makes the rainbow-light of the transparent cloud to shine? 16. Canst thou tell how, in his marvellous wisdom, he hangs the clouds in the air, as if balanced by one another? 17. Dost thou know how thy garments wax warm when the earth is calmed by the southern sun and the pleasant gale? 18. Hast thou assisted him in clearing the sky after rain; and in making it to stand fast by its own strength; as a mirror, in which we may behold his admirable wisdom, power, goodness, and glory? 19. Teach us, if thou canst, how to speak to or of God: for, by reason of his incomprehensible excellencies, and our great ignorance, we cannot speak of him to any purpose. 20. Nothing which I have said is worthy of his notice, or answerable to the subject. If any attempt to describe his excellencies, he will be quite confounded by their dazzling glory. 21. And just now men cannot look upon the bright shining of the sun in the sky, when the wind has dispelled every cloud. 22. The godlike glaucing sun shines clearly by the purifying north winds: and upon God is a robe of terrible majesty. 23. We cannot comprehend his essence, perfections, purposes, or works. His power indeed is infinite; but he will not afflict his people in strict judgment or severity of justice. 24. Men should therefore stand in awe of him, and beware of quarrelling with his conduct; for he regards none who are wise in their own conceit, or who dare contend with their Maker, or presume to censure his proceedings.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXVII.—O how much of God is to be seen in the works of nature, in the forms of clouds, and in the changes and forms of weather! If all creatures thus fulfil his pleasure, why should men be rebels, and refuse his direction and government! Why do not we improve his corrections and mercies! It is absurd for us to quarrel with him, when we understand so little of his nature, or even of his most obvious works. And it is highly necessary to maintain the most awful, kind, and honourable thoughts of him, and the most cordial submission to every thing which he does. But by what terrible harbingers doth he sometimes introduce himself to his people! If the clouds thicken, if thunders roar, if lightnings flash, if rains descend, and winds blow, let me hope that my God is near, my God that saveth me!

CHAP. XXXVIII. Ushered in by a terrible whirlwind, to make Job more humble and attentive, God himself next addressed him, saying, 2. Who art thou that hast sought to eclipse, misrepresent, and censure, the wisdom and justice of my providence, by discourses proceeding from ignorance, mistake, inconsiderateness, and passion ? 3. Now, according to thy proud challenges, prepare thyself to debate the cause with me ; nay, to answer me a few plain questions ; that, convinced by these of the weakness of thy understanding, thou mayest perceive how incapable thou art of judging as to my secret counsels or mysterious providences. 4—7. If thou art so skilful as thou pretendest, tell me how I laid the foundations of the earth : how I planned and adjusted the whole form and boundaries of it : how, without any foundation to stand on, I settled it upon its own centre, and firmly connected all the parts of it, while angels, whom I had previously created to be my honorary guard, celebrated the wisdom, goodness, and power, which I therein manifested ! 8—11. Tell me how, with banks or even sand, I set bounds to the newly formed ocean, which often rages as if it would cover the earth, from which its waters were separated ; how I covered it with thick mists and fogs, restraining its fury ; how I made hollow places in the earth for it ; and, notwithstanding its furious raging, confined it in them ! 12. Hast thou, before or since thy birth, governed the morning light, making it to observe its punctual time, and orderly to appear in its ever-varying place ; 13. That it might suddenly spread itself over the whole hemisphere, that wicked men, who rage in the night, being detected, might by condign punishment be restrained or cut off : 14. That the earth, as the wax beneath the seal, may put on a new form, and the things on it appear as its adorning garment ; 15. And that by this light the wicked may be deprived of that success and comfort which they promised themselves in their crimes, and their tyrannical power may be repressed ? 16. Hast thou ever personally surveyed the springs and rough places in the bottom of the ocean, or walked, as in state, through the inmost corners of the deep, to know and direct every thing there ? 17. Art thou fully acquainted with all the dark caverns and inmost parts of the earth ; or with the whole nature and circumstances of death and the grave, and of the eternal state ; 18. Are the dimensions of the earth, with its whole substance and product, perfectly known to thee ?

19—21. Dost thou by the great experience and long observation fully understand the orderly turns of light and darkness, day and night ? or canst thou direct their motions in a proper manner ? 22, 23. Art thou fully acquainted with the collections of snow and hail in the clouds ? and canst thou, like me, regularly bring them forth in the winter season, or in the seasons of wrathful calamities ? 24. How is the light of the sun, moon, or stars, so equally and so widely diffused ? How is the way prepared for the overflowing rains, or for the lightning and thunder ? and how are their motions so regularly directed ?
26, 27. Is it by thy direction that the rain waters those places of the earth where no one lives to do it, or which without seasonable rains could produce nothing ?
28—30. Canst thou form drops of rain or dew ; or produce ice or hoar frost ; or tell how they are formed ; and how the surface of the water is congealed into a kind of stone ? 31. Canst thou alter the seasons of the year, by restraining the influences of the heat and summer-boding stars ? or free the earth from the tempestuous influence of the winter and sloth-boding stars ?
32. Canst thou make to appear, and lead round, the luminaries of the middle region of heaven in their season ? Canst thou direct the round-whirling pole stars, and their attendants ? 33. Knowest thou all the order and laws of the heavenly bodies ? Couldst thou settle the whole government of them, and their influence upon the earth ? 34, 35. Canst thou just now by a call bring down an abundant rain on the place where thou art ; or make the thunder to dart forth its flames over thine head ; or do whatever thou pleasest ? 36. Canst thou direct the random darting of thunder and lightning to strike as regularly as if it had solid wisdom and distinct perception ? or didst thou give thyself rational understanding? Canst thou tell how a single thought is formed? 37, 38. Canst thou number and govern all the clouds of heaven; or restrain the rain when the earth is sufficiently watered? 39—41. Canst thou provide food even for the most ravenous creatures, particularly for the lioness and her whelps, or for old lions incapable of leaving their dens; or for the young ravens, when by the dam they are expelled from the nest?

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXVIII.—How infinite the kindness and condescension of God, to appear himself, and catechise his obstinate friend for his humiliation, in order to prepare him for deliverance! And how much more difficult it is to converse with God than is generally thought by those who appeal to him! Infinite is his wisdom, who knows all things; and great his power, who can do, and has made, and manages, all things. All things around us are full of God: all monitors to teach us concerning him, and to stir us up to worship and glorify him! But the boasted knowledge of mankind is vain and scanty, which can every where be nonplussed in the most common things of nature. Let me then never contend with God;—never pretend to be a judge of his nature, purposes, or works;—but be always content with things as they are; and to be led by him, as one blind, in the ways which I know not. If he has made all things in nature so well, my new covenant portion and lot is certainly exactly wise and kind. And, if he take such care of the works of his hands, the most ravenous not excepted, it is impossible that he should forget, forsake, starve, or mismanage, his new covenant friends.

Or that, while the tame ass is so dull and stupid, the wild ass is so nimble, untractable, regardless of mankind, and lodged and maintained in the desert mountains? 9—12. Art thou capable, by all thy power and skill, to tame a wild bull, and train him to the labours of the field performed by the ox? 13—18. Didst thou adorn with wings and feathers the ostrich, that is so careless of her eggs and young, that the sun must hatch the former, and Providence alone takes care of the latter, and so fleet in running with extended wings? 19—25. Hast thou given strength and bravery to the horse? Dost thou produce the triumphant shaking of his mane, or the neighing and snorting of his throat, when he is bent upon the battle? Canst thou make him to bounce like a grasshopper? The disdainful and courageous snortings of his nostrils are terrible. When armies meet for battle, he paweth in the valley, fiercely priding himself in his strength: he springs forth to meet the armour of war, rushing into the battle without any fear of danger. Quite unaffrighted he laughs at the terror of the battle; he turns not back from the sword. Over him, regardless, rattle and hiss the arrows of the quiver, the flaming spear, and ruinous lance. With fierceness and rage he gallops over and tears up the ground. For joy he reckons the sound of the trumpet but an encouraging blast; and at the full blowing of the trumpet he dances and sports for joy. He smells the battle afar off, the thunder-like roaring of the princes, and the alarm of war. 26. Is it by thy direction that hawks fly away so strongly, steadily, swiftly, unweariedly, and cunningly, to catch their prey; and that they bask in the sun, or remove to warmer climates in the winter? 27—30. Is it by thy direction that eagles fly directly upward, or choose their rocky residence, or spy out and rush upon their prey?

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIX.—Behold how all things mark the excellencies of their Maker, and depend on God! The eyes of all wait on him; and he giveth them their meat in due season. And surely it is absurd for men to boast of beauty, strength, swiftness, or other bodily endowments, when one or more of the brute animals excel them in all these. But, alas! how often are we like them in their worst qualities, like hinds in sinful cowardice; like wild asses in our unsettled temper; like unicorns or wild bulls in untameableness and rage in the net of affliction; like ostriches in stupidity and unconcern about the real welfare of children; like horses in pride and fury; like hawks and eagles in ambition, greediness, and cruelty!—But, if God feed these, he will never let the redeemed sheep of his pasture want. Lo, in what lofty manner he speaks of these animals! But how much sweeter to my soul are his descriptions of Jesus and his love, Jesus and his work, Jesus and his fulness!—All for men! all for me!

CHAP. XL.

Here (1) God expressly requires Job, who had so lately been quarrelling with the dispensations of providence, to answer the questions above put to him; 1, 2. But Job submits; owns himself an ignorant, vile, and guilty offender; and promises to avoid further presumption; 3, 4, 5. (2) To humble him farther, God challenges to vie with himself, if he durst, in justice, power, majesty, and dominion, over the proud; 6—14. (3) For the same end he exemplifies his power and dominion over two of the most strong and ungovernable animals; 15—24. [chap. xli.]

MOREOVER, the LORD answered Job, and said,

2 Shall he that ^acontendeth with the Almighty instruct him? he that ^breproveth God, let him answer it.

CHAP. XL. Ver. 2. Has there not been enough said to chastise and convince thee of thy mistakes, in contending with and censuring the providence of God? 3. Job replied to the Lord, 4. Behold, with grief and shame, I acknowledge my own meanness, folly, and filthiness. I have nothing to say against thee, or for myself. 5. I have too often desired a dispute with thee; but I dare not defend my conduct. I dare not proceed farther in such bold and presumptuous expressions and accusations of thy providence. 6. Job's acknowledgment of his sin, and profession of his repentance, not being sufficiently full, God further required him to pluck up his spirits if he could, and answer some further interrogation. 7. Wilt thou, in the manner of wicked men, arraign and attempt to overturn my sentence against thee, and my government of human affairs? Wilt thou censure me as unjust in afflicting thee, that thou mayest appear innocent? 8. Wilt thou, as God, scatter abroad the tokens of thine anger? or exhibit thy frowns for the debasement and destruction of thy most powerful and insolent enemies? If so, I will acknowledge thou canst uphold thyself, and hast some pretence to contend with me; but, if not, it becomes thee humbly to submit to my most afflictive providences, 15—24. But, that thou mayest be further convinced of thy inability to contend with me, behold how incapable thou art of contending with the elephant or river horse, which I formed along with thee as thy fellow creature, and not far from thy residence! He quietly feeds upon the herbs produced by the earth. Behold what strength is in his loins; what mighty force is in the warped sinews of his belly! His tail is large, stiff, and strong, as a cedar; and with it, or his trunk, he could rend cedars. The sinews of his thighs are interwoven and wrapped together: his smaller bones are as pipes of brass, and the larger ones as bars of iron for strength. He is a principal creature on earth. The mighty God, who made him and gives him his power, can easily subdue and destroy him. The mountains afford him pasture, while the other wild beasts securely sport themselves around him. His ordinary 18 His bones are as strong pieces of brass; his bones are like bars of iron.

19 He is the chief of the ^rways of God: ^she that made him can make his sword to approach unto him.

20 Surely the mountains ^tbring him forth food, where all the beasts of the field play.

21 He lieth under the shady trees, in the covert of the reeds, and fens.

22 The shady trees cover him with their shadow; the willows of the brook compass him about.

23 Behold, ^uhe drinketh up a river, and hasteth not: he trusteth that he can draw up ^vJordan into his mouth.

24 ¶ He taketh it with his eyes: his nose pierceth through snares.

CHAP. XLI.

Is a continuation of the former. Here, to convince Job further of his weakness and inability to stand before God, he is challenged to subdue the leviathan; 1—10. (2) To manifest the terrible power and majesty of God, his Maker and Governor, this animal is represented particularly; his face as terrible; 11—13: his scales as close and impenetrable; 15, 16, 17: his breath and neesings sparkling and fiery; 18—21: his flesh firm; 22—24: his strength and courage invincible; 25—30: his motions turbulent to the waters; 31, 32: and, in general, as a very monstrous and terrible creature, for which no man is an equal match; 33, 34.

CANST thou draw out ^aleviathan with an hook? or his tongue with a cord ^bwhich thou lettest down?

2 Canst thou put an hook into his nose? or bore his jaw through with a thorn?

3 Will he make many supplications unto thee? will he speak soft words unto thee?

4 Will he make a covenant with thee? wilt thou take him for a servant for ever?

5 Wilt thou play with him as with a bird? or wilt thou bind him for thy maidens?

6 Shall thy companions make a banquet of him? shall they part him among the merchants?

7 Canst thou ^cfill his skin with barbed irons; or his head with fish spears?

8 ^dLay thine hand upon him, remember the battle, do no more.

9 Behold, the hope of him is in vain:

residence is under the shadow of trees or reeds, growing in fens or on the banks of rivers. No outrageous overflowing of waters affrights him, or makes him to run off in haste. And while he dives into a river, or drinks excessively, no terror can make him leave off till his thirst be altogether quenched.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XL.—To what arrogant quarrelling with God afflicted saints sometimes proceed! but it always issues in great shame and grief at last. Communion with God himself effectually convinces and humbles a saint, and makes him glad to part with his most beloved sins. But there is need of thorough convictions and humiliation to prepare us for remarkable deliverance. And it is unsafe to heal wounded consciences slightly, or to catch at comforts to be rid of convictions. Men may be humbled, and yet not duly humbled. God takes pleasure in debasing the proud, who attempt to rival his honours. And woe to him that contends with his Maker! But easily can that God, who made, manages, feeds, lodges, and works, these monstrous animals, provide for and manage me and all my concerns!

CHAP. XLI. Ver. 1, 2. And, to give thee another evidence of thy weakness even to contend with one of my creatures, canst thou, by a hook fastened in his tongue, nose, or jaw, draw the crocodile, or the teetled whale, out of the water? 3—5. Canst thou force him to supplicate thy favour to let him go, or make him enter into an agreement to serve thee? or canst thou make him a mean of diverting thyself and children? 6. Wilt thou, and thy partners in catching him, make a feast upon his flesh, or part your shares of him among the merchants? 7. Where is the dart with which thou canst penetrate his skin, or the fish-spear that can wound his head? 8. Touch him if thou darest; immediate destruction will prevent thy remembrance of the conflict, or repeating thy blow. 9. The hope of taking him is quite vain. The very sight of him

CHAP. XLII.

Having, with a mixture of pleasure and grief, seen the conduct of Job and his friends, we must here see the happy end of the Lord, in which every thing is set to rights again. Here (1) Holy Job, once so fretful and peevish, uneasy to himself, and indecently quarrelsome to his God, is brought to his right mind, deeply penitent and submissive; 1—6. (2) His and his friends' differences in opinion, hard words, and severe censures, are all adjusted; and all of them, sweetly joining in sacrifices and mutual prayers, are graciously accepted of God; 7—9. (3) Job's affliction, poverty, reproach, and want of children, issue in perfect health, redoubled honour and riches, a numerous family, and long life, attended with all their comforts; 10—17.

THEN Job answered the LORD, and said,

2 I know that ^athou canst do every thing, and that ^{* b}no thought can be withholden from thee.

3 Who is he that hideth counsel without knowledge? therefore have I uttered that I understood not; things ^dtoo wonderful for me, which I knew not.

4 Hear, ^eI beseech thee, and I will speak: I will demand of thee, and declare thou unto me.

5 I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear; but now ^emine eye seeth thee.

6 Wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes.

7 And it was so, that, after the LORD had spoken these words unto Job, the LORD said to Eliphaz the Temanite, My wrath is kindled against thee, and against thy two friends: for ye have not ^kspoken of me the thing that is right, as my servant Job hath.

8 Therefore take unto you now ^lseven bullocks, and seven rams, and ^mgo to my servant Job, and offer up for yourselves a burnt-offering; and my servant Job shall ⁿpray for you; for ^ohim will I accept: lest I deal with you ^pafter your folly, in that ye have not spoken of me the thing which is right, like my servant Job.

9 So Eliphaz the Temanite, and Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite, ^qwent, and did according as the LORD commanded them: the LORD also accepted ^rJob.

10 And the LORD ^sturned the captivity of Job, when he had prayed for his friends: also the LORD ^t'gave Job twice as much as he had before.

prayers, expecting nothing but present death. 20—29. No sword, spear, dart, javelin, arrows, or slinged stones, can be made to penetrate his body. 30. Without hurt or pain he makes his bed on sharp-pointed rocks, stones, or pieces of ice. 31. When he breathes and tumbles about in the water, he makes it to foam and rage, as if it were a boiling pot full of ointment. 32. When he swims along he leaves the furrows behind him, all marked with froth and foam, on the surface of the sea. 33. No animal on earth is equally fearless and terrible. 34. With contempt he beholds the highest animals or loftiest ships, and brings them down with a sweep of his tail, tearing and rending them at his pleasure. He is king of all the huge and fierce-looking monsters.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLII.—If I am so unacquainted with animals, how scanty must be my knowledge of their infinite Maker! If these are a terror to me, how much more ought the Almighty, and his infinite Majesty! If I could not tame or manage some one of these, how dare I presume to attempt wresting the government of providence out of God's hand! Surely then, above all, I must not dare to imagine him my debtor, or to interrogate him concerning his conduct. And, if my God governs these monsters, I need not be afraid of either men or devils. But why should I indulge pride, when, after all my boastings, I am to have some ugly and ravenous monster my superior in it!

17 So Job died, being old and full of days.

to, and prayer for, injurious friends, are become remarkable. God can easily make all things concur for the welfare or enrichment of his people. And it is absurd therefore to despair in distress, when this very book was written for our encouragement in it.—But was not Job a type of our blessed Redeemer? He was infinitely rich and righteous; yet for our sakes he became poor, till he had not where to lay his head. Quickly was he reduced to the depths of abasement: and behold how he lay bearing our sins, and carrying our sorrows, in the stable—in the manger—in the garden—on the cross—and in the grave! stupendous and amazing were the troubles, the assaults, he suffered from God—from sinners—from saints! How tempted—how reproached—how afflicted and tormented! But marvellous was his faith, resignation, and patience; and undeserved and powerful his intercession; till at last he arose into illustrious and lasting glory and honour; and a numerous family of Jewish and Gentile saints succeeded and proceeded from his troubles.

IV. PETITIONARY; in which he bewails his own or the church's condition, and supplicates deliverance; as Psalms iii. v. vi. vii.

Seven of these, in which the Psalmist makes confession of his sin, viz. Psalms vi. xxii. xxxviii. li. cii. cxxx. cxliii. are called PENITENTIAL. V. EUCCHARISTIC; in which he stirs up himself and others to praise and thank the Lord for his favours; as Psalms ix. xviii. xxx. xxxiii. xxxiv. lx. lxv.—lxviii. xiv—c. ciii—cviii. cxi. cxiii. cxv—cxviii. cxxii. cxiv. cxxvi. cxxxiv.
cxxxv. cxxxvi. cxxxviii. cxliv—cxlviii. cxlix. cl. But indeed historical narratives, doctrinal instructions, prophesies, consolations, supplications, praises, and thanksgivings, are often so pleasantly and profitably connected in the same psalm, that it is difficult to assign it to one class rather than to another. And what is HISTORICAL, as it relates to David and the Jewish church, is often TYPICAL, and so PROPHETIC, as it relates to Jesus Christ and the gospel church or heavenly state. Many, too, of the SUPPLICATIONS respecting deliverances from, or the destruction of, enemies, are to be considered as real PREDICTIONS of the future, there being dictated by the inspiration of him who can declare the end from the beginning.

PSALM I.

Perhaps this psalm was added by Ezra, or whoever else was collector of the others into one book. We have in it (1) The character of the truly godly; how holy they are; abstaining from every temptation to or appearance of evil; and with pleasure meditating on and endeavouring to fulfil the whole law of God: 1, 2: and how happy: planted in the nearest fellowship with Jesus the River of Life, they prosper in their lawful attempts: they never fall from their grace or profession; and they shall stand with approbation at the judgment-seat of God: 3. (2) The sinfulness and misery of the wicked.—How different from, and contrary to, the godly, in their inclination, companions, exercises, and ends! How light and unsubstantial as chaff, and ready to be hurled by the storms of infinite wrath, into the depths of hell, as cast and condemned in the righteous judgment of God! 4, 5. (3) The great reason of the happiness of saints, and of the misery of sinners. The Lord loves the righteous, and observes and approves their inclinations and behaviour; but, as an enemy, he brings destructive vengeance upon the wicked; 6.

BLESSED is the man that ^a walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of ^a sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful.

2 But ^b his delight is in the law of the LORD; ^c and in his law doth he meditate day and night.

3 And he shall ^d be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season: his leaf also shall not ^e wither; and ^f whatsoever he doth shall prosper.

4 The ungodly ^g are not so: ^h but are like the chaff which the wind driveth away.

5 Therefore the ungodly ⁱ shall not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous.

6 For the LORD ^j knoweth the way of the righteous: but the ^k way of the ungodly shall perish.

PSALM II.

Perhaps this psalm relates partly to David's instalment on his throne, and the victories over his enemies which attended it. [Compare Psal. xviii. 2 Sam. iii. v. viii. x. xviii. xx.] But the whole of it respects Jesus our Redeemer. Behold (1) The violent and harmonious, but unsuccessful, opposition which Jews and Gentiles of all ranks make to his person and work of redemption; and what ruin and wo they draw upon themselves by their attempts! 1—5. 9. (2) Notwithstanding all their raging malice, and furious opposition, JEHOVAH installs our Redeemer King in his church, and infallibly fixes him on his throne; avows him his only begotten Son, and gives unto him the Gentiles for his people: 6—8. (3) JEHOVAH's demand of serious consideration, fear of, joy and trust in, obedience and love to, his exalted Son; 9—12.

WHY ^a do the heathen ^b rage, and the people ^c imagine a vain thing?

2 The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together, ^d against the LORD, and against ^e his anointed, saying,

3 Let us ^f break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us.

4 ^g He that sitteth in the heavens ^h shall laugh: the LORD shall have them in derision.

5 Then ⁱ shall he speak unto them in his wrath, and ^j vex them in his sore displeasure.

6 Yet ^k have I ^l set my king ^m upon my holy hill of Zion.

7 I will declare ⁿ the decree: the LORD hath said unto me, ^o Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee.

8 ^p Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession.

9 Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel.

10 ^q Be wise now therefore, O ye kings: be instructed, ye judges of the earth.

11 ^r Serve the LORD with fear, and rejoice with trembling.

12 ^s Kiss the Son lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled ^t but a little. ^u Blessed are all they that put their trust in him.

PSALM III.

Having beheld the royal dignity of our Redeemer, let us here behold the joy, the peace, the safety of the redeemed, amidst their innumerable distresses. Here David, driven from his holy capital and high throne by his rebellious son Absalom, (1) Complains to his God of the number and malice of his enemies; 1, 2. (2) He encourages himself in his God, as the source and subject-matter of his safety, joy, and honour; 3. (3) He recollects how, on former occasions, his troubles had driven him to his prayers; how he had always found God ready to hear and grant his requests; how safe and easy he had lived under his protection; and how effectually he had broken the power, and restrained the malice of his enemies; 4, 5, 7. (4) Triumphantly trusting in God, as the salvation and blessing of his people, he silences all his fears, and pours forth his prayers for new protection and deliverance; 6, 8.

A psalm of David ^a when he fled from Absalom his son.

LORD, ^b how are they increased that trouble me?

2 Many ^c there be which say of my soul, ^d There is no help for him in God. Selah.

3 But thou, O LORD, art a ^e shield ^f for me; my ^g glory, and the ^h lifter up of mine head.

4 I ⁱ cried unto the LORD with my voice, and he heard me out of his holy hill. Selah.

5 I laid me down and slept; I awaked; for the LORD sustained me.

6 I will not be afraid of ten thousands of people, that have set themselves against me round about.

7 Arise, O LORD; save me, O my God; for thou hast ^j smitten all mine from the dead, and the new covenant made with him, are their everlasting foundation. His intercession, and the saving power of his Spirit, subdue them to himself. But dreadful is the vengeance executed on his Jewish, heathen, antichristian, or other opposers! And if the great are not good they shall receive the deeper damnation. O how mixed is the service of Christ on earth! Whilst we rejoice in him and his fulness, we need to tremble on account of our own guilt and corruption, and the snares and dangers that attend us. But holy jealousy and filial fear produce joys unspeakable and full of glory. While the world contemns him, and riot in wantonness, let my soul kiss, receive, love, adore, and submit to, God's Son; so shall I be blessed in him with all spiritual blessings in time and eternity.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM III.—Whilst I here behold Jesus conflicting, crying and conquering, and entering into his glory, let me think how often the greatest trials spring from whence we least expected them! from our own house, our near relations! How numerous the seed of the serpent; and how furious their opposition to Christ and his people! But, if troubles drive us to our God and our duty, we shall be effectually protected and honourably exalted. Our cries of faith shall be speedily answered from his temple, his heaven, his Christ. Confederacies of foes unnumbered, and savage as wild beasts, shall but enhance and sweeten our salvation and blessing, and shall bring upon themselves fearful and lasting ruin.

PSALM IV.

This psalm was perhaps composed on the same occasion as the former, when David fled from Absalom his son. Here (1) David, encouraged by former experience, casts his burden on the Lord, and supplicates a merciful deliverance. (2) Addressing himself to men, particularly to his persecutors, he reproves their contempt of God and religion, their delight in and practice of vanity, fraud, and falsehood. He represents the happiness of the saints in having God their protector, and ready to hear their requests. He recommends an holy filial awe of God; a careful abstinence from sin; a composed trial of, and converse with, their own heart; together with a devoting of themselves and their substance to the Lord; 2-5. (3) To encourage them to the study of practical religion, he remarks what superlative satisfaction and rest he himself had found in familiar fellowship with God, and in a believing dependance on him; 6-8.

To the *chief musician on a Neginoth,

A psalm of David.

HEAR me when I call, O God of my righteousness: thou hast enlarged me when I was in distress; have mercy upon me, and hear my prayer.

2 O ye sons of men, how long will ye turn my glory into shame? how long will ye love vanity, and seek after leasing? Selah.

3 But know that the LORD hath set apart him that is godly for himself: the LORD will hear when I call unto him.

4 Stand in awe, and sin not: commune with your own heart upon your bed, and be still. Selah.

5 Offer the sacrifices of righteousness, and put your trust in the LORD.

6 There be many that say, Who will shew us any good? LORD, lift thou up the light of thy countenance upon us.

7 Thou hast put gladness in my heart, more than in the time that their corn and their wine increased.

8 I will both lay me down in peace, and sleep; for thou, LORD, only makest me dwell in safety.

PSALM V.

Here (1) David in the assured faith of God's hearing his prayers, and hating his sins, fixes a daily, an early, an earnest, a steady, a grace-founded, correspondence with God, in his own ordinances of meditation, prayer, praise, &c. 1-7. (2) He humbly requests God's special direction in duties, which his enemies had rendered difficult to perform; supplicates and predicts the ruin of his implacable foes; and, in the assured faith of obtaining it, implores comfort and prosperity to his fellow saints; 8-12.

To the chief musicians upon Nehiloth,

A psalm of David.

GIVE ear to my words, O LORD, consider my meditation.

2 Harken unto the voice of my cry, my King, and my God: for unto thee will I pray.

3 My voice shalt thou hear in the morning, O LORD; in the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up.

4 For thou art not a God that hath pleasure in wickedness: neither shall evil dwell with thee.

5 The foolish shall not stand in thy sight: thou hatest all workers of iniquity.

6 Thou shalt destroy them that speak leasing: the LORD will abhor the bloody and deceitful man.

7 But as for me, I will come into thy house in the multitude of thy mercy: and in thy fear will I worship toward thy holy temple.

8 Lead me, O LORD, in thy righteousness because of mine enemies; make thy way straight before my face.

9 For there is no faithfulness in their mouth; their inward part is very wickedness; their throat is an open sepulchre; they flatter with their tongue.

10 Destroy thou them, O God; let them fall by their own counsels; cast them out in the multitude of their transgressions; for they have rebelled against thee.

11 But let all those that put their trust in thee rejoice: let them ever shout for joy, because thou defendest them: let them also that love thy name be joyful in thee.

12 For thou, LORD, wilt bless the righteous: with favour wilt thou compass him as with a shield.

PSALM VI.

Observe here (1) David, though eminently holy, under grievous and manifold troubles, sickness of body, charges of guilt in his conscience, vexation of mind, attended with desertion from God, and contemptuous insults from his enemies; 2, 3, 5, 6, 7. (2) His supplications, with strong cries and tears to God for mitigation of trouble, support under it, and deliverance from it: 1-4, 6. (3) His triumphant separation of himself from the wicked, in the full assurance of faith, that God had heard, and would graciously grant, his requests, and would either convert or destroy his opposers; 8-10.

To the chief musician on Neginoth upon Sheminith, A psalm of David.

O LORD, rebuke me not in thine anger, neither chasten me in thy hot displeasure.

2 Have mercy upon me, O LORD, for I am weak: O LORD, heal me, for my bones are vexed.

3 My soul is also sore vexed: but thou, O LORD, how long?

4 Return, O LORD, deliver my soul: Oh save me for thy mercies' sake.

5 For in death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave who shall give thee thanks?

6 I am weary with my groaning; all the night make I my bed to swim; I water my couch with my tears.

7 Mine eye is consumed because of grief; it waxeth old because of all mine enemies.

8 Depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity; for the LORD hath heard the voice of my weeping.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM IV.—In every distress God is a safe refuge to flee to; and the more of his kindness we have experienced, the more bold ought to be our prayers, and the stronger our faith. But base is the work, contemptible the character, and vile the desires, of the wicked, when compared with those of the godly.—What fear of God and his judgments, what serious self-examination, what cordial dedication to God through Christ, are necessary in them that are saved!—The wishes of the unregenerated are senseless and sensual: but exalted are the desires, readily granted the felicity, and unmoved the rest, of them who firmly believe.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM V.—Meditation is the director, fervour the life, faith the presenter, and a reconciled God in Christ as our own the object, the morning a principal season, and patient expectation the attendant, of every true prayer. And, while the holiness, justice, and mercy, of God in Christ demand our sincerity, and encourage our boldness, in approaching to his throne of grace, the wickedness and danger of sinners, the number and mischievous intentions of our enemies, the difficulty of our duty, and our need of immediate blessings, should keep us firmly in the exercise. Never should our brethren of mankind, and especially our fellow saints, lack our warm remembrance in it: and, from the prayer of faith, we may confidently expect the answer of peace. But alas! miserable are the sinners, the rebels, against God and his Christ! How universal their corruption of heart—of tongue—of practice! How fearful the ruin that awaits them! But their contrivances to dishonour Jesus Christ, and afflict his people, or to deliver themselves, shall be made the means of their aggravated wo.

PSALM VII.

Here, accused of traitorous conspiracy against his sovereign by king Saul, or by Cush one of his courtiers, David (1) Appeals to God concerning his innocency of that crime; 3—5. (2) He supplicates that God, as Governor of the world and King of Israel, would protect him from danger, plead his cause, and give judgment for him; 1, 2, 6—9. (3) In the exercise of faith, he depends on God to protect and deliver him, and to avenge the injuries which he had sustained upon his implacable adversaries; 10—16. (4) He resolves to ascribe the glory of all his deliverances to God alone; 17.

"Shiggaion of David, which he sang unto the LORD, concerning the *words of Cush the Benjamite.

O LORD my God, in thee do I put my trust: save me from all them that persecute me, and deliver me:

2 Lest he *tear my soul like a lion, rending it in pieces, while there is †none to deliver.

3 O LORD my God, †if I have done this; if there be iniquity in my hands;

4 If I have rewarded evil unto him that was at peace with me; (yea, †I have delivered him that without cause is mine enemy);

5 Let the enemy persecute my soul, and take it; yea, let him †tread down my life upon the earth, and lay †mine honour in the dust. Selah.

6 Arise, O LORD, in thine anger, lift up thyself, because of the rage of mine enemies; and awake for me to the judgment that thou hast commanded.

7 So †shall the congregation of the people compass thee about: for their sakes therefore †return thou on high.

8 The LORD shall judge the people: †judge me, O LORD, according to my righteousness, and according to mine integrity that is in me.

9 "Oh let the wickedness of the wicked come to an end; but †establish the just: †for the righteous God trieth the hearts and reins.

10 †My †defence is of God, which saveth the upright in heart.

11 †God †judgeth the righteous; and †God is angry with the wicked every day.

12 If he turn not, he will †whet his sword; he hath bent his bow, and made it ready.

13 He hath also prepared for him the instruments of death; he †ordaineth his arrows against the persecutors.

14 "Behold, he travaileth with iniquity, and hath conceived mischief, and brought forth falsehood.

15 *He made a pit, and digged it, and is fallen into the ditch which he made.

16 His mischief shall return upon his own head, and his violent dealing shall come down upon his own pate.

17 †I will praise the LORD according to his righteousness: and will sing praise to the name of the LORD most high.

PSALM VIII.

This psalm contains a pleasant, but solemn, meditation upon the glory, the greatness, and the grace, of God. Observe (1) How illustrious and wide-spread are his glory and renown; 1, 3, 9. (2) By how weak and insignificant instruments he manifests and spreads his superlative fame; 2. (3) His marvellous condescension and bounty to mankind, but chiefly to the man Christ, in uniting his human nature to his divine person, and in giving him all power in heaven and earth, for the benefit of his chosen people; 4—8.

To the chief musician upon †Gittith, A psalm of David.

O LORD our Lord, †how excellent is thy name in all the earth! who hast set thy glory above the heavens.

2 †Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings hast thou *ordained strength because of thine enemies, that thou mightest †still the enemy and the avenger.

3 When I †consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained;

4 †What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him?

5 †For thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honour.

6 †Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; thou hast put all things under his feet:

7 †All sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field;

8 The fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea, and whatsoever passeth through the paths of the seas.

9 O LORD our Lord, †how excellent is thy name in all the earth!

PSALM IX.

This psalm was perhaps composed on the occasion of his son Absalom's death; [2 Sam. xviii.] or on the occasion of the death of Goliath, the champion and duellist of Gath; [1 Sam. xvii.] We have in it (1) David's hearty thanksgivings to God for pleading his cause against his and his country's enemies, and for giving him a complete victory over them; 1—6: and his excitement of others to join with him therein; 11, 12. (2) His triumph in God, as the righteous Judge of the world, Protector of his people, and the terrible destroyer of his implacable enemies; 7—10, 15—18. (3) His requests for further grounds of praising God, as his own deliverer, and the confounder of his enemies; 13, 14, 19, 20.

be moved. However brutish and cruel our enemies may be, while we are weak we are strong! No false accusation need dismay us while we are conscious of our innocence, and have a gracious God to appeal to as our witness and judge. There is no kindness which he will not grant for the benefit of his people, and the glory of his own perfections. Out of his favour there is no safety, and in it there is no danger. If he justify us, none dare accuse or condemn us. And, though our uprightness is not the condition of our eternal happiness, dreadful and unavoidable is the ruin of impenitent sinners. Their contrivances and attempts against the godly shall prove means of their own destruction; when they, who trusted in the Lord and kept his way, triumph in notes of endless praise.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM VIII.—How glorious is the name of our exalted IMMANUEL, and of God in him! Quickly shall his kingdom fill both heaven and earth, however despicable its oracles, ordinances, and professors, now appear to a carnal world. By the weakest instruments he accomplishes his greatest purposes, displays his power and grace, and treads and triumphs over Satan and his votaries. The glories of nature, but especially the graces of redemption, should continually lead our hearts to the contemplation of their glorious Author. How astonishing is it to see so many creatures subjected to miserable man; and especially to behold them all subjected to the once-debased Christ!

To the chief musician upon Muth-labben,
A psalm of David.

I WILL praise thee, O LORD, with my whole heart; I will shew forth all thy marvellous works.

2 I will be glad and rejoice in thee: I will sing praise to thy name, O thou most High.

3 When mine enemies are turned back, they shall fall and perish at thy presence.

4 For thou hast maintained my right and my cause; thou sittest in the throne judging right.

5 Thou hast rebuked the heathen, thou hast destroyed the wicked, thou hast put out their name for ever and ever.

6 O thou enemy, destructions are come to a perpetual end: and thou hast destroyed cities; their memorial is perished with them.

7 But the LORD shall endure for ever:
he hath prepared his throne for judgment.

8 And he shall judge the world in righteousness; he shall minister judgment to the people in uprightness.

9 The LORD also will be a refuge for the oppressed, a refuge in times of trouble.

10 And they that know thy name will put their trust in thee: for thou, LORD, hast not forsaken them that seek thee.

11 Sing praises to the LORD, who dwelleth in Zion: declare among the people his doings.

12 When he maketh inquisition for blood he remembereth them: he forgetteth not the cry of the humble.

13 Have mercy upon me, O LORD; consider my trouble which I suffer of them that hate me, thou that liftest me up from the gates of death:

14 That I may shew forth all thy praise in the gates of the daughter of Zion: I will rejoice in thy salvation.

15 The heathen are sunk down in the pit that they made; in the net which they hid is their own foot taken.

16 The LORD is known by the judgment which he executeth: the wicked is snared in the work of his own hands.
Higgaion. Selah.

17 The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God.

18 For the needy shall not alway be forgotten: the expectation of the poor shall not perish for ever.

19 Arise, O LORD; let not man prevail: let the heathen be judged in thy sight.

20 Put them in fear, O LORD; that the nations may know themselves to be but men. Selah.

PSALM X.

In this psalm of lamentation and wo we have (1) David's mournful complaints of God's withdrawing his gracious and comfortable presence; 1. (2) His mournful and striking representation of the wicked men who persecuted him during God's absence; they proudly gloried in themselves; they counteracted the laws, and contemned the judgments, of God; they contradicted and defied their opposers; they were malicious, treacherous, crafty, hypocritical, and atheistical, persecutors; 2—11. (3) His earnest supplications for relief to the people of God, attended with the firm faith of obtaining it; 12—18.

WHY standest thou afar off, O LORD? why hidest thou thyself in times of trouble?

2 The wicked in his pride doth persecute the poor: let them be taken in the devices that they have imagined.

3 For the wicked boasteth of his heart's desire, and blesseth the covetous, whom the LORD abhorreth.

4 The wicked, through the pride of his countenance, will not seek after God:
God is not in all his thoughts.

5 His ways are always grievous; thy judgments are far above out of his sight:
as for all his enemies, he puffeth at them.

6 He hath said in his heart, I shall not be moved; for I shall never be in adversity.

7 His mouth is full of cursing and deceit and fraud: under his tongue is mischief and vanity.

8 He sitteth in the lurking places of the villages: in the secret places doth he murder the innocent: his eyes are privily set against the poor.

9 He lieth in wait secretly as a lion in his den: he lieth in wait to catch the poor: he doth catch the poor when he draweth him into his net.

10 He croucheth, and humbleth himself, that the poor may fall by his strong ones.

11 He hath said in his heart, God hath forgotten: he hideth his face; he will never see it.

12 Arise, O LORD; O God, lift up thine hand: forget not the humble.

13 Wherefore doth the wicked contemn God? he hath said in his heart,
Thou wilt not require it.

14 Thou hast seen it; for thou beholdest mischief and spite, to requite it with thy hand: the poor committeth himself unto thee; thou art the helper of the fatherless.

15 Break thou the arm of the wicked and the evil man: seek out his wickedness till thou find none.

16 The LORD is King for ever and ever: the heathen are perished out of his land.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM IX.—All success, granted by God to us, ought to animate us to the most hearty praises and thanksgiving for that and all other deliverances. And, while prosperity renders us thankful, our chief joy must be in the God of our mercies. It is himself, as the Most High in Christ, that is our infallible security against fear or danger. And, though the wicked prosper for a time, they are marked for lasting destruction. And, when God begins, he will make an end. Thrice happy are they, however poor and oppressed, who have this God of Jacob, this high Sovereign, this righteous Judge, for the object of their knowledge and trust! The more they know of him, the more they will trust in him. Sweet shall be their songs of deliverance in the church, in the ordinances below, but especially in the heavenly Zion above. But, while God remembers them in mercy, and grants their long-awaited-for requests, fearfully will he manifest his holiness, equity, and power, in the temporal and eternal ruin of his and their wicked enemies.—But ought we not here chiefly to contemplate, with joy and thankfulness, the blessings of redemption, and the victories of our Redeemer over sin, death, and hell, Jews, heathens, and antichristians, and all other incorrigible opposers; and to believe that we through him shall be more than conquerors!

EXPLANATORY NOTES. PSALM XI. Ver. 3. If the foundations be destroyed, i.e. if all regard to the laws of God, all regard to order and justice, be gone, what safety can the most innocent or virtuous expect! 6. Snare, fire, and brimstone, &c. signify all the terrible and unavoidable judgments which God executes upon the wicked, in time and eternity; such as he executed upon Saul and his agents.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM X.—What a heavy burden to an exercised saint are the hidings and frowns of his God! and the greatest saints undergo the severest trials of their faith. Men's persecutions, or Satan's temptations, often unite with God's absence to distress the soul. Behold, into what dreadful monsters sins have transformed men—proud—persecutors—boasters—covetous—prayerless—careless of God and religion—disobedient—impenitent—insolent—secure—profane—treacherous—heretical—murderous—hypocritical—blasphemous! But their wickedness is all before the Lord. And, to revenge their affronting of himself, to honour his people's relation to, dependance on, and expectations from, him, and to manifest his wonted readiness to appear in their behalf, he will quickly arise to punish them. And, when God breaks the power, and in awful vengeance manifests the wickedness, of their enemies, he deals kindly with his people. When the wicked are cast down, they are lifted up to safety, holiness, and honour! And he usually pours out upon them a remarkable spirit of humility, and of earnest supplication, as the mean of ushering in their deliverance.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XI.—The saints' sorest temptations come as often from carnal friends as from their inveterate enemies: and often the most upright and blameless meet with the greatest malignity on earth. When wicked rulers have once unhinged the fundamental laws of equity, the greatest virtue often exposes men to the greatest danger. But, while God is in Christ, in the church,

17 LORD, ^athou hast heard the desire of the humble: thou wilt ^{*}prepare their heart; ^bthou wilt cause thine ear to hear:

18 To ^cjudge the fatherless and the oppressed, that the ^dman of the earth may no more [†]oppress.

PSALM XI.

Let us behold here (1) David tempted by his timorous friends to escape to some mountain, and hide himself from the fury of Saul or of Absalom, as if that were his only safe course now that his enemies were exerting themselves to the utmost, and all things were in disorder and confusion; 1—3. (2) David's baffling the temptation by a resolute profession of his trust in God, as the observer of all men—as the holy and righteous punisher of the wicked, and friend of the godly; 4—7.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

IN ^athe LORD put I my trust: ^bhow say ye to my soul, Flee as a bird to your mountain?

2 For, lo, ^cthe wicked bend their bow, they make ready their arrow upon the string, that they may ^{*}privily shoot at the upright in heart.

3 If ^dthe foundations be destroyed, what can the righteous do?

4 ^eThe LORD is in his holy temple, the LORD's throne is in heaven: ^fhis eyes behold, his eyelids try, the children of men.

5 ^gThe LORD trieth the righteous: ^hbut the wicked and him that loveth violence his soul hateth.

6 ⁱUpon the wicked he shall rain [†]snare, fire and brimstone, and [†]an horrible tempest: this shall be the ^kportion of their cup.

7 ^lFor the righteous LORD loveth righteousness; ^mhis countenance doth behold the upright.

PSALM XII.

In this psalm, which was probably penned during the reign of Saul, observe (1) The times rendered extremely bad, by the almost universal death of the godly, the general decay of piety and honesty, the common prevalence of dissimulation and flattery; by the proud and daring contempt of God, and oppressing the poor; and by the protection and encouragement of wickedness by those that bare rule in church or state; 1—4, 8. (2) Enough in God to balance the evils of the worst of times. He is ready to help. He will in due time reckon with the wicked, and restrain their insolence. He will seasonably and effectually relieve his oppressed people. His words are pure, firm, and faithful; and he will always secure a remnant for himself; 1, 5—7.

To the chief musician ^aupon Sheminith, A psalm of David.

^{*}HELP, LORD; for ^bthe godly man ceaseth; for the faithful fail from among the children of men.

2 ^cThey speak vanity every one with his neighbour: with flattering lips, and with [†]a double heart, do they speak.

3 ^dThe LORD shall cut off all flattering lips, and the tongue that speaketh [†]proud things:

4 ^eWho have said, With our tongue will we prevail; our lips ^{||}are our own: who is lord over us?

5 ^fFor the oppression of the poor, for the sighing of the needy, now will I arise, saith the LORD; I will set him in safety from him that ^{*}puffeth at him.

6 ^gThe words of the LORD are pure words: as silver tried in a furnace of earth, purified seven times.

7 ^hThou shalt keep them, O LORD; thou shalt preserve [†]them from this generation for ever.

8 ⁱThe wicked walk on every side when [†]the vilest men are exalted.

PSALM XIII.

Here we have the Psalmist sowing in tears, but reaping in joy. Observe (1) His extreme distress, occasioned by God's apparent unkindness, and by inward anguish of soul, and the insolence of enemies; 1, 2. (2) His fervent supplications that God would consider his case, strengthen his faith, direct his goings, and comfort his heart; 3, 4. (3) Sudden deliverance, flowing from a fixed trust in God, and inducing to a triumphant joy in him; 5, 6.

To the ^{*}chief musician, A psalm of David.

HOW long wilt thou forget me, O LORD! for ever? how long wilt thou hide thy face from me?

2 ^bHow long shall I take counsel in my soul, having sorrow in my heart daily? ^chow long shall mine enemy be exalted over me?

3 ^dConsider and hear me, O LORD my God: lighten mine eyes, lest I sleep the sleep of death;

4 ^eLest mine enemy say, I have prevailed against him; and those that trouble me rejoice when I am moved.

5 ^fBut I have trusted in thy mercy; my heart shall rejoice in thy salvation.

6 I ^gwill sing unto the LORD, because he hath dealt bountifully with me.

PSALM XIV.

This psalm represents the fearful sinfulness and misery of mankind, and the marvellous method of deliverance from it. Behold (1) All mankind fearfully infected with the malady of sinful corruption in heart and life; which in its exercise so vilely dishonours God, debases and defiles the soul, and disturbs the world around; 1—3. (2) Warm expostulations for the conviction, awakening, and reclaiming, of wicked men; 4—6. (3) Con-and in heaven, they who trust in him need never despair. Nothing escapes his notice, and nothing shall escape, without a due reward. While in his afflicting the righteous he but tries them for their purification and honour, the holiness and equity of his nature demand that his unavoidable judgments should in a terrible manner destroy the wicked.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XII.—It is fearfully ominous when those distinguished saints, who support nations or churches, are removed by death, while none are raised up to fill their room. Perilous are the times when piety towards God and integrity towards men cease—when all men seek their own, not the things of Jesus Christ—when hypocrites by fair speeches deceive the simple! But pride must have a fall; either before the throne of grace, or into the depths of hell! And, though God for a time may seemingly overlook his people, he will never forget, disregard, or cast them off. He best knows when to deliver; and, if we have but faith, he will never fail. When the saints' night of trouble is at the darkest, and their prayers fervent, their deliverance is near. While God's pure and precious promises stand fast in Christ, no increase, activity, or malice, of wicked men shall ever be able utterly to destroy or deceive his people.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XIII.—How painful, to an exercised believer, is the sense of God's absence and frowns! An hour is an age without his love! But the most precious saints are often exercised with long and constant sorrows: and their anxiety and vain contrivances to help themselves will but add to their burden, entangle them more and more, and bring them to the brink of despair. But, though God hide, and frown, and smite, his new covenant relation cannot be broken. Let Satan and his agents triumph as they may in their fall, there is full hope of their recovery; nay, it is at hand. Trust in God's mercy, and prayers poured into his bosom will quickly issue in great deliverance and joy.

2 The Lord looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand and seek God.

3 They are all gone aside; they are all together become filthy: there is none that doth good, no not one.

4 Have all the workers of iniquity no knowledge? who eat up my people as they eat bread, and call not upon the Lord.

5 There were they in great fear: for God is in the generation of the righteous.

6 Ye have shamed the counsel of the poor, because the Lord is his refuge.

7 Oh that the salvation of Israel were come out of Zion! when the Lord bringeth back the captivity of his people, Jacob shall rejoice, and Israel shall be glad.

PSALM XV.

Here let us (1) With wonder observe the happy state of present fellowship with God in his church on earth, and of everlasting fellowship with him in the temple above; and how fixed the saints are in this their new covenant state; 1—5. (2) Let us, with self-examination, remark the discriminating characters of such as are admitted to that happy state. They are sincere, upright, and honest, in all their ways; are kind to neighbours; they esteem others in proportion to the appearance of Christ's image on them; and they prefer a good conscience to every earthly advantage; 2—5.

A psalm of David.

LORD, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in thy holy hill?

2 He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart.

3 He that backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doth evil to his neighbour, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbour.

4 In whose eyes a vile person is contemned; but he honoureth them that fear the Lord. He that sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not.

5 He that putteth not out his money to usury, nor taketh reward against the REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XIV.—How desperately wicked are human hearts! If all their thoughts were manifested, how horrible and shameful the sight! Atheism in heart is the source of all corruption in life! Men are very similar in sin, particularly in inward corruption. And there is great reason to bless God for the riches of his grace if any thing good is implanted in us by his Spirit. How absurdly, and against conscience, must men act when they eat up, with pleasure hate, reproach, persecute, and oppress, the people of God; or neglect prayer to him! Or when they attempt to shame and banter poor saints out of their religion, and dependence on him! But, if God be for us, who can be against us? Secret terrors shall apprehend our most jovial persecutors. How fervent are right desires for salvation through Christ; and how ravishing our enjoyment of it! For now is come Jesus, and his salvation and strength; let Jews and Gentiles magnify the Lord, and rejoice in God their Saviour.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XV.—Professors of religion have great need to examine themselves. Many have a place in God's church below, who will never be admitted into his holy heaven. And, if we would know our true state, God's word must be the sole standard, and his Spirit the great director and manager of our trial. It is not fair words, nor high pretences, but uniform obedience in heart and life to God's law, that will prove the reality of our grace. We must exercise ourselves to keep a conscience void of offence towards God and man; to keep good company; and to have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather to reprove them. Though our holiness and virtue be not the foundation of our unchangeable happiness, they are the marks of our being rooted and grounded in Christ, our infallible establisher.

innocent. He that doth these things shall never be moved.

PSALM XVI.

This psalm is indeed a Michtam, a golden psalm. Here is the man according to God's heart, (1) Committing himself to God as his Preserver: 1. (2) Avowing his endeared love to the people, and strict adherence to the worship, of God; 3, 4. (3) With great confidence and joy claiming God for his satisfying portion; 2, 5—7. (4) Comforting himself in, and blessing God for, his present intimacy with him, and granting direction to him, and for his certain prospect of the eternal enjoyment of him; 8—11. But chiefly Jesus, the man of God's right hand, surrendering himself up to his Father's service, in room of, and for the everlasting advantage of, his elect! taking out his new covenant claim to God as his God and portion for ever, and as our God and portion in him! Behold how, supported of God, in his holy manhood he suffers unto a tremendous death and debased burial, in hope of eternal honours!

A Michtam of David.

PRESERVE me, O God; for in thee do I put my trust.

2 O my soul, thou hast said unto the Lord, Thou art my Lord: my goodness extendeth not to thee;

3 But to the saints that are in the earth, and to the excellent, in whom is all my delight.

4 Their sorrows shall be multiplied that hasten after another god: their drink-offerings of blood will I not offer, nor take up their names into my lips.

5 The Lord is the portion of mine inheritance, and of my cup: thou maintainest my lot.

6 The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places; yea, I have a goodly heritage.

7 I will bless the Lord, who hath given me counsel: my reins also instruct me in the night seasons.

8 I have set the Lord always before me: because he is at my right hand, I shall not be moved.

9 Therefore my heart is glad, and my glory rejoiceth: my flesh also shall rest in hope.

10 For thou wilt not leave my soul in hell; neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption.

11 Thou wilt shew me the path of life: in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore.

PSALM XVII.

Here, in the depth of distress, (1) David appeals to God concerning the integrity of his heart and the justness of his cause; 1—4. (2) He prays for establishment in grace within; for tokens of divine favour from above; and for preservation from his carnal, malicious, insolent, restless, and powerful, enemies around; 5—14. (3) He triumphs in the assured faith of his everlasting enjoyment of, and conformity to, God; 15.

PSALM XVI. Ver. 5. The Lord and his fulness, answerable to every need, every desire, is represented as a lot or portion, in allusion to the shares of Canaan, which were divided by lot, Num. xxxiv.; and to the shares of liquor in cups at feasts; importing how permanent, unalterable, refreshing, and strengthening he is to the enjoyers. 10. Hell, with respect to David or Christ, cannot signify the place of the damned; for thither they never went: but it may include great distress of spirit, the grave, and the state of the dead.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XVI.—Trust in God does not merit, but it secures, divine preservation, as God cannot disappoint one who believes his word, or rests on his new covenant characters. Our holiness cannot profit God, but it marks us his, and tends to our advantage: and, next to fellowship with God, that with ourselves is the most excellent and useful. But, the more a believer advances in holiness, the more humble thoughts he will have of himself, in view of the pure and all sufficient JEHOVAH. They who delight in God will delight in those who bear his image, as the most excellent on earth. Such as have Jesus Christ as their atonement, and God in him, need no idols or other sacrifices. And, if we want to banish idolatry, the most distant appearances of it ought to be avoided and abhorred. But happy are they who have God as their portion, their wealth, and comfort, by his own gospel grant! This secures against want as well as against ruin. This secures direction in time, comfort in death, and glory through eternity. And O how pleasant death and eternity appear, when Christ is considered as our way, as our forerunner, and God in him as our everlasting ALL IN ALL!

A prayer of David.

HEAR * the right, O LORD; ^a attend unto my cry; give ear unto my prayer, that goeth † not out of feigned lips.

2 ^a Let my sentence come forth from thy presence: let thine eyes behold the things that are equal.

3 ^a Thou hast proved mine heart; thou hast visited me in the night; thou hast tried me, and shalt find nothing: I ^a am purposed that my mouth shall not transgress.

4 Concerning the works of men, ^a by the word of thy lips I have kept me from the paths of the destroyer.

5 ^a Hold up my goings in thy paths, that my footsteps † slip not.

6 I ^a have called upon thee, for thou wilt hear me, O God: incline thine ear unto me, and hear my speech.

7 Shew thy ^a marvellous loving kindness, O thou || that savest by thy right hand them which put their trust in thee from those that rise up against them.

8 ^a Keep me as the apple of the eye, hide me under ^a the shadow of thy wings.

9 From the wicked * that oppress me, from † my deadly enemies, who compass me about.

10 ^a They are enclosed in their own fat: ^a with their mouth they speak proudly.

11 ^a They have now compassed us in our steps: they have ^a set their eyes bowing down to the earth;

12 † Like as a lion that is greedy of his prey, and as it were a young lion || lurking in secret places.

13 ^a Arise, O LORD, * disappoint him, cast him down: deliver my soul from the wicked, † who is thy sword:

14 † From men who are thy ^a hand, O LORD, from men of the world, who have ^a their portion in this life, and whose belly thou fillest with thy hid treasure: || they are full of children, and leave the rest of their substance to their babes.

15 As for me, ^a I will behold thy face in righteousness: I shall be ^a satisfied, when I awake, with thy * likeness.

PSALM XVIII.

In this psalm of thanksgiving for manifold deliverances observe (1) David's ardent love to God in Christ, whom he believed to be his own in every gracious and saving revelation; and whom he had experienced his merciful, almighty, and seasonable Deliverer from depths of trouble: 1—19. (2) His comfortable reflections on the integrity which the Lord had enabled him to maintain, and on the gracious kindness of God consequent thereupon: 20—28. (3) His thankful ascription of all the glory of his noted exploits to God, as his director and strengthener: 29—42. (4) His triumphant faith and hope of further assistance and favour from God to himself, and to his seed for evermore: 43—50. In all these he was a type of Jesus Christ. [See 2 Sam. xxii.]

PSALM XVII. Ver. 1. Prayer is called meditation; because our requests ought to be seriously considered before we present them to God. It is called a lifting up of our souls, and pouring out of our hearts; because our requests must be the earnest desires of our soul. It is called supplication, seeking, knocking, inquiring, to denote the humility and earnestness of our petitions. It is represented as a crying, sighing, groaning, and breathing, to signify our great pressures and necessities, and the great earnestness of our desires after relief. It is represented as a looking to, talking with, and taking hold of God, to denote the humble familiarity, importunate earnestness, and patient resignation, necessary therein. From the gestures used in it, it is represented as a bowing, kneeling, falling down, or standing before God: and, from its acceptableness to God, it is represented as odours, or incense.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XVII.—Happy are they who, when traduced by men, have the testimony of a good conscience to their uprightness before God: His providence will manifest injured innocence at last. And happy are they who in all their trials improve God's word as their preservative from evil; and who,

To the chief musician, ^a A psalm of David, ^b the servant of the LORD, who spake unto the LORD the words of this song in the day that ^c the LORD delivered him from the hand of all his enemies, and from the hand of Saul: And he said,

I ^a WILL love thee, O LORD, my strength.

2 The LORD is my ^a rock, and my fortress, and my ^a deliverer; ^a my God, ^a my strength, in whom I will trust; my ^a buckler, and ^a the horn of my salvation, and my ^a high tower.

3 ^a I will call upon the LORD, who is ^a worthy to be praised: so shall I be saved from mine enemies.

4 ^a The sorrows of death compassed me, and the floods of † ungodly men made me afraid.

5 The † sorrows of hell compassed me about: the ^a snares of death prevented me.

6 ^a In my distress I called upon the LORD, and cried unto my God: he heard my voice out of his temple, and my cry came before him, even into his ears.

7 Then ^a the earth shook and trembled: the foundations also of the hills moved, and were shaken, because he was wroth.

8 There went up a ^a smoke † out of his nostrils, and fire out of his mouth devoured: coals were kindled by it.

9 He ^a bowed the heavens also, and came down: and darkness was under his feet.

10 And ^a he rode upon a cherub, and did fly: yea, he did fly upon the wings of the wind.

11 ^a He made darkness his secret place; his pavilion round about him were dark waters and thick clouds of the skies.

12 At ^a the brightness that was before him his thick clouds passed, hail stones and coals of fire.

13 ^a The LORD also thundered in the heavens, and the Highest gave his voice; hail stones and coals of fire.

14 Yea, ^a he sent out his arrows, and scattered them; and he shot out lightnings, and discomfited them.

15 ^a Then the channels of waters were seen, and the foundations of the world were discovered at thy rebuke, O LORD, at the blast of the breath of thy nostrils.

assisted by his gracious influence, watch over their heart, their tongue, their feet, cleaving to that which is good, and abhorring that which is evil! But not the strongest saint hath a fund of grace to support himself, without constant supplies from Jesus Christ, our living fountain. And a deep sense of our own weakness and insufficiency is the surest way to be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might. Every saint walks in a slippery path, where many watch for his halting. He ought therefore always to watch, and pray that he faint not. Our whole salvation is of God, and is of infinite love from first to last. In vain Satan rages against those whom God so tenderly, closely, and kindly, keeps. No luxurious, proud, active, crafty, or cruel, devourers shall ever pluck them out of his hand. They are but God's sword and hand, by which he corrects his people, or manages, in his providence as he pleases. And how wretched are they amidst all their affluence and wealth, as it is their portion, ripening them for everlasting misery! But happy are they who through their much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God! Happy they, whose transient views of God, and imperfect likeness to him, issue at last in endless and immediate vision of him, and in perfect conformity to his image!

enemy, and from them which hated me;
for they were ^atoo strong for me.

18 ^aThey prevented me in the day of my calamity; but the LORD was my stay.

19 ^aHe brought me forth also into a large place; he delivered me because he delighted in me.

20 The LORD ^arewarded me according to my righteousness; according to the cleanness of my hands hath he re-

LORD, and have not wickedly departed from my God.

22 ^aFor all his judgments were before me, and I did not put away his statutes from me.

23 I was also ^aupright [†]before him, and I kept myself from ^amine iniquity.

24 ^aTherefore hath the LORD recompensed me according to my righteousness, according to the cleanness of my hands [†]in his eye-sight.

thou wilt shew thyself upright;

26 With the pure thou wilt shew thy-

27 ^aFor thou wilt save the afflicted people; ^abut wilt bring down high looks.

28 ^aFor thou wilt light my ^acandle:
the LORD my God will enlighten my darkness.

29 ^aFor by thee I have run through a troop; and by my God have I leaped over a wall.

30 As for God, ^ahis way is perfect:
^athe word of the LORD is [†]tried: ^ahe is a buckler to all those that trust in him.

31 ^aFor who is God save the Lord?
or who is a rock save our God?

32 ^a*It is God* that girdeth me with 34 ^aHe teacheth my hands to war, so that a bow of steel is broken by mine arms.

35 Thou hast also given me ^athe shield of thy salvation: and thy right hand hath holden me up, and [†]thy gentleness ^ahath made me great.

36 Thou hast ^aenlarged my steps
under me, that ^{||}my feet did not slip.

37 ^aI have pursued mine enemies, and overtaken them: neither did I turn again till they were consumed.

38 I have wounded them that they were not able to rise: they are fallen under my feet.

39 For thou ^ahast girded me with strength unto the battle: thou hast ^asub-dued under me those that rose up against me.

40 Thou hast also given me ^athe necks of mine enemies; that I might destroy them that hate me.

41 ^aThey cried, but there was none to save them: even unto the LORD, but he answered them not.

42 Then did I ^abeat them small as the dust before the wind; I did cast them out as the dirt in the streets.

43 Thou hast delivered me from ^athe

45 The strangers shall fade away, and ^abe afraid out of their close places.

46 The ^aLORD liveth; and ^ablessed vation be exalted.

47 It is God that ^aavengeth me, and ^asubdueth the people under me.

48 He delivereth me from mine enemies: ^ayea, thou liftest me up above those that rise up against me: thou hast delivered me from the ^{||}violent man.

49 ^aTherefore will I give thanks to thee, O LORD, among the heathen, and sing praises unto thy name.

50 ^aGreat deliverance giveth he to his ^aking; and sheweth mercy to his ^aanointed, to David, and to his seed for

PSALM XIX.

Now the books of God are opened, not for our trial and condemnation, but for our instruction. (1) The book of creation and Providence, in which all the works of God instruct mankind in general concerning the eternal wisdom, power, and goodness, of their Maker; 1—6. (2) The book of Inspiration, the sure, the right, the pure, the true, the perfect, and powerful, oracles of which instruct, convert, comfort, and warn, the members of the church; and in keeping of which there is an exceeding great and everlasting reward of glory obtained; 7—11. (3) Observe what conviction of sin—what supplication for pardon of it, and preservation from it—and for the acceptance of our duties through Jesus' blood—does or ought to ensue, upon a proper perusal of these volumes of heaven; 12—14.

out of his chamber, and rejoiceth as a

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XVIII.—How close and marvellous is the connection between Christ and his people, that the same relations of God, the same words and works of God, and exercises towards God! will apply to both! Let Jesus then be at once my Saviour, my Forerunner, and my Pattern. Pleasant and profitable is God to the souls that find him. He is their ALL and IN ALL! Sure is their help in time of need who trust in and love him! though God may take the most awful manner to answer the prayers of his people in delivering them out of their distress, and exalting them to safety and joy. Those deliverances demand the most solemn and hearty thanksgivings, which are from great and imminent danger, and in exact answer to earnest prayers, and which are granted by wonderful appearances, in the midst of great difficulties, and of great and lasting good fruits.

Happy are they who, interested in Jesus' righteousness, have their corruptions subdued by his grace, and are by his Spirit enabled to conquer every spiritual foe! God fights for them! who can be against them! What knowledge and skill —what strength—what activity—what courage—what protection—what success and victory—what an high throne—is allotted them by the living, the faithful, the powerful, and unparalleled, God of their salvation! With firm faith may such expect the Lord's perfecting all that grace and glory which concerns them.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XIX.—How inexcusable are atheists and idolaters, when the ever obvious heavens, the regular succession of nights and days, and the enlightening and warming sun, teach men so much of God! But much more they, who enjoy the heavens, the firmament of the gospel church, all illuminated by Jesus Christ the sun of righteousness, and his oracles, ordinances, and ministers, if they offend! Happy those hearts in which his word, so pure, so perfect, so true, so righteous, so precious and pleasant, is hid; and in which its enlightening, instructing, converting, comforting, nourishing and healing, influence is felt! The more we look into this blessed glass, the more cause we shall see of deep humiliation before God, on account of the number and strength of our secret corruptions. But terrible are presumptuous sins—sins done against light and love! and yet the best need to watch and pray against them. Great then is the mercy that all our salvation from sin, and all the acceptance of our holy services, is in Christ the beloved, and his infinitely valuable righteousness.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XX.—Neither piety nor power can exempt men from sore troubles. All then have need for prayer; and even the greatest need this assistance from the meaneast. But what an almighty helper, a kind acceptor, and a liberal bestower, is God in Christ as the God of his people! Such as make him the object of their trust shall soon have reason to make him the 7 ^Some trust in chariots, and some in horses: but we will ^remember the name of the LORD our God.

8 They ^are brought down and fallen; but we are risen, and stand upright.

9 ^Save, LORD; let the king hear us when we call.

PSALM XXI.

In this song of thanksgiving observe (1) All the joys, the honours, and happiness of King David, and of King Jesus, founded in the perfections and gracious works of God; 1—6. (2) Full assurance of the stability of David's and of Jesus' throne, and of the discovery and destruction of their implacable opposers; 7—12. (3) Earnest supplications to God for the exhilarating displays of his glory and power; 13.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

THE king shall joy in thy strength, O LORD; and ⁱn thy salvation how greatly shall he rejoice!

2 ^Thou hast given him his heart's desire, and hast not withholden the request of his lips. Selah.

3 ^For thou preventest him with the blessings of goodness: thou settest a crown of pure gold on his head.

4 ^He asked life of thee, and thou gavest it him, even length of days for ever and ever.

5 ^His glory is great in thy salvation; honour and majesty hast thou laid upon him.

6 ^For thou hast ^made him most blessed for ever: thou hast ^made him exceeding glad with thy countenance.

7 ^For the king trusteth in the LORD; and through the mercy of the Most High he shall not be moved.

8 ^Thine hand shall find out all thine enemies; thy right hand shall find out those that hate thee.

9 ^Thou shalt make them as a fiery oven in the time of thine anger: the LORD shall swallow them up in his wrath, and the fire shall devour them.

10 Their fruit shalt thou destroy from the earth, and their seed from among the children of men.

11 For they intended evil against thee: they imagined a mischievous device, which they are not able to perform.

12 Therefore ^shalt thou make them turn their ^back when thou ^shalt make ready ^thine arrows upon thy strings against the face of them.

13 ^Be thou exalted, LORD, in thine own strength: so will we sing and ^praise thy power.

PSALM XXII.

Here the debasement and exaltation of David king of Israel are merely subservient to, and figurative of, the debasement and exaltation of Jesus Christ, our blessed AJELATH SHAHAR, Hind of the morning. In this deep debasement we find (1) Bitter, ground of their praise. An assured trust in him is the best way to preferment and establishment. They who renounce all other confidences, and persevere in prayer to him, shall abide in his love and be assured of his protection.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XXI.—Chiefly, my soul, behold here the everlasting honours, joys, happiness, and blissful influences, of thy Redeemer! Behold how fixed is his kingdom and dignity in the infinite, everlasting, and unchangeable, wisdom, power, mercy, equity, goodness, and truth, of the Most High! Behold the inexpressible vengeance which kindles upon and destroys his Jewish—his heathen—his antichristian—and other incorrigible enemies—But rejoice, my soul, in this God thy Saviour. Rejoice at the glory with which he is crowned—at the life granted to and lodged in him; and in his being made blessings for evermore to MEN—blessings for evermore to ME! And let the ruinous overthrow of his Jewish, or other enemies, make me to stand in awe of provoking him, by presumptuous refusals of him, or by rebellion against him. Rich is that salvation purchased by him—honourable and lasting is its benefits! God gives exceedingly above what we can ask or think! Crowns, and all other enjoyments, are God's gifts to men. All affliction or destruction of persons or nations is the work of God's hand, and the reward of their sin. And the ruin of the wicked, particularly of the despisers of Jesus Christ, contributes to the salvation and joy of his people.

but tender and believing, complaints of God's withdrawalment,—attended with earnest attempts of faith, to quiet the complainer's soul under it,—drawn from the consideration of God's holiness and highness, and his seasonable deliverance of his people, in former times, when they cried to him; 1—5. (2) Bitter complaints of men's reproaches, and contemptuous derision,—attended with self-encouragements, drawn from the former experience of God's early and seasonable care and friendship; 6—10. (3) Bitter complaints of the number and rage of enemies,—attended with exquisite agonies of body and mind, and mingled with earnest prayers, for God's speedy support, assistance, and powerful deliverance; 11—21. By the typical exaltation of David, and the increase, happiness, honour, and duration, of his kingdom, is prefigured the glorious exaltation of our Redeemer, importing (4) That he should have a church among men;—that his Father should be glorified in them as well as in him;—that his true subjects should abound in prayer, praise, spiritual comfort, and everlasting life;—and that his church should be enlarged with multitudes of both Jews and Gentiles; and should, to his honour, and for his worship and service, continue to all generations; 22—31.

To the chief musician upon *Aijeleth, Shaha, A psalm of David.

MY God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? why art thou so far from helping me, and from the words of my roaring?

2 O my God, I cry in the day time, but thou hearest not; and in the night season, and I am not silent.

3 But thou art holy, O thou that inhabitest the praises of Israel.

4 Our fathers trusted in thee: they trusted, and thou didst deliver them.

5 They cried unto thee, and were delivered: they trusted in thee, and were not confounded.

6 But I am a worm, and no man; a reproach of men, and despised of the people.

7 All they that see me laugh me to scorn: they shoot out the lip, they shake the head, saying,

8 He trusted on the LORD, that he would deliver him: let him deliver him, seeing he delighted in him.

9 But thou art he that took me out of the womb; thou didst make me hope when I was upon my mother's breasts.

10 I was cast upon thee from the womb: thou art my God from my mother's belly.

11 Be not far from me; for trouble is near; for there is none to help.

12 Many bulls have compassed me: strong bulls of Bashan have beset me round.

13 They gaped upon me with their mouths, as a ravening and a roaring lion.

14 I am poured out like water, and all my bones are out of joint: my heart is like wax; it is melted in the midst of my bowels.

15 My strength is dried up like a potsherd; my tongue cleaveth to my jaws; and thou hast brought me into the dust of death.

16 For dogs have compassed me; the assembly of the wicked have enclosed me; they pierced my hands and my feet.

17 I may tell all my bones; they look and stare upon me.

18 They part my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture.

19 But be not thou far from me, O LORD: O my strength, haste thee to help me.

20 Deliver my soul from the sword; my darling from the power of the dog.

21 Save me from the lion's mouth; for thou hast heard me from the horns of the unicorns.

22 I will declare thy name unto my brethren: in the midst of the congregation will I praise thee.

23 Ye that fear the LORD, praise him; all ye the seed of Jacob, glorify him; and fear him, all ye the seed of Israel.

24 For he hath not despised nor abhorred the affliction of the afflicted; neither hath he hid his face from him; but when he cried unto him he heard.

25 My praise shall be of thee in the great congregation: I will pay my vows before them that fear him.

26 The meek shall eat and be satisfied: they shall praise the LORD that seek him: your heart shall live for ever.

27 All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the LORD: and all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before thee.

28 For the kingdom is the LORD's: and he is the governor among the nations.

29 All they that be fat upon earth shall eat and worship: all they that go down to the dust shall bow before him: and none can keep alive his own soul.

30 A seed shall serve him: it shall be accounted to the LORD for a generation.

31 They shall come, and shall declare his righteousness unto a people that shall be born, that he hath done this.

PSALM XXIII.

This is a short but noted song of the children of God. Here is, (1) New covenant relation to God, as a full and everlasting security against all our hurtful wants; 1. (2) Pleasant experience of God's acting up to his new covenant character, in disposing of, directing, assisting, feasting, and comforting his people; 2, 3, 5. (3) Well-grounded hopes of God's careful and seasonable supplies; of his comfortable presence and help amidst distress and death; and of the perpetual and everlasting manifestation of his mercy and grace to us-ward; and of our eternal nearness to, and immediate enjoyment of, him; 1, 4—6.

A psalm of David.

THE LORD is my shepherd; I shall not want.

what a debt of love and of praise the redeemed owe to their Lord, who so bare their sins, their griefs! And what ought they not cheerfully to suffer for his sake! What tidings—what supplies—what conquests—what continuance—what glories of grace, issue from the sufferings of our great IMMANUEL! Himself opens the triumphant song, and exhibits his experience for the comfort of his distressed brethren; and with joy declares his adherence to all his covenant engagements. Sweet is the entertainment of his flesh and blood—yea, of all the fulness of God, which he has prepared for the poor, the afflicted, and meek! Precious and lasting is their life who by faith feed upon him! He goes forth conquering the nations, high and low, to the obedience of faith. Let then his cause be oppressed as it may, in every age it will prove triumphant.

PSALM XXIV.

Probably this psalm was penned for the use of the Hebrews when David brought up the ark of God to Jerusalem, or when Solomon brought it up to the temple; [2 Sam. vi. 1 Kings viii.] in order to raise their hearts above their external ceremonies to a reception of, and walking in, Christ, who was thereby prefigured. Observe (1) Christ's kingdom of nature, comprehending the whole world and all the inhabitants thereof; 1, 2. (2) His kingdom of grace, in the nature of it, the gracious character of its subjects, and their charter to their everlasting happiness above; 3-6. (3) Under the figure of a call to admit the ark, we have a solemn summons, issued forth by God, for the heavens to receive Jesus our glorious and almighty King, into their blissful abodes, in his ascension: and for us to receive him into our hearts, and societies below; 7-10.

A psalm of David.

THE ^aearth is the LORD's, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein.
 2 ^bFor he hath founded it upon the seas, and established it upon the floods.
 3 ^cWho shall ascend into the hill of the LORD? and who shall stand in his holy place?
 4 ^d*He that hath clean hands and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully;
 5 He shall receive ^ethe blessing from the LORD, and ^frighteousness from the God of his salvation.
 6 This is ^gthe generation of them that mighty in battle.

 9 ^lLift up your heads, O ye gates;
 even lift ^mthem up, ye everlasting doors;
 and the King of glory shall come in.
 10 ⁿWho is this King of glory? The LORD of hosts, he is the King of glory.

PSALM XXV.

Here observe (1) What serious work prayer is:—what lifting up of soul—what directing of our hearts to God, and fixing them on him, must be in it; 1-15. (2) What mercies ought to be prayed for;—pardon of sin; 6, 7, 18: direction in duty; 4, 5:

familiar intimacy with God; 10: deliverance from trouble; 17-18: preservation from adversaries; 20, 21: and, in fine, safety and deliverance to the church; 22. (3) What pleas are proper to be used in prayer; as, the trust we have reposed in God; 2, 3, 5-21: our own divinely-affected sincerity in the Lord's way; 21: our distress, and the malice of our enemies; 2, 16-19: but chiefly the mercy that is in God, and the glory which redounds to his name, from his bestowing of new-covenant favours; 6, 7-11. (4) Strong encouragements to prayer, taken from the perfections of God's nature, and from his promises of instruction and direction; from the fulness and grace of his covenant, and from his delight in allowing men familiar intimacy and fellowship with himself; 8-14.

A psalm of David.

 my soul.
 2 O my God, I ^btrust in thee; let me not be ashamed; let not mine enemies triumph over me.
 3 Yea, ^clet none that wait on thee be

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XXIII.—O the advantages, the pleasures, of experimental godliness! God, whose knowledge and care are infinite—God, who is ALL and giveth all, is his people's Shepherd! What can they then want, when all the fulness of God is opened for their supply! He makes them to rest and feed in the pastures of his ordinances and promises; and leads them, for their refreshment, to the still waters of his gospel truth, gracious influence, redeeming blood, and everlasting love. He restores their souls, when under disease or decay; and, moved by his own sovereign grace, leads them in Jesus and his word as their way, and enables them to perfect holiness in his fear. Amidst all the pains and the fears of death, his gracious presence, his drawing and sealing influence, and his supporting promises, are their sufficient encouragement. Amidst their unnumbered enemies of lusts, of devils, and of men, not only necessities, but even abundant comforts, are allowed them. The mercy and goodness of God, in streams of spiritual and temporal blessings, inseparably attend them, till at last they are for ever filled with all the fulness of God in his heavenly temple.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XXIV.—How great is Christ, who is Lord of all! Surely it is proper that all persons should praise and serve him; and that all things should be received as from his hand, and used to his honour. But what change of state and nature—what holiness in heart and life—is necessary to constitute us true members of his church on earth, or inhabitants of his heaven above! There is great need of serious self-examination, lest he at last reject us; for without holiness no man shall see the Lord. But, however sincere our hearts, blameless our lives, or fervent our prayers, not these, but Jesus' righteousness and JEHOVAH's grace, must found our title to eternal felicity. O how

PSALM XXVI.

Here (1) David solemnly appeals to God concerning his integrity ; his constant regard to him and his grace ; his regular attendance upon instituted ordinances ; and his fixed aversion to sin and sinners ; 1—8. (2) He deprecates from himself the condemnation of the wicked, and his being shut up in society with them ; 9, 10. (3) Depending on the mercy of God, he resolves to hold fast his integrity, and maintain his confident hopes of eternal life ; 11, 12.

PSALM XXVII.

Behold here (1) The holy courage and undaunted bravery of true faith amidst manifold dangers and enemies ; 1—3. (2) What earnestness there ought to be, and what pleasure, profit, and honour, there are, in the study of familiar fellowship with God ; 4—6. (3) Fervent desires, with strong cries and supplications, for the gracious favour, spiritual presence, saving direction and protection, of God ; 7—12. (4) Strong and encouraging expectations of help, favour, and strength, from God ; 10, 13, 14.

transcendently glorious is Jesus' entrance into manhood—his exaltation to heaven—and his entrance into his people's hearts and assemblies on earth !
And, in fine, his solemn return to his celestial mansions, attended by all his ransomed millions, after the last judgment !

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XXV.—An interest in God and his love is the surest protection from shame and danger ; and the more our hearts and desires are weaned from earthly vanities, and set upon God and things above, we are the more sure that our hopes shall not be disappointed. He that believeth shall not be ashamed. God never fails them that seek him. But the short-lived triumphs of obstinate transgressors shall issue in everlasting misery and confusion. When we pray for ourselves we must never forget our brethren. Being by nature blind and impotent, our whole direction in, and strength for, duty must come from God. And none who wait on him as the God of their salvation shall ever wait in vain. Hopes fixed on his everlasting love can never be disappointed : and what others have found an infallible support we may boldly depend upon. Sins of youth, though pardoned by God, ought to be remembered by us for our humiliation. And our only hope of God's favour must be founded on his free grace through Jesus' blood. All true knowledge of God and his ways, and wisdom to walk therein, spring from his own mercy and faithfulness. Sense of sin must drive us to implore the forgiveness and destruction of it : but no sin, however great, ought to render us desperate. God, by his infinite power and grace, can pardon the greatest as well as the least. And, the more sin God forgives to us, the more we are obliged to love, fear, and serve, him : and, the more we serve him, the greater shall be our happiness in life and intimacy with him. Whatever God does, however afflicting, shall work together for our good. Though God and men should concur to entangle us in nets of trouble, and Satan distress our mind with his accusations, the fruit of all is not to destroy us, but to purge away our sin. But our kindest resignation to afflictions must be attended with prayer for the removal of them.

Though we must love our enemies, we must pray against their wickedness.
And, while we earnestly study the utmost uprightness in our practice, the church in general, and every member thereof, ought to share in our fervent requests.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XXVI.—While here we behold Jesus Christ, in a figure, as holy, harmless, undefiled, and separated from sinners, and wash our heart and hands in his blood and grace, let us observe how comfortable, under calumny, it is to possess conscious innocence. They, who trust in God, are kept by his mighty power through faith unto salvation : and the faith or sense of Jesus' love, and a due regard to his word, will effectually restrain from sin.
But nothing is more dangerous to souls than fellowship with the ungodly. To sit long amidst light, vain, and unprofitable, discourse, perhaps more deadens the heart than that which is notoriously profane. No man appears really gracious who does not study to avoid the company of the wicked. No man rightly approaches God's ordinances but in the way of washing his heart and life in the sin-expiating and subduing fountain of Jesus' blood and Spirit. None can love God without loving his ordinances, and counting his service perfect freedom, and his works of grace inexpressibly marvellous.—However joyous the assemblies of sinners may be now, it will be infinitely dreadful to be gathered with them in death or in the last judgment. And even those, who walk in their uprightness, must before God stand on the foundation of Jesus' redeeming blood and infinite mercy ; and all their steadfastness in Christ, or his way, must be thankfully ascribed to their God.

PSALM XXVIII.

Observe here (1) David, amidst great distress, earnestly supplicating deliverance from his God; 1-3. (2) His implacable enemies doomed to the just punishment of their sin; 4-5. (3) Himself triumphing in God as the hearer of his prayers, and as his protector, helper, and strength; 6-8. (4) His solemn supplication for salvation and blessedness, for nourishment, honour, and safety, to the people of God; 9.

A psalm of David.

UNTO thee will I cry, O LORD my rock; be not silent to me; lest, if thou be silent to me, I become like them that go down into the pit.

2 Hear the voice of my supplications when I cry unto thee, when I lift up my hands toward thy holy oracle.

3 Draw me not away with the wicked, and with the workers of iniquity, who speak peace to their neighbours, but mischief is in their hearts.

4 Give them according to their deeds, and according to the wickedness of their endeavours: give them after the work of their hands; render to them their desert.

5 Because they regard not the works of the LORD, nor the operation of his hands, he shall destroy them, and not build them up.

6 Blessed be the LORD, because he hath heard the voice of my supplications.

7 The LORD is my strength and my shield; my heart trusted in him, and I am helped: therefore my heart greatly rejoiceth; and with my song will I praise him.

8 The LORD is their strength, and he is the saving strength of his anointed.

9 Save thy people, and bless thine inheritance: feed them also, and lift them up for ever.

PSALM XXIX.

This Psalm was probably composed on the occasion of a thunder storm. It is a solemn charge from heaven to great men to worship and glorify God; who, (1) In his magnificence, and power, thunders in the most terrible, alarming, and destructive manner; 1-9. (2) Who is supreme Governor of the world, and bestows strength and peace on his peculiar people; 10, 11.

A psalm of David.

GIVE unto the LORD, O ye mighty, give unto the LORD glory and strength.

2 Give unto the LORD the glory due unto his name; worship the LORD in the beauty of holiness.

3 The voice of the LORD is upon the waters: the God of glory thundereth: the LORD is upon many waters.

4 The voice of the LORD is powerful; the voice of the LORD is full of majesty.

5 The voice of the LORD breaketh the cedars; yea, the LORD breaketh the cedars of Lebanon.

6 He maketh them also to skip like a calf; Lebanon and Sirion like a young unicorn.

7 The voice of the LORD divideth the flames of fire.

8 The voice of the LORD shaketh the wilderness: the LORD shaketh the wilderness of Kadesh.

9 The voice of the LORD maketh the hinds to calve, and discovereth the forests: and in his temple doth every one speak of his glory.

10 The LORD sitteth upon the flood; yea, the LORD sitteth King for ever.

11 The LORD will give strength unto his people; the LORD will bless his people with peace.

PSALM XXX.

In this psalm, composed for the dedication of the new palace, which David had built for himself at Jerusalem, [2 Sam. v. 11.] or for the dedication of it, after it had been polluted by Absalom; [2 Sam. xvi. 22.] (1) He offers thanksgiving to God, for answering his prayers—overthrowing his enemies—and preserving his life; 1-3, 11, 12. (2) He calls and charges others to praise the Lord on account of the purity of his nature, the short duration of his frowns, and the sweetness of his favours; 4, 5. (3) He remarks how his carnal security, under prosperity, had occasioned his sudden fall under divine hidings and frowns; 6, 7. (4) He recollects what supplications he had made to God in his former distress; 8-10. (5) He triumphs in the kindness of God towards him; and resolves to praise and thank him for evermore on account of it; 11, 12.

A psalm and song at the dedication of the house of David.

I WILL extol thee, O LORD; for thou hast lifted me up, and hast not made my foes to rejoice over me.

2 O LORD my God, I cried unto thee, and thou hast healed me.

3 O LORD, thou hast brought up my soul from the grave: thou hast kept me alive that I should not go down to the pit.

4 Sing unto the LORD, O ye saints of his, and give thanks at the remembrance of his holiness.

5 For this anger endureth but a moment; in his favour is life: weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning.

6 And in my prosperity I said, I shall never be moved.

7 LORD, by thy favour thou hast made my mountain to stand strong: thou didst hide thy face, and I was troubled.

their ruin must shun their ways.—But great are the thankful praises which saints owe to their God for the mercies which have been granted in answer to their prayer, and which faith assures them he will grant. And what almighty power and grace Jesus Christ, and every one of his true members, have engaged on their side to prevent their miscarriage! Clusters of well-connected and everlasting blessings are secured by God for his people. And great should be the joy they have in, and care for, one another's spiritual and eternal welfare.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XXIX.—Alas! how shameful it is that we should need repeated calls to the solemn worship and service of God; and that great men are but seldom shining examples of devotion! Formal ceremony of words is too often the whole of our worship, which is neither performed in Jesus's holy name, nor in beautiful holiness of heart. But infinitely great is the glory of JEHOVAH! His voice in thunder, in stormy tempests, is not more awful and effective than his voice in his word is on my heart, and hath been, or shall be, in the gospel church. There he speaks to multitudes, numerous as the waters; he awakens, convicts, and converts, the sinner; humbles the proud, and draws the obstinate, fast rooted as the mountains; darts light and love into their heart, and brings forth many sons and daughters to glory, for the advancement of his own honour. He strengthens them against every danger and enemy, and blesses them with that peace which passeth all understanding.

PSALM XXXI.

Observe here (1) David's solemn professions of his dependance upon God, and his prayers for support and deliverance: 1—8. (2) His sad complaints of inward grief, bodily weakness, unkindness of friends, unjust censures of enemies, and horror of death—attended with a solemn committing of himself to God's mercy and care, and earnest supplication for deliverance from enemies: 9—18. (3) Amidst admiration of God's kindness to his people, and thanksgiving for favours to himself, he encourages himself and others firmly to trust in God: 19—24.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

In ^athee, O LORD, do I put my trust;
let me never be ashamed: ^bdeliver me in thy righteousness.

2 ^cBow down thine ear to me; deliver me speedily: be thou ^{*}my strong rock, for an house of defence to save me.

3 For thou art my rock and my fortress; ^dtherefore for thy name's sake lead me and guide me.

4 Pull me ^eout of the net that they have laid privily for me; for thou art my strength.

5 Into thine hand I commit my spirit:
thou hast redeemed me, O LORD ^fGod of truth.

6 I ^ghave hated them that regard lying vanities; but I trust in the LORD.

7 I will be glad and rejoice in thy mercy: for thou hast ^hconsidered my trouble; thou hast known my soul in adversities;

8 And hast not shut me up into the hand of the enemy: thou hast set my feet in a large room.

9 ⁱHave mercy upon me, O LORD, for I am in trouble; mine eye is consumed with grief, yea, my soul and my belly.

10 For my life is spent with grief, and my ears with sighing: my strength fail-eth because of mine iniquity, and my bones are consumed.

11 ^jI was a reproach among all mine enemies, but especially among my neighbours; and a fear to mine acquaintance:
they that did see me without fled from me.

12 ^kI am forgotten as a dead man out of mind: I am like ^la broken vessel.

13 For I have heard the ^mpsalms of many: ⁿfear was on every side: while they took counsel together against me, they devised to take away my life.

14 ^oBut I trusted in thee, O LORD;
I said, Thou art my God.

15 ^pMy times are in thy hand: ^qdeliver me from the hand of mine enemies, and from them that persecute me.

16 ^rMake thy face to shine upon thy servant: ^ssave me for thy mercies' sake.

17 ^tLet me not be ashamed, O LORD; for I have called upon thee: ^ulet the wicked be ashamed, and ^vlet them be silent in the grave.

18 ^wLet the lying lips be put to silence, which speak ^xgrievous things ^yproudly and contemptuously against the righteous.

19 ^zOh how great is thy goodness, which thou hast laid up for them that fear thee, which thou hast wrought for them that trust in thee before the sons of men!

20 ^aThou shalt hide them in the secret of thy presence from the pride of man:
thou shalt keep them secretly in a pavilion from the strife of tongues.

21 Blessed be the LORD; ^bfor he hath shewed me his marvellous kindness in a ^cstrong city.

22 For I said ^din my haste, I am cut off from before thine eyes: ^enevertheless, thou heardest the voice of my supplications when I cried unto thee.

23 ^fO love the LORD, all ye his saints: for the LORD ^gpreserveth the faithful, and plentifully rewardeth the proud doer.

24 ^hBe of good courage, and he shall strengthen your heart, all ye that hope in the LORD.

PSALM XXXII.

Perhaps this psalm was composed for the great day of the national atonement, on the tenth day of the seventh month; [Lev. xvi.] In it observe (1) The exceeding riches of the grace of God, manifested in blessing men with forgiveness of sin, and with protection amidst dangers, and direction in duty; 1, 2, 7, 8. (2) The indispensable duty of those who desire new covenant blessings—viz. to acknowledge their offences to God—to implore his favours, which they need—to walk humbly and circumspectly before him—and to rejoice in him as God and their God; 3—6, 9—11.

A psalm of David, ^aMaschil.

BLESSED is he whose ^btransgres-sion is forgiven, whose sin is covered.

prayers in Jesus' name ensure a quick and comfortable answer. The more we commit ourselves to God, the more we shall experience of his faithfulness in performing his promises: and the more we know of his redeeming power and grace, and of his faithfulness, the more fully we shall commit ourselves to his care in life or in death. When God is our portion we may renounce every thing else as lying vanities. And his unceasing mercies, his sympathy under trouble, his protection from evils, and his increase of blessings, deserve our constant returns of praise. But, though the sins of saints cannot damn them, yet they often severely distress them on earth. And through much conformity to Christ, in the enduring of hatred, reproach, and persecution, they must enter into the celestial kingdom of God. The wicked often abandon themselves to the most false and virulent reproach against Jesus Christ and his people; but distress, death, and judgment, will quickly silence them. Meanwhile, God's present protection of his people, and the unbounded happiness of heaven, are comforts more than sufficient for the saints to balance all their troubles on earth. Often his great and unexpected mercies shame their unbelief, and rebuke their carnal fear. And O what reason the best have to bewail their repeated and deep despondencies under trouble, and to encourage others to avoid them! For, when we consider our God and his mercies, alas how cold is our love, how weak our faith, and languid our hopes!

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XXX.—To what plagues and sickness the best of saints are by sin obnoxious in this world! But the prayer of faith is always availing under every trouble. And there is great ground of praise and thanksgiving in every deliverance which comes through Jesus Christ. How delightful to saints is God's infinite and sanctifying holiness! His favours are greatly beneficial and most loved, but precious fruitful, are his frowns, and his people's griefs.
Fellowship with him on earth, and chiefly in heaven, turns their mourning into joys unspeakable and full of glory. Outward prosperity, or even ravishing fruits of spiritual joy, quickly occasion security and pride; and become means of casting us down into the depths of desertion and trouble. There is great need then to be always humble and watchful amidst smiles of providence, and to believe and pray amidst depths of distress. And it is not our own advantages, but the services we can render to God on earth, that should make us desire to live!
Quickly God changes the lot and frame of his people, and fills their lips with his praise. And it is delightful when high songs of redeeming love are remarkably begun on earth.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XXXI.—Trust in God never issues in confounding disappointments. Both Jesus and JEHOVAH's righteousness secure to believing suppliants a speedy deliverance out of every trouble and snare; and fervent

2 Blessed is the man unto whom the LORD imputeth not iniquity, and in whose spirit there is no guile.
3 When I kept silence my bones waxed old through my roaring all the day long.
4 For day and night thy hand was heavy upon me: my moisture is turned into the drought of summer. Selah.
5 I acknowledged my sin unto thee, and mine iniquity have I not hid. I said, I will confess my transgressions unto the LORD; and thou forgavest the iniquity of my sin. Selah.
6 For this shall every one that is godly pray unto thee in a time when thou mayest be found: surely in the floods of great waters they shall not come nigh unto him.
7 Thou art my hiding place; thou shalt preserve me from trouble; thou shalt compass me about with songs of deliverance. Selah.
8 I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way which thou shalt go: I will guide thee with mine eye.
9 Be ye not as the horse, or as the mule, which have no understanding: whose mouth must be held in with bit and bridle, lest they come near unto thee.
10 Many sorrows shall be to the wicked: but he that trusteth in the LORD, mercy shall compass him about.
11 Be glad in the LORD, and rejoice, ye righteous: and shout for joy, all ye that are upright in heart.

PSALM XXXIII.

Contains a sweet, but solemn, summons to praise the Lord (1) For his justice, goodness, and truth, manifested in his word and works; 1—5. (2) For his power, manifested in the work of creation, and in his sovereign dominion over the world; 6—11, 13—17. (3) For his special and new-covenant relations, and merciful kindness towards his chosen people; 12, 18—22.

REJOICE in the LORD, O ye righteous; for praise is comely for the upright.
2 Praise the LORD with harp: sing unto him with the psaltery, and an instrument of ten strings.
3 Sing unto him a new song: play skilfully with a loud noise.
4 For the word of the LORD is right; and all his works are done in truth.
5 He loveth righteousness and judgment: the earth is full of the goodness of the LORD.
6 By the word of the LORD were the heavens made; and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth.
7 He gathereth the waters of the sea

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XXXII.—Dreadful is the nature of sin! It, and nothing else, renders us miserable. But rich is the grace of God, and efficacious the merit of Jesus' blood, which freely removes it. And justification through his imputed righteousness effectually promotes integrity and holiness of heart and life! But the remains of sin must be purged out by sore troubles and wounding convictions. For there is a close connection between gospel repentance and pardon of sin. It is not, however, our repentance, but God's mercy in Christ as the atonement, that is the cause of our pardon. Hopeful is a sinner's case when he is once brought to humble applications to a gracious God, who is more ready to pardon than we are to pray for it. They who seek him, even in trouble, shall surely find him; the more imminently terrible their danger, the more shall his grace and love be magnified in their salvation. And it is no small encouragement to their seeking of God in their distress, that others like themselves, have found mercy in like cases. But great is the protection, preservation, deli-together as an heap: he layeth up the depth in storehouses.

8 Let all the earth fear the LORD: let all the inhabitants of the world stand in awe of him.
9 For he spake, and it was done; he commanded, and it stood fast.
10 The LORD bringeth the counsel of the heathen to nought: he maketh the devices of the people of none effect.
11 The counsel of the LORD standeth for ever, the thoughts of his heart to all generations.
12 Blessed is the nation whose God is the LORD; and the people whom he hath chosen for his own inheritance.
13 The LORD looketh from heaven; he beholdeth all the sons of men.
14 From the place of his habitation he looketh upon all the inhabitants of the earth.
15 He fashioneth their hearts alike; he considereth all their works.
16 There is no king saved by the multitude of an host: a mighty man is not delivered by much strength.
17 An horse is a vain thing for safety: neither shall he deliver any by his great strength.
18 Behold, the eye of the LORD is upon them that fear him, upon them that hope in his mercy;
19 To deliver their soul from death, and to keep them alive in famine.
20 Our soul waiteth for the LORD: he is our help and our shield.
21 For our heart shall rejoice in him, because we have trusted in his holy name.
22 Let thy mercy, O LORD, be upon us, according as we hope in thee.

PSALM XXXIV.

This psalm was composed by David, when Achish, or Abimelech, king of Gath, drove him from his court, as an idiot or madman; [1 Sam. xxi. 10—15.] Here are (1) David's high praises to God, for the favours which himself and others had received; 1—6. (2) His warm invitations and strong encouragements to others to seek after and fear the Lord, and to trust in him for all necessary supplies, in time or in eternity; 7—10. (3) Familiar advices to children and others to eschew every thing sinful, and make conscience of known duty, both towards God and men, as a mean of present and future happiness; 11—14. (4) A representation of the misery of the wicked, in having God against them, as an avenging enemy, and in having ruin before them as the just reward of their sins; and of the happiness of the godly in having God near to them in every case, ready to hear their requests, to protect them amidst dangers, and to deliver them from enemies and trouble; 15—22.

A psalm of David when he changed his behaviour before Abimelech: who drove him away, and he departed.
I WILL bless the LORD at all times; his praise shall continually be in my mouth.
2 My soul shall make her boast in the verance, instruction, and direction, which God bestows upon his pardoned ones, while the impenitent are loaded with sorrows everlasting and unnumbered. It is necessary then to receive his instructions, and to bend before his warnings, that we may rejoice in his mercy and triumph in his praise.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XXXIII.—How great, glorious, and good, is our God! and as extensive is the matter, and reasonable the exercise, of our praise. All that God is in himself; all that he hath declared in his word; all that he hath done in his works; is the matter of his gift, and subject of our songs. Thrice happy are his peculiar people, to whom he is their Portion, their kind Observer, their powerful Protector, their almighty Deliverer, their gracious Provider, and constant Preserver! The thoughts of his universal power, influence, and operations, and the vanity of all things beside him, should effectually engage us to contented resignation of ourselves, and all that we have, into his hand.

LORD : ^athe humble shall hear thereof, and be glad.

3 ^cO magnify the LORD with me, and let us exalt his name together.

4 ⁱI sought the LORD, and he heard me, and delivered me from all my fears.

5 ^eThey [†]looked unto him, and were lightened : and their faces were not ashamed.

6 ^hThis poor man cried, and the LORD heard him, and saved him out of all his troubles.

7 ⁱThe angel of the LORD encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them.

8 ^kO taste and see that the LORD is good : ^lblessed is the man that trusteth in him.

9 ^mO fear the LORD, ye his saints ; ⁿfor there is no want to them that fear him.

10 ^oThe young lions do lack, and suffer hunger : but they that seek the LORD shall not want any good thing.

11 Come, ye ^pchildren, hearken unto me : I ^qwill teach you the fear of the LORD.

12 ^rWhat man is he that desireth life, and loveth many days, that he may see good ?

13 ^sKeep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from speaking guile.

14 ^tDepart from evil, and do good ; ^useek peace, and pursue it.

15 ^vThe eyes of the LORD are upon the righteous, and his ears are open unto their cry.

16 ^wThe face of the LORD is against them that do evil, to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth.

17 ^xThe righteous cry, and the LORD heareth, and delivereth them out of all their troubles.

18 ^yThe LORD is nigh ^zunto them that are of a broken heart ; and saveth ^{aa}such as be of a contrite spirit.

19 ^bMany are the afflictions of the righteous ; but the LORD delivereth him out of them all.

20 ^cHe keepeth all his bones ; not one of them is broken.

21 ^dEvil shall slay the wicked ; and they that hate the righteous ^eshall be desolate.

22 ^fThe LORD redeemeth the soul of his servants ; ^gand none of them that trust in him shall be desolate.

PSALM XXXV.

In this psalm (1) David, as a type of Christ, complains of the cruelty of his enemies, in striving with him—in persecuting him—in seeking his ruin—and in reproaching, contemning, deriding, and triumphing, over him ; 1, 3, 4, 7, 11, 15, 16, 20, 21, 25, 26. (2) He pleads his own innocency, that he had never given them any provocation ; but, amidst their abuse of him, had earnestly and affectionately studied to promote their welfare ; 7, 19, 12, 13, 14. (3) He prays that God would espouse his cause ;

protect, deliver, and comfort, his soul ; defeat the designs, and disappoint the expectations, of his enemies ; and that he would countenance and encourage his friends ; 1, 2, 4, 17, 22—27. (4) He predicts the destruction of his enemies, and the abounding of his own comfort ; and, in the views of both, resolves to thank and praise the LORD ; 4—10, 18, 28.

A psalm of David.

PLEAD my cause, O LORD, with them that strive with me : fight against them that fight against me.

2 ^{*}Take hold of shield and buckler, and stand up for mine help.

3 Draw out also the spear, and stop the way against them that persecute me : ^bsay unto my soul, I am thy salvation.

4 ^cLet them be confounded and put to shame that seek after my soul : let them be turned back and brought to confusion that devise my hurt.

5 ^dLet them be as chaff before the wind ; and let the angel of the LORD chase them.

6 Let their way be [†]dark and slippery ; and let the angel of the LORD persecute them.

7 ^eFor without cause have they hid for me their net in a pit, which without cause they have digged for my soul.

8 ^fLet destruction come upon him [†]at unawares ; ^gand let his net that he hath hid catch himself : into that very destruction let him fall.

9 ⁱAnd my soul shall be joyful in the LORD : it shall rejoice in his salvation.

10 ^kAll my bones shall say, LORD, who is like unto thee, who ^ldeliverest the poor from him that is too strong for him, yea, the poor and the needy from him that spoileth him.

11 ^mFalse witnesses did rise up ; ^{*}they laid to my charge things that I knew not.

12 ⁿThey rewarded me evil for good, to the [†]spoiling of my soul.

13 ^oBut, as for me, when they were sick, my clothing was sackcloth : I [†]hum-bled my soul with fasting ; and my prayer ^preturned into mine own bosom.

14 I ^qbehaved myself ^{*}as though he had been my friend or brother : I bowed down heavily, as one that mourneth for his mother.

15 But in mine ^radversity, ^rthey rejoiced, and gathered themselves together : yea, the abjects gathered themselves together against me, and I knew it not ; they did tear me, and ceased not :

16 ^sWith hypocritical mockers in feasts, ^tthey gnashed upon me with their teeth.

17 LORD, ^uhow wilt thou look on ? ^vrescue my soul from their destructions, [†]my darling from the lions.

18 ^wI will give thee thanks in the great congregation : I will praise thee among [†]much people.

19 Let not them that are mine enemies

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XXXIV.—Great is the sovereignty of God in smiling upon his people, when their folly richly deserves his fearful frowns !—He can wonderfully change their heaviest loads of fear into shouts of praise ; and certain and speedy are his gracious returns to the prayers of faith. None wait on him, none cry to him, and are disappointed. What angelic guards protect, what unfailing provision is made for, them that fear him ! Though the most ravenous beasts, and covetous men, should be pinched and starved, none that fear him shall ever want, either for soul or for body, what is for their good. It is a great mercy when children are from their infancy carefully instructed in 20 For they speak not peace; but they devise deceitful matters against them that are quiet in the land.

21 Yea, they opened their mouth wide against me, and said, Aha, aha, our eye hath seen it.

22 This thou hast seen, O LORD:
keep not silence: O LORD, be not far from me.

23 Stir up thyself, and awake to my judgment, even unto my cause, my God and my LORD.

24 Judge me, O LORD my God, according to thy righteousness; and let them not rejoice over me.

25 Let them not say in their hearts, Ah, so would we have it: let them not say, We have swallowed him up.

26 Let them be ashamed and brought to confusion together that rejoice at mine hurt: let them be clothed with shame and dishonour that magnify themselves against me.

27 Let them shout for joy and be glad that favour my righteous cause:
yea, let them say continually, Let the LORD be magnified, who hath pleasure in the prosperity of his servant.

28 And my tongue shall speak of thy righteousness and of thy praise all the day long.

PSALM XXXVI.

Observe here (1) How great is the wickedness of men! They naturally condemn God, flatter themselves in sin, and abandon themselves to falsehood and mischief; 1-4. (2) How great the excellency of God, in truth, in righteousness, and in mercy! And what a fountain of preservation, support, comfort, light, and life, he is to his people; 5-9. (3) How, from the excellency and goodness of God, David draws encouragement to pray for himself and other saints, and to triumph in the view of his enemies' ruin; 10-12.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David
the servant of the LORD.

THE transgression of the wicked saith within my heart, that there is no fear of God before his eyes.

2 For he flattereth himself in his own eyes, until his iniquity be found to be hateful.

3 The words of his mouth are iniquity and deceit: he hath left off to be wise, and to do good.

4 He deviseth mischief upon his bed;
he setteth himself in a way that is not good; he abhorreth not evil.

5 Thy mercy, O LORD, is in the heavens; and thy faithfulness reacheth unto the clouds.

6 Thy righteousness is like the great mountains; thy judgments are a great deep: O LORD, thou preservest man and beast.

7 How excellent is thy loving-kindness, O God! therefore the children of men put their trust under the shadow of thy wings.

8 They shall be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of thy house; and thou shalt make them drink of the river of thy pleasures.

9 For with thee is the fountain of life: in thy light shall we see light.

10 O continue thy loving-kindness unto them that know thee; and thy righteousness to the upright in heart.

11 Let not the foot of pride come against me, and let not the hand of the wicked remove me.

12 There are the workers of iniquity fallen: they are cast down, and shall not be able to rise.

PSALM XXXVII.

This psalm is wholly of the instructive kind. As the Mosaic system, and the covenant between God and Israel, as his peculiar people, promised remarkable temporal felicity to such as were obedient to the law, and denounced temporal miseries against those that were impious and profane; the Psalmist here cautions against stumbling at particular providences, which might appear contrary to the tenor of that covenant. Here are (1) Plain and express warnings against fretfulness at the prosperity of the wicked in their wickedness; 1, 7, 8; with the arguments and reasons enforcing the same; viz. that the character of the wicked is ignominious, while that of the righteous is honourable; 12, 14, 21, 26, 30-32. That the wicked, in the very height of their prosperity, are near to destruction, while the righteous, even in their adversity, have special protection from God, and shall never be ruined; 2, 9, 10, 13, 15, 17, 20, 28, 33-40. And that God hath special blessings in store for, and even in this life manifests distinguished kindness to, the righteous and their seed; 11, 16, 18, 19, 22-25, 28, 29, 37. (2) Proper and effectual remedies, to prevent sinful fretting at the prosperity of the wicked, or the troubles of the godly: viz. hoping in God as our Saviour; delighting in God as our Companion, Friend, and Portion; following him as our Guide; departing from evil, and doing good; waiting on the Lord, and keeping his way; 3-6, 27, 34.

A psalm of David.

FRET not thyself because of evil doers, neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity:

2 For they shall soon be cut down like the grass, and wither as the green herb.

3 Trust in the LORD, and do good;
so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed.

4 Delight thyself also in the LORD; and he shall give thee the desires of thine
heart.

5 Commit thy way unto the LORD; trust also in him; and he shall bring it to pass.

6 And he shall bring forth thy righteousness as the light, and thy judgment as the noon-day.

7 Rest in the LORD, and wait patiently for him: fret not thyself because of him who prospereth in his way, be-the righteousness of his Son; and therefore he ought to be praised on their account.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XXXVI.—Living in open sins is a certain mark of an unregenerate heart. And how deceitful above all things and desperately wicked are the hearts of men by nature! What self-flattery—what abominable thoughts and devices—what false and mischievous words—what horrid deeds—proceed from them! Night and day they perpetrate crimes. And none are worse than apostate professors: their deliberate wickedness shews the power of the devil uncontrolled within them. And they, who, when awake on their beds, have their thoughts unoccupied in God's words, will find the devil at hand to suggest evil to them. But how high—how fixed—how unsearchable are the excellencies of God! Unbounded is his mercy—unchangeable his veracity—conspicuous his justice—unsearchable his words—and awful his works! Benevolent and extensive in his providential care. Precious and engaging his love. And powerfully efficacious and delightful are the provision, the comfort, the life,

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XXXV.—The best of men are often most cruelly persecuted. But a good God to plead their cause, and a good conscience to witness their integrity, are enough to comfort them. And a time is at hand when God will sufficiently recompense all the injuries done to them. However little persecutors see it, their feet stand on a slippery place, and a dreadful pit of ruin is just before them. And, though we may not wish evil to our worst enemies, yet we may safely wish confusion to the implacable enemies of Christ and his church. Base ingratitude grievously wounds a generous spirit; when the greatest services meet with an ill requital. But, let men use us as they will, it is our duty to pray for them. Though our kindness may be lost upon them, and our prayers slighted by them, they shall not return without a blessing to ourselves. And, if we are made the reproach of the meanest, we but fill up what is behind of the sufferings of Christ.—But short-lived is the triumphing, fearful and lasting the misery, of those who are enemies to Christ and his people; while ravishing and lasting are the prosperity and joys of the godly in the kind delight and favour of their God! All our comforts come from his hand, through PSALM XXXVIII.

This psalm appears to have been penned by David under some remarkable distress, attended with a deep sense of sin as the procuring cause of it. Here are (1) His sorrowful complaints of God's sore displeasure; and of the weight of his own sins; 1—5: of the sickness of his body, and distress of his mind; 6—10: of the unkindness of his friends; 11: and of the unprovoked injuries he received from his enemies, who were spiteful, cruel, subtle, unjust, ungrateful, impious, devilish, numerous, and powerful; 12—20. (2) His remarkable patience and resignation under his troubles; 13—15. (3) His fervent supplications to God for the mitigation of them; 1: and for comfort and support under, and speedy deliverance from, them; 6, 21, 22: attended with candid and ingenuous acknowledgments of the sinful causes thereof; 3—5, 18.

because of thine anger; neither is there mine head: as an heavy burden they are, too heavy for me.5 ^gMy wounds stink and are corrupt, because of my foolishness.6 ^hI am troubled; I am bowed down greatly; I go mourning all the day it is quickly at an end. And never is their ruin nearer than when it spreads and flourishes like a green bay tree. It ripens them for everlasting wrath, and fattens them as oxen for the slaughter of endless woe. But godliness hath great gain, having the promises of this life and of that which is to come. If, rooted, and grounded in Christ, we trust and delight in the Lord, and wait on him, in the faith of his promises and obedience to his laws, extensive and glorious shall be our inheritance, pleasure, support, honour, safety, plenty, protection, peace, happy death, and everlasting salvation.

the light, the love, the righteousness, which he bestows upon his people. But inevitable is the ruin, and intolerable the everlasting misery, of their enemies.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XXXVII.—Even eminent saints are apt to fret at the prosperity of the wicked; and yet how little reason is there for it! Be the apparent happiness of the wicked what it will in this world, it is mingled with the poisoning curse of God: it gives no solid satisfaction while it lasts, and 8 ^bI am feeble and sore broken: ^kI have roared by reason of the disquietness of my heart.

9 ^bLORD, 'all my desire is before thee; and my groaning is not hid from thee.

10 ^mMy heart panteth, my strength faileth me: as for the light of mine eyes, it also ^fis gone from me.

11 ⁿMy lovers and my friends stand aloof from my [†]sore; and my ^{||}kinsmen stand afar off.

12 ^oThey also that seek after my life lay snares for me: and they that seek my hurt speak mischievous things, and imagine deceits all the day long.

13 ^pBut I, as a deaf man, heard not; and I was as a dumb man that openeth not his mouth.

14 Thus I was as a man that heareth not, and in whose mouth are no re-proofs.

15 ^qFor ^{*}in thee, O LORD, do I hope: thou wilt [†]hear, O LORD my God.

16 ^rFor I said, Hear me, lest otherwise they should rejoice over me: when my foot slippeth they magnify themselves against me.

17 For ^sI am ready [†]to halt, and my sorrow is continually before me.

18 For ^tI will declare mine iniquity; I will be sorry for my sin.

19 ^uBut mine enemies ^{||}are lively, and they are strong: and they that hate me wrongfully are multiplied.

20 ^xThey also that render evil for good are mine adversaries, because I follow the thing that good is.

3 ^aMy heart was hot within me; while I was musing the fire burned: then spake I with my tongue,

4 ^bLORD, 'make me to know mine end, and the measure of my days, what it is; that I may know [†]how frail I am.

5 Behold, ^cthou hast made my days as an hand-breadth; and mine age is as nothing before thee: ^everily every man ^{||}at his best state is altogether vanity. Selah.

6 Surely every man walketh in ^ha vain shew: surely they are disquieted in vain: ^hhe heapeth up riches, and knoweth not who shall gather them.

7 And now, LORD, what wait I for? ^kmy hope is in thee.

8 ^lDeliver me from all my transgressions: ^mmake me not the reproach of the foolish.

9 ⁿI was dumb; I opened not my mouth; because thou didst it.

10 ^oRemove thy stroke away from me: I am consumed by the ^{*}blow of thine hand.

11 When ^pthou with rebukes dost correct man for iniquity, thou makest [†]this beauty to ^qconsume away like a moth: surely every man is vanity. Selah.

12 ^rHear my prayer, O LORD, and give ear unto my cry; hold not thy peace at my tears: ^sfor I am a stranger with thee, and a sojourner, as all my fathers were.

PSALM XL.

Here we have (1) David's hearty acknowledgments of God's kindness in bringing him out of long and sore afflictions; 1—5. (2) His preferring of holy obedience to God, and faithful publication of his truths and praises, to all ceremonial oblations; 6—11. (3) His improvement of his former deliverance, as an encouragement to supplicate further mercy and protection; an encouragement to confess sin, and implore the pardon of it; an encouragement to rejoice in and praise God for his excellencies and favours; to trust in him under affliction, and to comfort himself in him amidst poverty, sinfulness, and trouble; 12—17. But let us here chiefly behold (1) Jesus Christ, the great Shepherd of the sheep, brought again from his agonies and death, and set down at the right hand of the Majesty on high, that he might receive gifts for men, and that our faith and hope might be in God; 1—5. (2) The new covenant made between him and his eternal Father for the redemption of sinful men; and his complete fulfilment of the divine law as the condition of it; 6—10. (3) How our iniquities were charged to his account, and punished on him as our surety; 11—13. (4) How the unrelenting vengeance of almighty God overtook his Jewish betrayers and murderers; and hath or will overtake his heathenish, antichristian, or other implacable enemies; and what joy and consolation flow from and through him to his chosen friends; 14—17.

Our covenant relation to him, as our Friend, Saviour, and God, improved by the prayer of faith, will quickly bring him to our relief.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XXXIX.—Great watchfulness and circumspection are necessary to our walking aright in this wicked and ensnaring world. For careless hearts will make crooked ways; and, next to the heart, nothing is harder to guide than the tongue: but, the stronger the temptation is, the stronger ought to be our resolution against it. We are very apt to run from one extreme to another. If we restrain our lips from evil, we are ready to neglect that speech which is with grace seasoned with salt. And when our mind, long in silence, ruminates upon sorrows, and the instrumental causes of them, it galls its sores, and aggravates its discontent. But there is great need to consider what death is, and how near it is; and that it is continually working in us: for vain and transient are men, with all their joys and honours, their griefs and fears, their toils and cares. And, the more we see death and vanity stamped upon all things here, the more we ought to be weaned from them in our affections, and the more solicitous should we be in securing the ever-living, the substantial, and eternal, good. The more our lying refuges are swept away, the more reason we have to trust in and call on God, who never disappoints any. With holy resignation to his strokes, we must earnestly beg the forgiveness of the cause, and the removal of the rod. We cannot impeach the equity of his judgments, nor withstand their force. But, if they set us a weeping and praying, and render us weaned from this world, God, our friend and companion, will quickly give REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XXXVIII.—How tremendous is even God's fatherly wrath! But how much more his incensed vengeance against the ungodly! Sin makes fearful work even in saints. But much more terrible is its effects in the damned! Yea, where real grace is, sin will be more painful and bitter than all the arrows, strokes, and wounds, of trouble. And, however painful the wounds and groans of the soul are, they are symptoms of life. It is hopeful when outward distempers make men to search out and bewail their sinful causes. But nothing is a more fatal sign than insensibility. No human strength can withstand God's afflicting hand. No sinews of brass, nor bones of iron, can resist the strokes of fierce disease. And often our worldly friends, who flutter round us in our prosperity, treacherously forsake us in our adversity. But what a comfort it is that we have a compassionate God to trust to, who knows, and can cure, our maladies! How many, how malicious and active, are the enemies of Christ and his saints! Their enmity at God himself, and his image, is the cause of their quarrel. So fixed is their hatred at godliness, that they abhor it, though benefited by it. It is hard, but wise, to imitate Jesus Christ in calm composure under severe provocation;—in silently suffering, and in overlooking manifold unkindnesses done to us. But to take notice of malicious and clamorous enemies is ordinarily to make evil worse. Hope in God will sufficiently support us against every oppression and injury. They, who contentedly leave their cause with him, shall never be disappointed, nor want an advocate to plead for them; and, the more sense we have of our offences against him, the greater will be our penitential grief, and our patience under the provocations of men.

Ps. 41. 5.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

I WAITED patiently for the LORD; and he inclined unto me, and heard my cry.

2 He brought me up also out of an horrible pit, out of the miry clay, and set my feet upon a rock, and established my goings.

3 And he hath put a new song in my mouth, even praise unto our God: many shall see it, and fear, and shall trust in the LORD.

4 Blessed is that man that maketh the LORD his trust, and respecteth not the proud, nor such as turn aside to lies.

5 Many, O LORD my God, are thy wonderful works which thou hast done, and thy thoughts which are to us-ward: they cannot be reckoned up in order unto thee: if I would declare and speak of them, they are more than can be numbered.

6 Sacrifice and offering thou didst not desire: mine ears hast thou opened: burnt-offering and sin-offering hast thou not required.

7 Then said I, Lo, I come: in the volume of the book it is written of me,

8 I delight to do thy will, O my God: yea, thy law is within my heart.

9 I have preached righteousness in the great congregation: lo, I have not refrained my lips, O LORD, thou knowest

10 I have not hid thy righteousness within my heart; I have declared thy faithfulness and thy salvation: I have not concealed thy loving-kindness and thy truth from the great congregation.

11 Withhold not thou thy tender mercies from me, O LORD; let thy loving-kindness and thy truth continually preserve me.

12 For innumerable evils have compassed me about: mine iniquities have taken hold upon me, so that I am not able to look up; they are more than the hairs of mine head; therefore my heart faileth me.

13 Be pleased, O LORD, to deliver me: O LORD, make haste to help me.

14 Let them be ashamed and confounded together that seek after my soul to destroy it: let them be driven backward and put to shame that wish me evil.

15 Let them be desolate for a reward of their shame that say unto me, Aha, aha!

16 Let all those that seek thee rejoice and be glad in thee: let such as love thy salvation say continually, The LORD be magnified.

17 But I am poor and needy; yet the LORD thinketh upon me: thou art my help and my deliverer; make no tarrying, O my God

PSALM XLI.

This psalm represents (1) The blessedness of him who wisely considers the case of the poor, and affords them relief; 1-3. (2) David's candid acknowledgments of the justness of his affliction, and earnest supplications for a merciful deliverance; 4. (3) His sad complaints of the malicious, censorious, and spiteful, reflections, and of the insolent carriage, of his enemies; 5-9. (4) His hearty committing of his case and way to God in the assured and triumphant faith of his favour; 10-13.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

BLESSED is he that considereth the poor; the LORD will deliver him in time of trouble.

2 The LORD will preserve him, and keep him alive; and he shall be blessed upon the earth: and thou wilt not deliver him unto the will of his enemies.

3 The LORD will strengthen him upon the bed of languishing: thou wilt make all his bed in his sickness.

4 I said, LORD, be merciful unto me: heal my soul; for I have sinned against thee.

5 Mine enemies speak evil of me, When shall he die, and his name perish?

6 And, if he come to see me, he speaketh vanity: his heart gathereth iniquity to itself; when he goeth abroad he telleth it.

7 All that hate me whisper together against me: against me do they devise my hurt.

8 An evil disease, say they, cleaveth fast unto him: and now that he lieth he shall rise up no more.

9 Yea, mine own familiar friend, in whom I trusted, which did eat of my bread, hath lifted up his heel against me.

10 But thou, O LORD, be merciful unto me, and raise me up, that I may requite them.

11 By this I know that thou favour-est me, because mine enemy doth not triumph over me.

12 And, as for me, thou upholdest me in mine integrity, and settest me before thy face for ever.

13 Blessed be the LORD God of Israel from everlasting and to everlasting. Amen, and amen.

us relief. And by his grace he will ripen us for heaven before he give the mortal stroke.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XL.—Alas! what fearful and lasting troubles of body and mind Jesus and his people have allotted them on earth! What patience is necessary under them! But God is their deliverer. And greatly exalting, establishing, joyous, and encouraging, is their deliverance at last. Happy are those, who, renouncing all other confidences, trust in God alone. Great is the number, the marvellous grace, of his thoughts and acts towards Jesus Christ and his children in the work of redemption. But how insignificant were Jewish sacrifices in respect of holy obedience: and infinitely more so in comparison of Jesus the Son of God, and his complete holiness of nature, obedience of life, and satisfactory sufferings! With great cheerfulness he engaged for us in the counsel and covenant of peace. And with a steady purpose of love he fulfilled his work, in executing every saving office for our good. Dreadful was the load of our iniquities imputed to him. But he finished transgression and made an end of sin, and publishes to men the declarations and offers of gospel grace. Let us then embrace every promise, as ratified by his blood: and, in the faith of his being made sin for us that we might be made the righteousness of God in him, let us cheerfully and gratefully devote ourselves, by the most solemn ties, to his service. In his name let us fight the good fight of faith, and finish our course. Behold how the prayers of saints, but chiefly the intercession of Jesus Christ, issues in the ruin of his enemies, and the prosperity and deliverance of his friends! It is infinitely dangerous to mock or despise them. But no griefs, no poverty, can render them miserable who fear him. There is a throne of grace to which they have the boldest access. Their God, and all that he hath or doth, is the ground of their joy. His inexhaustible fulness, adapted to their wants, the prayer of faith can unlock. The promises are sure; and the moment of fulfilment hastens forward.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XLI.—Whilst here also we behold Jesus Christ through poverty, affliction, malicious and treacherous enemies entering into his glory, to the endless honour of his Father, and the joy of his heart, let us observe that kindness to God's poor and afflicted is as much our interest as our duty, and God's blessing is the only comfort of every estate. It can give rest in trouble, and make even grief to smile. And pleasant under trouble are

PSALM XLII.

Perhaps this psalm was composed by David when the unnatural rebellion of Absalom had forced him from the sanctuary of God to take up his lodging eastward of Jordan; 2 Sam. xv.—xix.] We have in it (1) Ardent longings after nearness to and familiar intimacy with God in his public ordinances and sanctuary; 1, 2. (2) Mournful lamentations and bitter groanings on account of God's withdrawing his comfortable smiles, of the want of the once-enjoyed ordinances of God and fellowship with his saints of the troublesome impressions of God's wrath, and of his enemies' insolent upbraiding of him; and on account of the departure and distance of his God; 3, 4, 6, 7, 9, 10. (3) Believing remembrance of God's former favours; 6: and self-encouraging hopes of future ones; 5, 8, 11.

To the chief musician, ^aMaschil, for the sons of Korah.

AS the hart ^apanteth after the water brooks, so ^bpanteth my soul after thee, O God.

2 My soul ^cthirsteth for God, for the living God: when shall I come and appear before God?

3 ^dMy tears have been my meat day and night, while they continually say unto me, Where is thy God?

4 ^eWhen I remember these things I pour out my soul in me; for I had gone with the multitude, I went with them to the house of God, ^fwith the voice of joy and praise, with a multitude that kept holy-day.

5 ^gWhy art thou ^hcast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted in me? hope thou in God; for I shall yet ⁱpraise him ^jfor the help of his countenance.

6 ^kO my God, my soul is cast down within me: ^ltherefore will I remember thee from ^mthe land of Jordan, and of the Hermonites, from the hill Mizar.

7 ⁿDeep calleth unto deep at the noise of thy water spouts: all thy waves and thy billows are gone over me.

8 Yet the LORD ^owill command his loving-kindness in the day time, and ^pin the night his song shall be with me, and my prayer unto the God of my life.

9 I will say unto God my rock, ^qWhy hast thou forgotten me? why go I mourning because of the oppression of the enemy?

9 ^rAs with a ^ssword in my bones, mine enemies reproach me; while they say daily unto me, Where is thy God?

10 ^tWhy art thou cast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted within me? hope thou in God; for I shall yet praise him, who is the health of my countenance and my God.

penitent confessions and fervent requests, founded on the promise and mercy of God. Sin fills men's hearts and tongues with enmity against Christ and his people: yet vile are their efforts, and as vain their hopes. But happy trials are those which excite our prayers, animate our faith, increase our dependance on God, and tune our hearts to his praise; and which make JEHOVAH's love to our souls more evident and precious.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XLII.—Nothing but God himself can satisfy believing souls. If the sense of his love be withdrawn, every enjoyment is tasteless. No cisterns of earthly comforts can quench their thirst, their earnest desire for the LIVING FOUNTAIN. Constrained absence from the public means of fellowship with God is a heavy and tormenting burden to a faithful soul, and quickens his longings after them. No wonder then that he groans earnestly to be clothed upon with his house which is from heaven. O what terrible afflictions and sorrows are in the lot of God's favourite saints! When outward distress lies heavy, inward temptations are often violent. And the joys which we have tasted in God make the withdrawalment of his presence and comforts the more grievous. But we often cause our own dejections under trouble, by poring on our corruptions or distress and forgetting the promises, grace, and faithfulness, of our Redeemer. We had need therefore to call our souls to account for their conduct. And, if we cannot get relief by pleading with our burdened spirits, we should commit our case to our gracious God. And, the more furious and manifold the storms of trouble are, the more earnest ought to be our believing applications to, and dependance on God. Let providence cast us where it will,

PSALM XLIII.

Before Christ
cir. 1021.

This psalm was probably composed on the same occasion as the former; and contains (1) David's strong cries to his God for help against, and deliverance from, his ungodly, unjust, and crafty, oppressors; 1, 2. (2) His earnest longings for restoration to the enjoyment of his God in his public ordinances; 3, 4. (3) His inward disquiets composed by believing claims of his God and firm dependance on his promises; 5.

JUDGE ^ame, O God, and plead my ^bcause against an ^cungodly nation: O deliver me ^dfrom the deceitful and unjust man.

2 Forthou art ^ethe God of my strength; ^fwhy dost thou cast me off? why go I mourning because of the oppression of the enemy?

3 O send out thy ^glight and thy truth: let them lead me; let them bring me unto thy ^hholy hill and to thy tabernacles.

4 ⁱThen will I go unto the altar of God, unto God ^jmy exceeding joy: ^kyea, upon the harp will I praise thee, O God my God.

5 ^lWhy art thou cast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted within me? hope in God; for I shall yet praise him, who is the health of my countenance and my God.

PSALM XLIV.

This psalm was perhaps composed on the same occasion as the lxth, and may have a prophetic view to the after distresses of the Jews in the time of Rehoboam, [2 Chron. xii.]; of Jehoram, [2 Chron. xxi.]; of Ahaz, [2 Chron. xxviii.]; of Hezekiah, [2 Kings xviii. xix.]; and during the Chaldean captivity, Syro-Grecian oppression, &c.; and all these as typical of the distresses of the gospel church under heathens and antichristians. It relates chiefly to the church; and contains (1) Thankful acknowledgments of what the Lord had done for her in former periods; as her God, her king, her joy, her praise; 1—8. (2) Sorrowful complaints of divine desertion; and of the prevalent power, cruelty, and derisive contempt, of enemies; 9—16. (3) Solemn protestations of continued integrity, and constant adherence to the Lord's way, amidst these manifold calamities; 17—22. (4) Ferent supplications to God for his merciful appearance for, and granting of her relief; 23—26.

To the chief musician for the sons of Korah, Maschil.

WE ^ahave heard with our ears, O God, our fathers have told us, what work thou didst in their days, in the times of old.

our God and our prayers should still attend us. Our faith may be enfeebled and sore shaken, but it will never fail. Remembrance of what God is to us, and hath done for us, should suppress our unbelieving fears. If he command his loving kindness, neither earth nor hell can hinder us from the benefit of it. In our darkest nights of trouble, desertion, and temptation, we have always much mercy to thank God for. Whatever repeated encouragement our feeble minds may need, if God be our God, our life, and the health of our countenance, neither earth, nor death, nor hell, is able to hurt us.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XLIII.—When men wrong us, and God deserts us, our only refuge is still in God himself. He may frown, but he cannot cease to love his people, however hard they find it to believe so amidst deep convictions and raging lusts. It may be for a time difficult to reconcile God's providences with his promises, but, with a little patience, the mystery will be unveiled. Such as love Christ's appearance shall have their cause judged far sooner than their enemies wish, and far better than themselves conceive. Next to God himself, the saints love nothing more dearly than the ordinances of his grace. But none can approach ordinances aright unless God both lead and draw their hearts; and it is for his sake the saints delight to be there. Men never attend ordinances aright but when they have fellowship with Christ, as their altar, their atonement, their food, their God, their joy. Intimate fellowship with God cannot but tune our hearts and tongues to his praise. And, the more we deal with God by faith, we shall see the more sin and evil in inward despondency.

4 ^dThou art my King, O God; command deliverances for Jacob.

5 ^eThrough thee will we push down our enemies; through thy name will we tread them under that rise up against us.

6 ^fFor I will not trust in my bow, neither shall my sword save me.

7 But ^ethou hast saved us from our enemies, and hast put them to shame that hated us.

8 ^hIn God we boast all the day long, and praise thy name for ever. Selah.

9 ⁱBut thou hast cut off, and put us to shame; and goest not forth with our armies.

10 ^kThou makest us to turn back from the enemy: and they which hate us spoil for themselves.

11 ^lThou hast given us ^{*}like sheep appointed for meat; and hast scattered us among the heathen.

12 ^mThou sellest thy people [†]for nought, and dost not increase thy wealth by their price.

13 ⁿThou makest us a reproach to our neighbours, a scorn and a derision to them that are round about us.

14 ^oThou makest us a by-word among the heathen, a shaking of the head among the people.

15 ^pMy confusion is continually before me, and the shame of my face hath covered me, 16 For the voice of him that reproacheth and blasphemeth; ^qby reason of the enemy and avenger.

17 All this is come upon us; yet have we not ^rforgotten thee, neither have we dealt falsely in thy covenant.

18 ^sOur heart is not turned back, neither have our [†]steps declined from thy way;

19 Though ^tthou hast sore broken us in ^uthe place of dragons, and covered us with ^vthe shadow of death.

20 ^wIf we have ^zforgotten the name of our God, or stretched out our hands to a strange god;

21 ^aShall not God search this out? for he knoweth the secrets of the heart.

22 ^bYea, for thy sake are we killed all the day long; we are counted as sheep for the slaughter.

23 ^cAwake; why sleepest thou, O LORD? arise, cast us not off for ever.

24 ^dWherefore hidest thou thy face, and forgettest our affliction and our oppression?

25 ^eFor our soul is bowed down to the dust; our belly cleaveth unto the earth.

26 ^fArise ^{||}for our help, and redeem us for thy mercies' sake.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XLIV.—Memorials of past mercies ought to be carefully recorded, and transmitted from age to age, as an encouragement in time of need as well as a ground of thankfulness. It is never outward force, but Jesus Christ's word and Spirit, that build up the church, and triumph over the powers of darkness. If we want help in trouble, we must renounce all other confidences, and take God alone to be our kind deliverer and boast; so shall our troubles and griefs be quickly turned into everlasting praise.—It is common, but sinful, for them whom God casts down to think themselves utterly cast off, and to shrink under reproach and suffering, as if they were not our appointed cross. For it is not now, but hereafter, that God will make us to know and admire the mystery of his providence. It is especially distressing to the faithful, when they falsely apprehend that, God gets no glory by the afflictions of his people; nay, instead thereof, is dishonoured and reproached.—All God's people, though not called to be proper martyrs, have their particular sufferings allotted to them for his sake. But it is dangerous to comply with sins in order to shun troubles. Highly provoking to God are treachery, apostasy, and idolatry; and fearfully he will search out and punish them. But great is the mercy that nothing can break his covenant of grace with his people; and that not sins of mere infirmity, but indulged provocations, are held as a violation of their covenant of duties. And, if he appear asleep amidst our troubles, it is to humble us under his mighty hand, to awaken our importunate prayers, and that he may the more magnify his mercy and power in our deliverance.

In this SONG OF LOVES are celebrated (1) The glories of Jesus Christ our Redeemer;—particularly the transcendent comeliness and blessedness of his person as God-man—his almighty power in conquering his people and destroying his enemies—the eternity, firmness, and equity, of his government—his royal unction with the Holy Ghost above measure—his fitness for his work, and the splendour of his court; 1—9. (2) The glories of the redeemed—their listening to Jesus' proposals of marriage union with himself—their renunciation of all others for his sake—their reverential submission to and worship of him; 10, 11—their glorious ornaments of righteousness and grace; and their glorious entrance into the new covenant and the eternal state; 12—15—their glorious succession and work for perpetuating the fame of the Redeemer; 16, 17.

PSALM. XLVI.

In this psalm, probably composed for celebrating some remarkable victory, we have (1) Bold triumphs of faith in God himself, and the mercies of the new covenant, amidst the most alarming danger and distress which can be supposed; 1-6. (2) A thankful rehearsal of the great things which God had wrought for the deliverance of his people and destruction of their enemies; 6-9. (3) God's heart-composing promise of promoting his own glory in every event, and faith's expectation of protection and deliverance therefrom; 10, 11.

To the chief musician *for the sons of Korah, A song upon ^aAlamoth.

GOD is ^bour refuge and strength; a very present help in trouble.

2 Therefore ^cwill not we fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into [†]the midst of the sea;

3 Though ^dthe waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof. Selah.

4 There is ^ea river, the streams whereof shall make glad the ^fcity of God; the holy place of the tabernacles of the Most High.

5 ^fGod is in the midst of her; she shall not be moved: God shall help her, ^hand that right early.

6 ⁱThe heathen raged, the kingdoms were moved: he uttered his voice, the earth melted.

7 The LORD of hosts is ^kwith us; the God of Jacob is [†]our refuge. Selah.

8 ^lCome, behold the works of the LORD, what desolations he hath made in the earth.

9 ^mHe maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth; he breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder; he burneth the chariot in the fire.

10 ⁿBe still, and know that I am God: I will be exalted among the heathen, I will be exalted in the earth.

11 ^oThe LORD of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge. Selah.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XLV.—Discoveries of Jesus' glory powerfully animate our hearts and tune our tongues to commend him. How glorious is his person as God-man! Rich in grace are the qualities of his heart and words of his mouth. In him it pleased the Father that all fulness of blessings for men should dwell. In almighty power, by his word and influences of his Spirit, he conquered multitudes in the apostolic age to the obedience of faith; and by the strokes of his vengeance did and shall destroy his Jewish or other implacable opposers. Having by himself purged our sins, he, as our righteous Sovereign, sat down at the right hand of God, as the reward of his righteous service; and is, in the most transcendent manner, filled with the Holy Ghost to shed on us abundantly. In a most glorious and heart-engaging manner, his manhood, mediatorial offices, and righteousness, appear in the heavens above, and in his church and ordinances below. And his people, adorned with gifts and graces, are raised up together, and made to sit together with him. His chosen ones, both Jews and Gentiles, in the day of his power, are made to hear his voice in the gospel, to renounce all others, and devote themselves entirely to him and his service, as the objects of his gracious and everlasting delight. In shining robes of righteousness, grace, and holy conversation, each in their order are adorned; and, after serving their generation by the will of God, they shall be brought and admitted into his heavenly palace with exceeding joy. Instead of Jewish fathers shall there be Gentile converts; and instead of glorified saints shall there be another generation, begotten by the power of his grace, all made kings and priests unto God! Thus, by the spread and influence of the gospel, shall Jesus' renown and honour be perpetuated on earth, while those in heaven above shall praise him for ever and ever.

PSALM XLVII.

This psalm was probably composed on the same occasion as the xxivth. Here is (1) A revenue of praise demanded for God from all people, Jews and Gentiles; 1, 6. (2) A memorial of the grounds of praise, viz. the majesty of God's nature; 2. The great things he had done, or would do, for his people, in subduing their foes and providing portions for themselves; and in ascending to heaven to receive gifts and prepare places for men; 3-5: as also the high sovereignty and universal extent of his government; 2, 7-9.

To the chief musician, A psalm *for the sons of Korah.

O ^aCLAP your hands, all ye people; shout unto God with the voice of triumph.

2 For the LORD most high is ^bterrible; he is a great King over all the earth.

3 ^cHe shall subdue the people under us, and the nations under our feet.

4 ^dHe shall choose our inheritance for us, the excellency of Jacob whom he loved. Selah.

5 ^eGod is gone up with a shout, the LORD with the sound of a trumpet.

6 Sing praises to God, sing praises: sing praises unto our King, sing praises.

7 For God is the King of all the earth; sing ye praises [†]with understanding.

8 ^fGod reigneth over the heathen: God sitteth upon the throne of his holiness.

9 ^g† The princes of the people are gathered together, even the people of the God of Abraham: for ^hthe shields of the earth belong unto God: he is greatly exalted.

PSALM XLVIII.

This psalm was no doubt composed to celebrate some remarkable victory or deliverance in the days of David, Jehoshaphat, [2 Chron. xx.] or Hezekiah, [2 Kings xix.] We have here (1) Jerusalem, the capital city of Israel, and type of the gospel church and heavenly state, celebrated for her beauty and her relation to God, as the residence of his temple and ordinances; 1, 2. (2) JEHOVAH the God of Israel, celebrated for his kind and powerful protection of Jerusalem, and for making her enemies to flee with much precipitation and terror; 3-7. (3) The people of God, particularly in Jerusalem, meditating upon, and celebrating, the gracious and mighty things which God had or would do for them, and for his discoveries of himself to them, and promising themselves sure and lasting happiness in his relation to them and direction of them; 8-14.

^aA song and psalm *for the sons of Korah.

GREAT ^bis the LORD, and greatly to be praised in the ^ccity of our God, in the mountain of his holiness.

2 ^dBeautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is mount Zion, on the ^esides of the north, the ^fcity of the ^ggreat King.

3 ^hGod is known in her palaces for a refuge.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XLVI.—When dangers appear greatest our faith in God's promise and perfections should be strongest. If we can triumph in God as our own God, we may triumph over every trouble and danger. The revolutions on earth can little affect them whose hearts are duly fixed on things above. They need never fear, and they shall never fail, who have God for their refuge and their strength. Notwithstanding all her enemies, his church shall in him obtain joy, establishment, and deliverance. If, by his word, his Spirit, and his blood, we enjoy communications of grace and comfort, we are amply repaid for all the storms that can be raised by the world that lieth in wickedness. But in what a tremendous and awful manner he from age to age revenges the injuries done to his church, the ruin of the nations around Canaan, and of the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Persians, Syro-grecians, Romans, Antichristians, Mahometans, and others, have or shall manifest. And it is highly proper to contemplate his infinite perfections, displayed in all his conquests of vengeance or grace; that in every age, in every case, we may have faith in him, as our Protector, Deliverer, and Strength.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XLVII.—Behold, my soul, our exalted Lord Jesus, terrible to his enemies in punishing and destroying them; but kind to his chosen, in subduing them throughout all the world to himself—in choosing for them, as his excellent ones, their portion in the new covenant and in the heavenly state! Behold how, amidst surrounding troops of hymning angels, he ascended on high; had all power in heaven and earth given him; and by his gospel word and gracious influence, he gathers the nations to himself, that they may be blessed together with faithful Abraham; and even makes the rulers of nations submit to his yoke, or helpful to his cause!

PSALM XLIX.

This psalm is a mirror, calculated to exhibit the emptiness of all worldly enjoyments. Observe (1) David's earnest attempt to awaken all ranks of mankind to a serious consideration of this matter, as a point of great importance and universal concern; 1—4. (2) His irrefragable proofs of the vanity of earthly enjoyments; viz. that they cannot save from death either a man's self or his friends; and that they cannot make men wise or happy in this world, and far less render them happy in the future state; 6—14. (3) His attempt to comfort himself and other saints under the sense of their daily infirmities; and of the chastisements received on account of their sins; against the slavish fears of death; and against temptations, arising from the prosperity of the wicked; 5, 15—18.

To the chief musician, A psalm *for the sons of Korah.HEAR this, all ye people; give ear, all ye inhabitants of the world:2 Both low and high, rich and poor, together.3 My mouth shall speak of wisdom; and the meditation of my heart shall be of understanding.4 I will incline mine ear to a parable;
I will open my dark saying upon the harp.5 Wherefore should I fear in the days of evil, when the iniquity of my heels shall compass me about?6 They that trust in their wealth, and boast themselves in the multitude of their riches;7 None of them can by any means redeem his brother, nor give to God a ransom for him:8 (For the redemption of their soul is precious, and it ceaseth for ever):9 That he should still live for ever, and not see corruption.10 For he seeth that wise men die, likewise the fool and the brutish person perish, and leave their wealth to others.11 Their inward thought is, that their houses shall continue for ever, and their dwelling places to all generations; they call their lands after their own names.12 Nevertheless, man being in honour abideth not: he is like the beasts that perish.13 This their way is their folly; yet their posterity approve their sayings.
Selah.14 Like sheep they are laid in the grave; death shall feed on them; and the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning; and their beauty shall consume in the grave from their dwelling.15 But God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave; for he shall receive me. Selah.16 Be not thou afraid when one is made rich, when the glory of his house is increased;17 For when he dieth he shall carry nothing away: his glory shall not descend after him.18 Though while he lived he blessed his soul: and men will praise thee when thou dost well to thyself.19 He shall go to the generation of his fathers: they shall never see light.20 Man that is in honour, and un-derstandeth not, is like the beasts that perish.

PSALM L.

This psalm may be considered as a rebuke to the carnal Jews, who rested in and boasted of their external ceremonies in worship, to the neglect of the weightier matters of the law, mercy, judgment, and faith: or as a prediction of the coming of Christ, to abolish the ceremonial worship, eject the Jews from his church, and establish a more pure and spiritual form of worship under the gospel: or, in fine, as a representation of the last judgment; in which Christ shall come to render to every man according to his deeds. Observe (1) The awful appearance of God our Redeemer in the flesh—in power—or in the clouds—with the gathering of the people to him; 1—6. (2) An engaging admonition to improve God's new covenant grant of himself to be our God, as an excitement to exchange legal ceremonies into prayer, thanksgiving, and holy obedience; or, at least, to give a remarkable preference to the latter; 7—15. (3) An awful charge of hypocrisy, slander, contempt of God's word, and of atheistical imaginations concerning God, laid against the wicked, with a fearful sentence of condemnation founded thereon; 16—22. (4) An alarming warning to those who forget God, and an encouraging promise to such as study to glorify him by an holy conversation; 22, 23.

A psalm * of Asaph.

example. Never ought saints (no, not when they suffer the charges and chastisements of their sins of conversation) to abandon themselves to unbelieving fears and doubts of God's all-sufficiency and love.—The day of death is a trying time with respect to true happiness. And then a sense of God's love, and a prospect of eternal glory, are infinitely more precious than thousands of gold and silver, O the dreadful folly of most men, who seek for, hold, delight in, and depend on, things of this world, as if they were their God, their ALL IN ALL! and yet how unavailable to ransom the soul, perpetuate the life, or preserve from hell! To judge of things aright, we must weigh time with eternity. It is neither wealth nor poverty, but Jesus Christ's righteousness and grace, that can render us respected of God, or really happy, in time or eternity. It is redemption through his blood that gives hope in death. It is not their own vaunts, or the world's admiration, but the word of God, that adjusts men's real character. It is not what we have here, but what we can carry into the other world, that constitutes the true riches. They are only wise who consider their latter end. Nay, in death, the state of the most loathsome animal is infinitely preferable to that of the unregenerate sinner.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLVIII.—Great, and greatly to be praised, is our exalted Redeemer. Glorious is his gospel church, in which his presence dwells. And in a marvellous manner hath he, in instances unnumbered, been known for her refuge. When ravaging invaders and furious persecutors have concurred in attempts to destroy her, their plots and fury have often issued in their own ruin, and his people's triumph and praise of his kindness. Quickly shall her remaining enemies be destroyed; and no gates of hell have, or ever shall, prevail against her. Her bulwarks, palaces of ordinances, and officers, are built on Jesus the Rock of ages, and are protected by his arm of omnipotence. Let us then declare his wondrous works, and our relation to him, to posterity, as an honour to him, and an encouragement to them to come and cleave to him, and triumph in his praise.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM. XLIX.—Alas! how the hearts of men cleave to earthly enjoyments! The poor need as much to be warned against envy and discontentment, as the rich against pride and carnal confidence. And the truths of God ought to be inculcated with the greatest seriousness, both by word and by

2 Out of Zion, 'the perfection of beauty, God hath shined.

3 'Our God shall come, and shall not keep silence: a fire shall devour before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him.

4 'He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth, that he may judge his people.

5 'Gather my saints together unto me; those that have 'made a covenant with me by sacrifice.

6 And 'the heavens shall declare his righteousness; for God is judge himself. Selah.

7 'Hear, O my people, and I will speak; O Israel, and I will testify against thee: I am God, even thy God.

8 I 'will not reprove thee for thy sacrifices or thy burnt-offerings to have been continually before me.

9 I 'will take no bullock out of thy house, nor he-goats out of thy folds.

10 For every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills.

11 'I know all the fowls of the mountains: and the wild beasts of the field are 'mine.

12 If I were hungry I would not tell thee; 'for the world is mine, and the fulness thereof.

13 Will I eat the flesh of bulls, or drink the blood of goats?

14 'Offer unto God thanksgiving; and pay thy vows unto the Most High:

15 'And call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee, and thou shalt 'glorify me.

16 But unto the wicked God saith, 'What hast thou to do to declare my statutes, or that thou shouldest take my covenant in thy mouth?

17 Seeing 'thou hatest instruction, and castest my words behind thee.

18 When thou sawest a thief, then thou 'consentedst with him, and 'hast been partaker with adulterers.

19 'Thou givest thy mouth to evil, and thy tongue frameth deceit.

20 Thou 'sittest and speakest against thy brother; thou slanderest thine own mother's son.

21 These things hast thou done, and I 'kept silence: thou 'thoughtest that I was altogether such an one as thyself: but I 'will reprove thee, and set them in order before thine eyes.

22 Now consider this, ye that 'forget God, lest I 'tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver.

23 'Whoso offereth praise glorifieth me; and to him 'that ordereth his conversation aright will I shew the 'salvation of God.

PSALM LI.

Before Christ
cir. 1034.

This psalm was penned by David when he was reproved by Nathan for his adultery with Bathsheba, and for his murder of Uriah, [2 Sam. xii.] We have in it (1) David's candid and truly sorrowful acknowledgments of his sin, particularly his adultery and murder, as highly dishonourable to God; and of his original sin as the source thereof; 1—5, 17. (2) His earnest supplications for pardon of his offences, for heart-purifying and renewing grace, for renewed influences of the Holy Ghost, for peace of conscience and comfortable fellowship with God, for himself; 1, 2, 6—15: and for reformation of, and prosperity to, the church, which had been hurt by his sin; 18, 19. (3) His sincere purposes of heart to improve God's favours to himself, in promoting the instruction of others, and in giving them an honourable pattern of an exact celebration of God's public worship; 13—16, 19.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David when Nathan the prophet came unto him after he had gone in to Bathsheba.

HAVE 'mercy upon me, O God, according to thy loving-kindness: according unto the multitude of thy tender mercies blot out my transgressions.

2 'Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin.

3 For 'I acknowledge my transgressions: and my sin is ever before me.

4 'Against thee, thee only, have I sinned, and done this evil in thy sight: 'that thou mightest be justified when thou speakest, and be clear when thou judgest.

5 Behold, I 'was shapen in iniquity; and in sin did my mother 'conceive me.

6 Behold, 'thou desirest truth in the inward parts: and in the hidden part thou shalt make me to know wisdom.

7 'Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean: wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.

8 'Make me to hear joy and gladness; that the bones which thou hast 'broken may rejoice.

9 'Hide thy face from my sins, and blot out all mine iniquities.

10 'Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew 'a right spirit within me.

11 'Cast me not away from thy presence; and take not thy 'holy spirit from me.

12 Restore unto me the 'joy of thy salvation; and 'uphold me with thy free spirit.

13 'Then will I teach transgressors thy ways, and sinners shall be converted unto thee.

14 Deliver me from 'blood-guiltiness, O God, thou God of my salvation: and 'my tongue shall sing aloud of thy righteousness.

15 O LORD, 'open thou my lips, and my mouth shall shew forth thy praise.

16 For thou 'desirest not sacrifice; 'false would I give it: thou delightest not in burnt-offering.

17 'The sacrifices of God are a broken

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LI.—Great is the majesty, extensive the high sovereignty, and terrible the wrath, of God! And great is his care of his saints who have embraced his new covenant, of which Jesus Christ's atoning sacrifice is the condition. But God hath full power to change the positive institutions of his own worship at his pleasure, and to reject his long professed people for their contempt of his Son. No obedience is acceptable to him but what proceeds from the faith of his being our own God in Christ. To obey was always better than sacrifice; and prayer to, and praise of, God more than burnt-offerings.—And since Jesus' death, and Jerusalem's destruction, Jewish ceremonies are not only vain, but hurtful. But never is our gracious God more ready to hear our supplications than in a day of trouble: and what grateful vows and thanksgivings doth he then deserve at our hands! Notwithstanding antecedent gospel declarations, how rarely doth the Son of man, when he cometh, either in remarkable mercy or judgment, find faith in the earth, or indeed aught but empty formalities and gross wickedness! And none are worse than profane clergymen, stained with hypocrisy, covetousness, whoredom, slander of Christ and his saints, blasphemy of God, and every thing horrid. But graciously he warns ere he strikes. And to bow before the sceptre of his grace, receive his gospel offers, and practise holiness in his fear, is the way to escape the rod of his judgments, and to share his eternal favours.

PSALM LII.

This psalm relates to Doeg the Edomite, who informed Saul how Ahimelech the high priest had entertained David and his servants, and who in consequence thereof murdered Ahimelech and above fourscore other priests; [1 Sam. xxii.] Here (1) David charges Doeg that, notwithstanding the manifested and everlasting goodness of God, he gloried in his own malice, craft, cruelty, and other wickedness; 1-5. (2) By the spirit of prophesy, he condemns him for his wickedness to be plucked from his dwelling, and rooted out of the land of the living, to the great joy of those who feared God; 6, 7. (3) He comforts himself in the everlasting mercy of God, and with the assured hopes that he should yet praise him for his kindness; 8, 9.

To the chief musician, Maschil, A psalm ness. Selah.4 Thou lovest all ^fdevouring words, ^g*O thou* deceitful tongue.5 ^hGod shall likewise ⁱdestroy thee for ever; he shall take thee away, and pluck thee out of thy dwelling place, and

PSALM LIII.

This psalm is much the same as the xivth. It speaks (1) Humbling convictions to all men of their sinfulness of nature and practice; 1-3. (2) Fearful terrors to them who persecute and oppress the people of God; 4, 5. (3) Abundant comfort in the salvation of God to his persecuted saints; 5, 6.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LI.—Into what grievous iniquities the best of men, if left to themselves, quickly fall!—but never into any from which their gracious God does not recover them. Such as sin publicly ought to take to themselves public shame, for the honour of their God and for a warning to others. Sin is an heavy burden to a penitent soul. It forces from his heart importunate cries for pardoning and purging mercy. And nothing less than promises of mercy can encourage him to pray in faith: and nothing less than merciful pardons and cleansings through Jesus' blood can save him from hell. God's blotting out of sin fixes a penitential remembrance of it, and repeated grief on account of it, in the heart of a saint. And a heart truly broken for sin never seeks exculpation, but desires to take all shame and confusion. The exceeding sinfulness of sin lies in its opposition to God's nature and law. And true penitents justify God in all his judgments, however heavy upon them. No person was ever really humbled for sin till brought to see the inward and natural corruption of his heart. It is not outward forms, but inward reality of grace, that God primarily requires; and it is he alone that can work it in us. He alone must forgive our sins, purging our conscience by the blood of his Son. He alone must sanctify and renew our hearts, pour out his Spirit, restore our joys, and grant us his comfortable presence. What anguish and breaking of soul, loads of guilt, and of sorrow for it, can produce! But God, who gives the pardon, must also give the comfort of it. Renewed souls count the service of God the most perfect freedom: and the experience of God's remarkable kindness effectually animates to zeal for his glory, the instruction of others, and the welfare of his church. Broken hearted penitents, viewing themselves as Achans in the camp, are the most

PSALM LIV.

This psalm was composed when the Ziphites, men of the same tribe with David, instigated Saul to destroy him, and directed him how to accomplish it; [1 Sam. xxiii. xxvi.] It contains (1) David's strong cries to his God, that he would save and judge him, and hear his requests; 1, 2. (2) Bitter complaints of the oppression and the impiety of his enemies; 3. (3) His triumphant consolation of himself, in the view of what God was to him and would do for him—intermixed with holy resolutions to praise him for his kindness; 4-7.

earnest wrestlers with God for the happiness of the church. And all the returns of service, and praise to God therein, must be founded on his special favours, received or secured in Christ and his blood.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LII.—Hardened indeed is the sinner who abuses the goodness of God to glory in his wickedness. Malice, lying, and craft, are the abhorrence of God and the image of the devil; and quickly shall they render men miserable in life, and damned in hell. Quickly shall those who trust in wealth or wickedness remove into everlasting flames. And the striking judgments of God on the wicked ought to be carefully observed, and improved as warnings, while we thank him for them, as manifestations of his own glory and means of our deliverance. God marvellously founds the prosperity and promised honours of his people on their enemies' ruin. And what he has promised we must patiently wait for. None that trust in his mercy shall be disappointed, but ever flourish in grace and triumph in praise.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LIII.—What a fountain of Atheism is in our hearts! What folly—what filth—what evil—is in every sin! and yet what unnumbered acts and fearful fruits of it every where abroad in the world. But fear and shame shall at last overwhelm the sinners, particularly those who ate up, persecuted, and oppressed, the people of God. Even the marvellous salvation of men through Christ shall contribute to the everlasting destruction of obstinate sinners. And the endless songs of ransomed men will not only attend, but add to, their everlasting misery and grief.

PSALM LV.

This psalm was probably penned by David when he fled from Jerusalem for fear of Absalom his son; [2 Sam. xv. xvi.] Observe (1) David's earnest prayers for help and favour from God amidst his great oppression, griefs, and fears; 1—8. (2) His requests for the just manifestation of God's vengeance in the dispersion and destruction of his enemies, who, in Jerusalem, particularly Ahithophel, had behaved in so base and treacherous a manner; 9—15. (3) Resolved on frequent and fervent prayer, he encourages himself and friends to trust in God for support and deliverance, and for the speedy destruction of their enemies, however deceitful and bloody; 16—23.

PSALM LVI.

This psalm was penned by David when the Philistines apprehended him in Gath; [1 Sam. xxi. 10—15.] And contains (1) His earnest supplications to God for merciful protection and deliverance from his enemies, who were barbarous, powerful, crafty, malicious, and restless; 1, 2, 5, 6, 7. (2) His assured confidence in God as his own God, who had spoken good concerning him, and took particular notice of his grievances; 3, 4, 8, 11. (3) Firm hopes that his prayers should issue in the defeat of his enemies, and that his faith would set him above the slavish fears of men; 9—11: and that, while he paid his vows to God, he should have further occasion to praise the Lord for what he had done and would do for him; 12, 13.

To the chief musician upon Jonath-elemrechokim, ^aMichtam of David, when the ^bPhilistines took him in Gath.

BE ^cmerciful unto me, O God; for man would swallow me up; he fighting daily oppresses me.

2 ^dMine enemies would daily ^eswal-low me up: for they be ^fmany that fight against me, O ^gthou Most High.

3 ^hWhat time I am afraid I will trust in thee.

4 ⁱIn God I will praise his word, in God I have put my trust; I will not fear what flesh can do unto me.

5 Every day they ^jwrest my words:
all their thoughts are against me for evil.

6 ^kThey gather themselves together, they hide themselves, they mark my steps,
when they wait for my soul.

7 ^lShall they escape by iniquity? in thine anger ^mcast down the people, O
God.

8 ⁿThou tellest my wanderings; put thou my tears into thy bottle: are they not in thy book?

9 ^oWhen I cry unto thee, then shall their fears strong, and their faith shaken; but it is a great mercy that they have Jesus' bosom, and the state of glory above, to flee to when they can get no peace nor rest in this world. The city, the church of God, may soon be fearfully corrupted by the influence of wicked rulers. And none are more apt to promote the corruption, or betray the saints, than apostate or empty professors. There has always been a sad mixture of such in the church. Carnal policy, and selfish ends, may carry men far and long in a religious profession, even where there is no sincerity of heart. Earnest prayers of faith are effectual to bring salvation from God. How shameful then is it that they are so little used; and that the stated meals for our bodies are more frequent than those for our souls! It is God's being on our side that raises us above fear from our adversaries. Too often want of trouble hardens men in bold impiety. But impenitence and perdition are inseparably linked together. Falsehood and perfidy will quickly find an avenging God. But happy, happy for ever, are they who trust in the Lord, and by the prayers of faith cast all their burdens, troubles, work, and cares, upon God, as their God and Father in Christ!

PSALM LVII.

This psalm was penned by David when he fled from Saul in the cave; [1 Sam. xxiv.] And contains (1) David's earnest betaking of himself to God;—upon whom all his dependance was fixed; towards whom all his desires were bent; and from whom only he expected relief;—for mercy amidst his great troubles; 1, 2. (2) His complaints of the cruelty, malice, and calumniating deceit, of his inveterate enemies; 3, 4, 6. (3) His believing triumph in God, in which he prepares himself for praising God; excites himself to it; delights himself in it; and furnishes himself with matter for it; 7—10. (4) Conscious of his own inability to praise God enough, he leaves it on God to exalt and glorify himself; 5, 11.

To the chief musician, Al-taschith,
Michtam of David; when he fled from Saul in the cave.

BE merciful unto me, O God, be merciful unto me; for my soul trusteth in thee: yea, in the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge, until these calamities be overpast.

2 I will cry unto God most high; unto God that performeth all things for
me.

3 He shall send from heaven, and save me from the reproach of him that would swallow me up, Selah. God shall send forth his mercy and his truth.

4 My soul is among lions; and I lie even among them that are set on fire, even the sons of men, whose teeth are spears and arrows, and their tongue a sharp sword.

5 Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens: let thy glory be above all the earth.

6 They have prepared a net for my steps; my soul is bowed down: they have dugged a pit before me, into the midst whereof they are fallen themselves. Selah.

7 My heart is fixed, O God, my heart is fixed: I will sing and give praise.

8 Awake up, my glory; awake, psaltery and harp: I myself will awake early.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LVI.—How inveterate is the enmity of the wicked against Jesus Christ and his people! With unanimity, cruelty, malice, restlessness, and craft, they exert themselves to destroy them, while they spy out their ways, wrest their words, and wait for their halting. But blessed are those trials which drive us nearer to God. Strong faith is necessary when troubles and dangers are very great. But the unchangeable promise of God, yea and amen in Christ, is not only sufficient ground of trust, but of cordial praise. No enemies that we can have are too great for God to humble, or too secure, strong, or daring, to withstand his blow. They who have him for their friend need not fear the impotent threats or strokes of human worms. Saints may, nay must, weep in prayer for a time; but God regards every word, every tear; and will soon make them issue in praise to the weepers, and in lasting ruin to their enemies. It is reasonable then that vows made, as well as mercies received, should animate us to trust in, pray to, serve, and praise him, while we live in the enjoyment of the light of his countenance.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LVII.—While saints continue on earth, they will still need prayer from their heart, and mercy from their God. For into what devouring beasts, and deceitful devils, hath sin transformed their enemies! Heart, lips, and hands, appear all animated by infernal malice and craft. But they have a God of salvation, a new covenant in Jesus' blood, to secure their safety and their enemies' ruin. And often, for the glory of God, these enemies perish in

9 I will praise thee, O LORD, among the people: I will sing unto thee among the nations.

10 For thy mercy is great unto clouds.

11 Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens: let thy glory be above all the earth.

PSALM LVIII.

This psalm was probably composed by David when Saul carried on some kind of legal prosecution against him, which is not mentioned in the history of his reign. Here (1) he describes the corruption in the government of these judges, in neglecting to do justice, and in readiness to do injustice; and the corruption of their nature, with malice, falsehood, and obstinate untractableness; 1—5. (2) He prays that God would disable them to perpetrate mischief; would defeat their projects, and weaken their influence; 6—8. (3) He predicts their ruin, as calculated to promote the comfort of the godly and the conviction of sinners; 9—11.

To the chief musician, Al-taschith,
Michtam of David.

DO ye indeed speak righteousness, O congregation? do ye judge up-rightly, O ye sons of men?

2 Yea, in heart ye work wickedness; ye weigh the violence of your hands in
the earth.

3 The wicked are estranged from the womb: they go astray as soon as they be born, speaking lies.

4 Their poison is like the poison of a serpent: they are like the deaf adder that stoppeth her ear;

5 Which will not hearken to the voice of charmers, charming never so wisely.

6 Break their teeth, O God, in their mouth: break out the great teeth of the young lions, O LORD.

7 Let them melt away as waters which run continually: when he bendeth his bow to shoot his arrows, let them be as cut in pieces.

8 As a snail which melteth, let every one of them pass away; like the untimely birth of a woman, that they may not see the sun.

9 Before your pots can feel the thorns, he shall take them away as with a whirlwind, both living, and in his wrath.

10 The righteous shall rejoice when he seeth the vengeance: he shall wash his feet in the blood of the wicked.

11 So that a man shall say, Verily there is a reward for the righteous: verily he is a God that judgeth in the earth.

the snares which they had laid for others. With what fixed thought, wonder, desire, and delight, with what ardour of inward powers, ought we then to praise and glorify God, for the mercy that made and fulfils, and the faithfulness which establishes, every new covenant promise! And with great fervour ought we to desire our Almighty Lord to glorify himself in heaven above and in all the earth below.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LVIII.—What a plague to a church or nation are unjust rulers! Oppression by law is the most grievous tyranny; and good men often suffer by the partiality of unjust judges. Great humbling to such as see it is the wickedness of the human heart. And it makes those in whom it reigns earnest and obstinate in sinful courses. Neither the terrors of God's wrath, nor the hopes of the gospel, can effectually change it, unless the Spirit of God open the ear to instruction. But it is a mercy for the saints that God cares for and protects them amidst such barbarous, brutish, and deceitful men, who have power on their side; that he restrains these enemies at pleasure, and makes them even to waste themselves. In a sudden and tremendous manner they are sometimes destroyed. And, however the godly now pity the folly, and bewail the conduct, of sinners, they will hereafter approve God's justice in their punishment, and triumph in their ruin. At last God will make the most haughty and brutish to know that he governs the world; and that it is only in the way of holiness and virtue that real happiness is to be found.

PSALM LIX.

This psalm was penned by David when Saul sent messengers to watch his house in order to kill him. [1 Sam. xix.] In it, as in the seven immediately preceding, we have (1) David's bitter complaints of his enemies, as wicked, barbarous, malicious, and atheistical; 1—7. (2) His predictory prayers that God would expose these enemies to contempt and derision; make them standing monuments of his just indignation; deal with them according to their sins; consume them in his wrath; and even render their sin their punishment; 8, 10—15. (3) His holy resolutions to wait upon God till his judgments should be executed on them, and then to praise him for his favours; 9, 10, 16, 17.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LIX.—Firm faith of our new covenant interest in God encourages to bold supplications in a day of trouble. None can destroy if he defend us. Though none be innocent before God, they may be so before men; at least with respect to particular crimes. And such innocence, though it cannot protect us from evil men, may encourage our appeals to God for redress. It is common for sinners to think that God overlooks their wickedness; but the awful punishment thereof will make them know that he observed it. If we wait on God, and depend on his mercy, we are sure of preservation in trials, and even of prevention with favours. But how dreadful is their danger against whom the prayers of Christ and his people ascend! The tongue defiled with slander, cursing, and falsehood, will quickly burn in endless fire. The punishment which God inflicts on men, correspondent to their sins, will force them to know his existence and government: and the sufferings of Jesus Christ, and his people, shall at last issue in everlasting honours, triumphs in their God, and praises for his mercy and kindness.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LX.—What terrible rejection of God, what fear-for meat, and *grudge if they be not satisfied.

16 But I will sing of thy power; yea, I will sing aloud of thy mercy in the morning: for ^dthou hast been my defence and refuge in the day of my trouble.

17 Unto thee, O my strength, will I sing: for God is my defence, and the God of my mercy.

PSALM LX.

This psalm was penned by David during his wars with the Syrians and Edomites; [2 Sam. viii.] Here (1) He bewails the tokens of God's displeasure with Israel, in the breaking and disjoining of the nation under Saul and Ishbosheth; 1—3. (2) In thankful contemplation of the late revival which he had given to their affairs, by his own accession to the throne, and victories over the Philistines, Moabites, &c. he beseeches God to grant them victory over, and rest from, all their enemies; 4, 5. (3) In the confident expectation of God's fulfilment of his promises, along with importunate supplication, he expresses his triumphant hopes that God would quickly subdue every enemy, the fortified cities of Edom not excepted; 6—12.

To the chief musician upon Shushaneduth, *Michtam of David, to teach; when he strove with ^aAram-naharaim and with Aram-zobah, when Joab returned, and smote of Edom in the valley of salt twelve thousand.

O GOD, ^bthou hast cast us off, thou hast [†]scattered us, thou hast been displeased; ^cO turn thyself to us again.

2 ^dThou hast made the earth to tremble; thou hast broken it: heal the breaches thereof, for it shaketh.

3 ^eThou shast shewed thy people hard things: thou hast made us to drink the wine of astonishment.

4 ^fThou hast given a banner to them that fear thee, that it may be displayed because of the truth. Selah.

ful convulsions and miseries in nations and churches, are occasioned by sin! But the deeper our distresses are, the more is the power and grace of our God magnified in our deliverance. Not David raised to a throne, according to promise, but Jesus exalted to his Father's right hand, and manifested in the truth of the gospel, is our banner displayed, our means of victory and deliverance: let us then look to him and be saved. If sin has made deadly breaches, the sovereign grace of God can repair them. If we turn to him in prayer, we may expect his return in mercy to us. Having loved us freely, his right hand shall save us. Our deliverance may be delayed, but cannot be defeated. While Jesus subdues his opposers in mercy, or destroys them in wrath, let us make him our own, and every promised blessing of grace or glory will necessarily follow. When he pleases, he can make our bitterest enemies our warmest friends. At his pleasure he can unite nations and churches. Whatever difficulties then stand in our way, let faith overcome them. Though we seem cast off, let us cleave fast to the promise, and trust and wait for the salvation of God. The greater our danger, our cries and prayers ought to be the more earnest. Let us put no trust in human helps; but in God's name and strength encounter our spiritual enemies; and so shall our victory be sure.

PSALM LXI.

Here (1) David, in commemorating what the Lord had formerly done for him, and in the faith of what he had promised, cries to God for comfort and protection amidst great troubles; 1—4. (2) In the view of what God had done, and would for ever do, for him, he supplicates necessary mercies, and resolves on everlasting praise and thanksgiving to God as his consequent duty; 5—8.

PSALM LXII.

In this psalm (1) David solemnly avows his manifold relations to God; his composed dependance on, fixed trust in, and quiet waiting for, God; and his hopes of the ruin of his enemies; 1—7. (2) He earnestly encourages others to trust in, and call on God, who is infinite in power, mercy, and justice; and to beware of trusting in men, or in outward riches or honours, which are deceitful and unsubstantial; 8—12.

This psalm was penned by David while he hid himself from the fury of Saul in the wilderness of Judah; [1 Sam. xxii. 5.—or xxiii. 14, 24, 25.—or xxiv. 1.] Or when he fled from Absalom [2 Sam. xv. xvi.] We have (1) His strong faith, working in ardent desires after the most familiar fellowship with God in public ordinances; 1, 2. (2) His superlative estimation of God, issuing in hearty resolutions to be for ever employed in his praise; 3, 4. (3) His heart-ravishing satisfaction in God amidst secret and fixed meditation on his excellencies and love; 5, 6. (4) His joyful dependance on God as his Saviour and portion; 7, 8. (5) His holy triumph in God as his preserver, and the destroyer of his enemies; 9—11.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXI.—Often are the saints overwhelmed with their sense of sin, their troubles, temptations, and fears. But whatever we be, and in whatever condition, a throne of grace and a prayer-hearing God are at hand to apply to. Jesus, the establishing and protecting Rock, is near; and his word and Spirit are ready to lead us to him. And every former experience of protection or deliverance ought to encourage our flight to his refuge. Our trusting to his promises, perfections, and providences, and our cordial worship of him here, will issue in our being for ever with him in his mansions of glory above.—God hears our prayers, regards our vows, and will provide for us every thing good. We are heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ. Since King Jesus for ever lives, for ever sits enthroned amidst mercy and truth, we may confidently expect to live and reign with him in everlasting felicity and praise. Let then the vows which we have made be conscientiously performed: and let praising of God, and paying of our vows, be our daily employment.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXII.—Patient and submissive resignation of our souls to God is the certain mean of an happy issue of all our troubles. He is the alone author and finisher of all our salvation. In so doing, corruptions and temptations may shake us, but cannot move us, either fully or finally, from grace. While liars and traitors meet with destruction from God, they who trust in him may defy hell or earth to hurt them. In him they are saved, secured, strengthened, and protected; and, in him, not in themselves, do they glory. The more their faith in him is exercised, the stronger it becomes. The more we trust in men, or in worldly enjoyments, the more disappointment and hurt we shall meet with. But the more we depend on, cry to, or consider, God, we shall find the more pleasure, safety, and comfort. The mercy and power which we see in him shall be employed to furnish, protect, and reward us, and to cut off our enemies.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXIII.—What a dry and barren wilderness is this world, with nothing in it that can satisfy the longings of a soul! And, the more we find of the emptiness of created enjoyments, the more we should fly to the fulness of God, as our God and all-sufficient portion. They who have experienced fellowship with him, and discoveries of his glory in public ordinances, will feelingly regret the want of them, and ardently desire the re-enjoyment of them

This psalm contains (1) David's earnest supplications for preservation from his enemies, who were so spiteful in their calumniating reproaches; so close and subtle in their malicious plots; and so industrious and active in executing their cruel projects; 1—6. (2) His predictions that God, by just vengeance, would quickly render these enemies a terror to themselves and others, and an occasion of holy joy and confidence to the saints; 7—10.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

HEAR ^amy voice, O God, in my prayer: ^bpreserve my life from fear of the enemy,

2 ^cHide me from the ^dsecret counsel of the wicked; from the insurrection of the workers of iniquity:

9 And ^pall men shall fear, and shall declare the work of God; for they shall ^qwisely consider of his doing.

10 The ^rrighteous shall be glad in the LORD, and shall trust in him; and all the upright in heart shall glory.

PSALM LXV.

Here we are directed to praise God (1) For his kindness, manifested in his kingdom of grace, in hearing prayers, in pardoning iniquities, in satisfying the souls of his people with his blessings, and in protecting and supporting them in every exigence; 1—5. (2) For his kindness in the kingdom of providence, in fixing the mountains, in calming the seas, in preserving the regular succession of day and night, and in rendering the fields fruitful and the flocks numerous and happy; 6—13.

But great is the mercy that God himself, the fountain of happiness, and his throne of grace, are every where accessible. And, if our hearts be refreshed with the tokens of his favour, they ought to be enlarged in his praise. Happy and delightful is it to meditate on his loving-kindness—and in his strength to follow him closely in the means of grace and paths of duty. It is his help and favour only that can tune our hearts to praise him while we enjoy his protection.—Dreadful is the destruction of the enemies of Jesus Christ and his people! but eternal shall be the honours, and unspeakable the joys, of him and his children, while all their malicious reproachers and discouragers shall be filled with astonishment, and struck into endless silence and confusion.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXIV.—A believer's troubles and enemies often fill his heart with fear, and drive him to his prayers. And in every age and place the bitterest words of reproach and infamy are liberally shot forth against the most faithful saints. Being perfect in Jesus' imputed righteousness, and having the truth of grace in their hearts, they are hated by the world, who cannot bear their holy and heavenly conversation. Daring in wickedness, their enemies often neither fear God nor regard man, but encourage one another in sin; nor do they stick at any thing to accomplish their malicious designs. With what care they pry into the faults of the godly, suborn false witnesses, wrest their words, and cke out their defamations with impudent falsehoods! but God will at last revenge the injuries done to his people. And when he strikes home there is no escaping. Then the reproaches of the wicked, and their wicked imprecations, shall draw down loads of wrath on their own heads. And it is our wisdom to profit by the judgments of others. Too often warnings are lost through inconsideration. Even persecutors ought to learn and tremble while the door of mercy is yet open. And saints should rejoice in God's manifestation of his

4 ^{°Blessed} is the man whom thou chooseth, and causest to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts: we shall be ^hsatisfied with the goodness of thy house, ^{even} of thy holy temple.

5 ⁱBy terrible things in righteousness wilt thou answer us, O ^kGod of our salvation; ^{who art} the confidence of all the ends of the earth, and of them that are afar off ^{upon} the sea:

13 ^{*}The pastures are clothed with flocks; the valleys also are covered over with corn; they shout for joy, they also sing.

PSALM LXVI.

In this psalm of thanksgiving, in which the fate of Israel is to be considered as typical of that of the gospel church and people of God, we have (1) David, as the messenger of God, calling all the nations of mankind to praise God for the manifestation of his sovereign dominion in his works, so wonderful in themselves, terrible to his enemies, comfortable to his people, and commanding and awful to all men; 1—7.—And for trying his people with afflictions; for supporting under them, protecting amidst them, and delivering from them at last; 8—12. (2) David, as the servant of God, exemplifying his own exhortations in honouring God by costly oblations; and by thankful declarations of what God had done for his soul, particularly in answer to his prayers; 13—20.

To the chief musician, A song or psalm.

MAKE a joyful noise unto God, ^aall ^bye lands:

power and justice, and in their own deliverance; and trust in him, and make him their glory.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXV.—Patient expectations for God shall be succeeded with joyful praises of him in his church and ordinances. And candid vows must be followed with conscientious fulfilment. God's readiness to hear prayer should encourage every one earnestly and hopefully to address him in every case; and sense of loading guilt or prevalent lusts ought not to make us despair, but to implore, believe, and admire, the pardoning and sanctifying mercy of God. Fellowship with God is our greatest happiness. And it is not our merit, but his gracious choice and effectual grace, that brings us to it. Nor must it be by transient starts, but by a fixed attendance on the ordinances of his grace, as nothing but the fulness of God in Christ can satisfy our hungry souls. And, however terrible the answer must be, God never disappoints the prayers or hopes of his people. Wherever they may be in the world, they have equal access to him as their trust and salvation. Every where, in the works of nature, we may discern the power, wisdom, goodness, and greatness of God. And every thing we receive from mountains, from seas, from luminaries, from rains, from pastures, from fields, ought, with thankful admiration and praise, to be received as his gift. But in these let me discern, as in a figure, how he establishes his church, his ordinances, and his people. He limits, restrains, and directs, their raging troubles.—He enlightens, by the word of his grace, and the influences of his Spirit. And, while Jesus, the Sun of righteousness, rises with healing under his wings, his showers of gospel declarations and spiritual influences drop down abundantly, for the nourishment, satisfaction, and joy, of his ransomed ones.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXVII.—God's mercy is the spring and matter of all the blessings we need. His favour manifested is our whole joy and comfort. And, the more kindness he bestows upon any person or church, the more they wish his gospel and kingdom to spread. His method of redeeming and saving men through Christ is health to their soul, and marrow to their bones. It is an unspeakable mercy to be judged and governed according to the gospel and covenant of grace. The service of Christ is the freedom and happiness of his people: and his government introduces the most inestimable benefits and therein: thou, O God, hast prepared of thy goodness for the poor.

11 The LORD gave the word; great was the company of those that published it.

12 Kings of armies did flee apace: and she that tarried at home divided the spoil.

13 Though ye have lien among the pots, yet shall ye be as the wings of a dove covered with silver, and her feathers with yellow gold.

14 When the Almighty scattered kings in it, it was white as snow in Salmon.

15 The hill of God is as the hill of Bashan; an high hill as the hill of Bashan.

16 Why leap ye, ye high hills? this is the hill which God desireth to dwell in; yea, the LORD will dwell in it for ever.

17 The chariots of God are twenty thousand, even thousands of angels: the LORD is among them, as in Sinai, in the holy place.

18 Thou hast ascended on high, thou hast led captivity captive: thou hast received gifts for men; yea, for the rebellious also, that the LORD God might dwell among them.

19 Blessed be the LORD, who daily loadeth us with benefits, even the God of our salvation. Selah.

20 He that is our God is the God of salvation; and unto God the Lord belong the issues from death.

21 But God shall wound the head of his enemies, and the hairy scalp of such an one as goeth on still in his trespasses.

22 The LORD said, I will bring again from Bashan, I will bring my people again from the depths of the sea:

23 That thy foot may be dipped in the blood of thine enemies, and the tongue of thy dogs in the same.

24 They have seen thy goings, O God; even the goings of my God, my King, in the sanctuary.

25 The singers went before, the players on instruments followed after; among them were the damsels playing with timbrels.

26 Bless ye God in the congregations, even the LORD, from the fountain of Israel.

27 There is little Benjamin with their ruler, the princes of Judah and their counsel, the princes of Zebulun, and the princes of Naphtali.

28 Thy God hath commanded thy exalted praises. What a harvest of converted souls the world yields when he pours forth his influences! And blessings innumerable flow from a new covenant relation to God as our God; while reverential love and holy obedience always attend the firm faith thereof!

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXVIII.—No hatred, no opposition, of devils or men could exclude our Redeemer from his glory. However strong or obstinate his enemies, they are easily ruined by his power. But happy—thrice happy are they who have this high Sovereign, this glorious, this gracious, JEREMIAH to be their God! Behold, how he protects his afflicted church and people! raises up families of saints in our Gentile world; delivers the prisoners of sin and Satan from their chains of corruptions and curses; and abandons obstinate transgressors to eternal ruin! Behold him leading up his people from their spiritual bondage, and by his word and Spirit directing them in their paths! By his almighty influence he brought down all opposition. By showers of gospel truths and strength: strengthen, O God, that which thou hast wrought for us.

29 Because of thy temple at Jerusalem shall kings bring presents unto thee.

30 Rebuke the company of spearmen, the multitude of the bulls, with the calves of the people, till every one submit himself with pieces of silver: scatter thou the people that delight in war.

31 Princes shall come out of Egypt; Ethiopia shall soon stretch out her hands unto God.

32 Sing unto God, ye kingdoms of the earth; O sing praises unto the LORD; Selah:

33 To him that rideth upon the heaven of heavens, which were of old; lo, he doth send out his voice, and that a mighty voice.

34 Ascribe ye strength unto God: his excellency is over Israel, and his strength is in the clouds.

35 O God, thou art terrible out of thy holy places: the God of Israel is he that giveth strength and power unto his people. Blessed be God.

PSALM LXIX.

This psalm is much like the 22d, representing at once the troubles of David and of David's Lord, and the glories which followed. We have in it (1) Bitter complaints of long and sore troubles; of the malice and multitude of enemies; of the unkindness of friends; of general contempt; and these mingled with candid acknowledgments of guilt, and with supplications for God's gracious audience and merciful deliverance; 1—13. (2) Pleas insisted upon in these supplications, viz. the mercy and truth of God; the psalmist's own great distress; the insolence and cruelty of his enemies, and the unkindness of his friends; 14—21. (3) Predictions of the ruin of David's, and especially of Christ's, Jewish enemies; importing that their sacrifices and their common food shall be cursed to them; that they should be plagued with judicial blindness and wrathful disquiet; that they should be rendered public monuments of the vengeance of God, their church and state being quite unhinged and their land desolated; and, in fine, that their ruin should be increasing, and their recovery almost impossible; 22—28. (4) Under a deep sense of his poverty and distress, David and the divine Son of David celebrate the high praises of God, and call others to praise him for the deliverances of Israel; but chiefly for the erection of the gospel church, and for the certain, though still future, recalling of the Jews into the same; 29—36.

To the chief musician upon Shoshannim, A psalm of David.

SAVE me, O God; for the waters are come in unto my soul.

2 I sink in deep mire, where there is no standing: I am come into deep waters, where the floods overflow me.

3 I am weary of my crying: my throat is dried: mine eyes fail while I wait for my God.

4 They that hate me without a cause are more than the hairs on mine head: they that would destroy me, being mine enemies wrongfully, are mighty: then I restored that which I took not away.

5 O God, thou knowest my foolishness; and my sins are not hid from thee.

6 Let not them that wait on thee, O LORD God of hosts, be ashamed for my spiritual influences he quickened the dead, and refreshed the weary souls. By the multitudes of his apostles and ministers he published the glad tidings of salvation. By his grace he washed poor hell-enslaved sinners in his blood, and adorned them with his righteousness and grace. He established his church firm and high as mountains which cannot be moved, and from which he will never depart. While angelic hosts are her guard, the ascending Redeemer is her conquering Head, her Treasury and Almoner. How great are his triumphs, his grace, his glory! Never pardoned rebel owed such gratitude to his generous prince as every pardoned sinner owes to his Lord. Never is he weary of shewing mercy. And even death is disarmed to them who have an interest in him and his salvation. But dreadful is the fate of obstinate Jews, and others, who oppose the designs of his grace; and, behold, when he went forth in the ordinances of the gospel by his apostles and other missionaries, how Jews and Gentiles saw his glory, sang his praise, and submitted themselves to his government!

sake: let not those that seek thee be confounded for my sake, O God of Israel.

7 Because for thy sake ^h I have borne reproach: shame hath covered my face.

8 ⁱ I am become a stranger unto my brethren, and an alien unto my mother's children.

9 ^k For the zeal of thine house hath eaten me up; ^l and the reproaches of them that reproached thee are fallen upon me.

10 ^m When I wept, and chastened my soul with fasting, that was to my reproach.

11 ⁿ I made sackcloth also my garment;
and I became a proverb to them.

12 ^o They that sit in the gate speak against me; and ^p I was ^q the song of the drunkards.

13 But, as for me, ^r my prayer is unto thee, O LORD, in ^s an acceptable time: O God, ^t in the multitude of thy mercy hear me, in the truth of thy salvation.

14 ^u Deliver me out of the mire, and let me not sink: let me be delivered from them that hate me, and out of the deep waters.

15 Let not the water-flood overflow me, neither let the deep swallow me up, and let not ^v the pit shut her mouth upon
me.

16 Hear me, O LORD; ^w for thy loving-kindness is good: turn unto me ^x according to the multitude of thy tender mercies.

17 ^y And hide not thy face from thy servant; for I am in trouble: ^z hear me speedily.

18 ^a Draw nigh unto my soul, and redeem it: deliver me ^b because of mine enemies.

19 Thou hast known my ^c reproach, and my shame, and my dishonour: ^d mine adversaries are all before thee.

20 ^e Reproach hath broken my heart; and I am full of heaviness: and I looked for some ^f to take pity, ^g but there was none; and for comforters, but I found none.

21 They gave me also gall for my meat; ^h and in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink.

22 ⁱ Let their table become a snare before them: and ^j that which should have been for their welfare, let it become a trap.

23 ^k Let their eyes be darkened, that they see not; and make their loins continually to shake.

24 ^l Pour out thine indignation upon them, and let thy wrathful anger take hold on them.

25 Let ^m their habitation be desolate;
and ⁿ let none dwell in their tents.

26 ^o For they persecute him whom thou hast smitten; and they talk to the grief of ^p those whom thou hast wounded.

27 ^q Add ^r iniquity unto their iniquity:
and let them not come into thy righteousness.

28 ^s Let them be blotted out of the book of the living, and not be written with the righteous.

29 ^t But I am poor and sorrowful:
^u let thy salvation, O God, set me up on high.

30 ^v I will praise the name of God with a song, and will magnify him with thanksgiving.

31 ^w This also shall please the LORD better than an ox or bullock that hath horns and hoofs.

32 ^x The ^y humble shall see this, and be glad: and your heart shall live that seek God.

33 ^z For the LORD heareth the poor, and despiseth not his prisoners.

34 ^a Let the heaven and earth praise him, the seas, and every thing that ^b moveth therein.

35 ^c For God will save Zion, and will build the cities of Judah: that they may dwell there, and have it in possession.

36 ^d The seed also of his servants shall inherit it: and they that love his name shall dwell therein.

PSALM LXX.

This psalm is much the same as the five last verses of the 40th.
In it David prays (1) For divine help to himself; 1, 5. (2) For shame and confusion to his enemies; 2, 3. (3) For joy and comfort to his friends; 4.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David,
^a to bring to remembrance.

MAKE haste, ^b O God, to deliver me; make haste ^c to help me, O LORD.

2 ^d Let them be ashamed and confounded that seek after my soul: let them be turned backward, and put to confusion, that desire my hurt.

3 Let them be turned back for a reward of their shame that say, Aha, aha.

4 ^e Let all those that seek thee rejoice and be glad in thee: and let such as love thy salvation say continually, Let God be magnified.

5 ^f But I am poor and needy; make haste unto me, O God: thou art my help and my deliverer; O LORD, make no tarrying.

PSALM LXXI.

This psalm was probably penned on the occasion of Absalom's rebellion; as psalms 3d, 42d, 43d; or of Sheba's conspiracy;
[2 Sam. xx.] And contains (1) David's firm confidence in God, encouraged by manifold experiences of his gracious kindness; 1, 3, 5—7. (2) His fervent prayers, that he might never be ashamed, but might be delivered; might find rest in God; might have constant matter of new praises and thanksgivings afforded him; might not be forsaken of God in his old age; and that his numerous, powerful, and crafty, enemies might be confounded with shame and perplexity; 1—13, 18. (3) His confident and joyful expectations of God's further kindness, particularly that God would never forsake but revive him; that he would increase his honour and comfort, and put his enemies to shame.—And

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXIX.—While I read these things, let me, with deep concern, by faith behold my Redeemer, charged in law with my sins, and bearing their punishment. Let me learn with patience to run the race of holy obedience, and of necessary trials, set before me, looking to Jesus as my pattern, and as the author and finisher of my faith. While I behold the tremendous severity of God's judgments against his ancient people for rejecting and murdering his Son, let me not be high-minded, but fear.—Let me behold the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, who though he was rich, yet for our sakes became poor, that we through his poverty might be made rich.—And let me be a living and lively member of that church which is founded in his blood, and blessed in him with all spiritual blessings.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXX.—While here also I behold Jesus Christ in great debasement, poverty, and distress, denouncing just and fearful punishment on his Jewish, Heathen, Antichristian, and other enemies; and interceding for the joy and happiness of his friends; to his Father's honour, let me apply hereupon he resolves with admiring rapture, to extol God's righteousness and salvation, and his new covenant relation to himself and to Israel; 14-24.

IN^a thee, O LORD, do I put my trust;
let me never be put to confusion.

2^b Deliver me in thy righteousness, and cause me to escape: ^cincline thine ear unto me, and save me.

3^d Be thou my strong habitation, whereunto I may continually resort: ^ethou hast given commandment to save me; for thou art my rock and my fortress.

4 Deliver me, O my God, out of the hand of the wicked, out of the hand of the unrighteous and cruel man.

5 For ^fthou art my hope, O LORD
GOD: ^gthou art my trust from my youth.

6^h By thee have I been holden up from the womb: thou art he that took me out of my mother's bowels: my praise ⁱshall be continually of thee.

7^j I am as a wonder unto many; ^kbut thou art my strong refuge.

8^l Let my mouth be filled with thy praise ^mand with thy honour all the day.

9ⁿ Cast me not off in the time of old age; forsake me not when my strength faileth.

10^o For mine enemies speak against me; and they that ^play wait for my soul take counsel together,

11 Saying, ^qGod hath forsaken him:
persecute and take him, for ^rthere is none to deliver him.

12 O ^sGod, be not far from me: O my God, make haste for my help.

13^t Let them be confounded ^uand consumed that are adversaries to my soul:
let them be covered with reproach and dishonour that seek my hurt.

14^v But I will hope continually, and will yet praise thee more and more.

15^w My mouth shall shew forth thy righteousness ^xand thy salvation all the day; for ^yI know not the numbers thereof.

16^z I will go in the strength of the LORD GOD: I will make mention ^aof thy righteousness, ^beven of thine only.

17 O God, ^cthou hast taught me from my youth: and hitherto ^dhave I declared thy wondrous works.

18 Now also, ^ewhen I am old and grey-headed, O God, forsake me not; ^funtil I have shewed ^gthy strength unto this generation, ^hand thy power to every one ⁱthat is to come.

19^j Thy righteousness also, O God, is very high, ^kwho hast done great things:
O God, who is like unto thee!

bring them, and the sinful causes thereof, to my remembrance. Urgent trials should always awaken fervent prayers.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXXI.—They who know God, and his faithfulness and grace, will, with comfort and confidence, be engaged to trust him in every time of need. The more we reflect on what God hath done for us, it will the more engage our trust and animate our praise. In the depth of our misery God delights to magnify his mercy. And they who confidently plead his faithfulness shall never be disappointed. In old age we must expect infirmities; but God can give an increase of faith and patience to bear them. His aged servants and sore troubles, shalt quicken me again, and shalt bring me up again from the depths of the earth.

21^a Thou shalt increase my greatness, and comfort me on every side.

22^b I will also praise thee ^cwith the psaltery, ^deven thy truth, O my God: unto thee will I sing with the harp, O thou ^eholy One of Israel.

23^f My lips shall greatly rejoice when I sing unto thee; and my soul, which thou hast redeemed.

24 My tongue also shall talk of thy righteousness all the day long: for they are confounded, ^gfor they are brought unto shame, that seek my hurt.

PSALM LXXII.

This psalm was composed by David about the time of Solomon's instalment on the throne of Israel; 1 Kings i. ii. With respect to him, here is (1) Fervent prayer for proper qualifications to furnish him for government; 1. (2) Predictions of the peace, glory, extent, wealth, duration, and happiness, of his government; 2-17. (3) Praises to the God of Israel for his mercies to his people; 18, 19. But, as our Redeemer is principally intended, we have, concerning him, (1) His being furnished with the Holy Ghost above measure, to qualify him for his work;
1. (2) The glories of his government: how righteous, prudent, orderly, condescending, merciful; how destructive to oppressors; how efficaciously productive of real religion; and how comfortable to his faithful subjects; his administrations are!
2-9. How extensive his church among all ranks and nations!
how tender his care of the meanest of his subjects! how much he is revered and adored by them! how astonishing their increase, by means of his gospel truth preached! and how permanent and useful his government! 10-17, 5. (3) A solemn ascription of all the praise of these wonderful works to God alone, with an earnest request, and believing expectation, that his glory shall fill the whole earth; 18, 19.

A psalm *for Solomon.

GIVE ^athe king thy judgments, O God, and thy righteousness unto the king's son.

2^b He shall judge thy people with righteousness, and thy poor with judgment.

3^c The mountains shall bring peace to the people, and the little hills, by righteousness.

4^d He shall judge the poor of the people, he shall save the children of the needy, and ^eshall break in pieces the oppressor.

5^f They shall fear thee as long as the sun and moon endure, throughout all generations.

6^g He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass; as showers ^hthat water
the earth.

7ⁱ In his days shall the righteous flourish; and abundance of peace ^jso long as the moon endureth.

8^k He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth.

9^l They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before him; and his enemies shall lick the dust.

10^m The kings of Tarshish and of the isles shall bring presents: the kings of Sheba and Seba shall offer gifts.

are never cast off by him: but, when they experience most weakness, they shall most assuredly experience abundant support in time of need. He may afflict his people, but can never reject them. Their enemies may boast in vain a while, but just ruin shall reward them at last. Happy they whose grand supports are the power and promise of God, and whose early and long continued experience of his favours encourages them to maintain their hopes and increase in their holiness. And, if we hope for eternal happiness, let us do what we can to spread the honour and good favour of Christ on earth. For how becoming is it for aged saints to be remarkable in cheerfully expecting good at the hand of God; and to have heart, and lips, and life, all filled with his praise! How pleasant is it to step as it were into heaven, scarcely needing to change either our work or our song.

PSALM LXXIII.

This psalm and the ten following are called Psalms of Asaph; but whether because he composed most of them, or because he led the music in singing them, is not altogether certain. Here we have (1) The great foundation of all religion, viz. the goodness of God to his people, strongly asserted; (2) The psalmist's faith, fearfully shaken by the consideration of the freedom, prosperity, plenty, and apparently peaceful death of the wicked; which rendered them proud, oppressive, insolent, atheistical, and profane, while himself was in a manner consigned to nothing but trouble; (3) The temptation, when it had reduced him to the brink of Atheism, is broken by a discovery of the connected purposes and providences of God in his word and ordinances; (4) His improvement of his fall and recovery, to promote a deep sense of his own meanness, ignorance, and folly; a complete dependance on God as his guide; and a cleaving to him as his portion; infinitely preferable to every thing else;—without whom he must be necessarily miserable, and in the enjoyment of whom he is assured of happiness, and excited to praise and thanksgiving; 21—28.

A psalm *of Asaph.

TRULY + "God is good to Israel, even to such as are † of a clean heart.

2 But, as for me, "my feet were almost gone; my steps had well nigh slipped.

3 "For I was envious at the foolish, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked.

4 "For there are no bands in their death; but their strength is || firm.

5 "They are not *in trouble as other men; neither are they plagued †like other men.

6 "Therefore pride compasseth them about as a chain; violence covereth them as a garment.

7 "Their eyes stand out with fatness:
they have more than heart could wish.

8 "They are corrupt, and speak wickedly concerning oppression: they speak loftily.

9 "They set their mouth against the heavens, and their tongue walketh through the earth.

10 Therefore his people "return hither: and "waters of a full cup are wrung out to them.

11 And they say, "How doth God know? and is there knowledge in the Most High?

12 "Behold, these are the ungodly, who prosper in the world; they increase in riches.

13 "Verily I have cleansed my heart in vain, and washed my hands in innocency.

14 "For all the day long have I been plagued, and || chastened every morning.

15 If I say, I will speak thus; behold,
"I should offend against the generation of thy children.

16 "When I thought to know this,
*it was too painful for me;

17 "Until I went into the sanctuary of God; then understood I their end.

18 Surely "thou didst set them in slippery places: thou castedst them down into destruction.

19 "How are they brought into desolation, as in a moment! they are utterly consumed with terrors.

20 "As a dream when one awaketh; so, O LORD, when thou awakest, thou shalt despise their image.

21 "Thus my heart was grieved, and I was pricked in my reins.

22 "So foolish was I, and †ignorant;
I was as a beast †before thee.

23 Nevertheless, "I am continually with thee: thou hast holden me by my right hand.

24 "Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel, and afterward receive me to glory.

25 "Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none upon earth that I desire beside thee.

26 "My flesh and my heart faileth: but God is the || strength of my heart, and my portion for ever.

27 For, lo, "they that are far from thee shall perish: thou hast destroyed all them that "go a whoring from thee.

28 But "it is good for me to draw near to God: "I have put my trust in the LORD God, that I may declare all thy works.

of praise to his name. What commendations of him are in the word of the gospel! From him the corn of wheat, sown in death upon Calvary, and from the handful of gospel truth, sown among hardened hearts, shall proceed converts, strong and tall in grace as the cedars of Lebanon, and numerous as the piles of grass. How lasting is his kingdom, and how certainly useful for diffusing every spiritual blessing among his accursed brethren of mankind! United to his person, and sharing of his benefits, let us wish well to his interests and honour, and admire, adore, and praise, JEHOVAH in him, as the author of all the wonders of providence and grace.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXXIII.—In our perplexing difficulties we ought to recur to the first principles of our most holy faith. And never should we lose the views of God's kindness to those who are washed in the blood, and sanctified by the Spirit, of his Son. Often the strongest believers are most violently

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXXII.—Behold how Jesus Christ, endowed with the Holy Ghost above measure, and with all power in heaven and earth, reigns over his gospel church! In infinite equity and wisdom he conducts his whole administration. By his righteousness he purchased, by his intercession he procures, and by his word, ordinances, and Spirit, he confers on men, peace with God, peace in the conscience, and with one another. Poor destitute sinners he supplies from his fulness of blessings, and delivers them from the hand of sin, Satan, and the world, their oppressors. His spiritual influences, coming down in their season, shall render his subjects flourishing and fruitful in holiness. And how extensive his gospel church, comprehending both Jews and Gentiles—the wildest Arabs and most distant islanders not excepted! In it persons of every station, but chiefly of the poor, submit to his yoke, and devote themselves, and all that they have, to his service. Earnest are their prayers for his presence and in his ordinances, and for his coming in the clouds; and

PSALM LXXIV.

This psalm relates to the destruction of the city and temple of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans, or to some similar disaster by the Syro-Grecians, &c. In it we have (1) The church's bitter complaints of God's displeasure; of the outrage of their enemies; and of their apparent hopeless situation; 1-11. (2) Strong and heart-encouraging pleadings with God, upon the account of his relation to them, and of the great things he had done for them; that he was at once their God and the God of nature; and that therefore he would remember to execute just vengeance upon his sworn enemies, and grant help and relief to his covenant people; 12-23.

^aMaschil of Asaph.

O GOD, ^bwhy hast thou cast us off for ever? ^cwhy doth thine anger smoke against ^dthe sheep of thy pasture?

2 Remember ^ethy congregation, which thou hast purchased of old; the ^frod of thine inheritance, which thou hast redeemed; this ^gmount Zion wherein thou hast dwelt.

3 ^hLift up thy feet unto the perpetual desolations; even all that the enemy hath done wickedly in the sanctuary.

4 ⁱThine enemies roar in the midst of thy congregations; they set up their ensigns for signs.

5 ^jA man was famous according as he ^khad lifted up axes upon the thick trees.

6 But now they break down ^lthe carved work thereof at once with axes and hammers.

7 ^mThey have cast fire into thy sanctuary; they have defiled by casting down the dwelling place of thy name to the ground.

8 They said in their hearts, ⁿLet us ^odestroy them together: they have burned up all the ^psynagogues of God in the land.

9 ^qWe see not our signs: there is no more any prophet; neither is there among us any that knoweth how long.

10 O God, ^rhow long shall the adversary reproach? shall the enemy blaspheme thy name for ever?

11 ^sWhy withdrawest thou thy hand, ^teven thy right hand? pluck it out of thy bosom.

12 ^uFor God is my King of old, working salvation in the midst of the earth.

13 ^vThou didst ^wdivide the sea by thy strength: thou ^xbreakest the heads of the ^ydragons in the waters.

14 Thou brakest the heads of leviathan in pieces, and gavest him to be ^zmeat to the people inhabiting the wilderness.

15 Thou ^{aa}didst cleave the fountain and the flood: ^{ab}thou driedst up ^{ac}mighty rivers.

16 ^{ad}The day is thine, the night also is thine: thou hast prepared the light and the sun.

17 ^{ae}Thou hast set all the borders of the earth: thou hast ^{af}made summer and winter.

18 ^{ag}Remember this, that the enemy hath reproached, O LORD, and that the foolish people have blasphemed thy name.

19 O deliver not the soul of thy ^{ah}turtle-dove unto the multitude of the wicked: forget not the congregation of thy poor for ever.

20 ^{ai}Have respect unto the covenant; for the ^{aj}dark places of the earth are full of the habitations of cruelty.

21 ^{ak}O let not the oppressed return ashamed: let the poor and needy praise thy name.

22 ^{al}Arise, O God, plead thine own cause: remember how the foolish man ^{am}reproacheth thee daily.

23 Forget not the voice of thine enemies: ^{an}the tumult of those that rise up against thee ^{ao}increaseth continually.

PSALM LXXV.

Here (1) David returns thanks to God for advancing him to the throne of Israel, and resolves to act for the public welfare; 1-3, 9, 10. (2) He rebukes the insolence of such as opposed his advancement, which sprung from the sovereign disposal of God the Judge of the world; and denounces their destruction; 4-8.

hasten towards endless perdition, let me therefore draw near to him, in habitual fellowship with him. Let me by faith depend on his promise, that here and hereafter my lips may be filled with his praise.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXXIV.—Alas! to what melancholy apprehensions of their state and case are the people of God sometimes reduced! They fear that the rod of his correction is the sword of his vengeance. But, though he cast them down, he will never utterly cast them off. They, who are redeemed by Jesus' blood, shall never perish under the bondage of corruption. The favours which they have received are a presage, and ought to be made a plea, for greater. While worldly minds feel only worldly crosses, the interests of religion, and welfare of the church, are incomparably dearest to the children of God. And, however certain the ruin, which will fall upon the destroyers of his church at last, it is extremely affecting to behold them making havock of God's truths, ordinances, or people, while there is none to comfort us, or to explain the dark providences. But under sore troubles it is proper to commemorate, and plead upon, God's former and distinguished mercies. He who divided the Red sea, and destroyed Pharaoh and his host, and who brought waters from the rock for Israel; he, who is the sovereign of nature, can, at his pleasure, command our and his church's deliverance. Importunate wrestlings and pleadings with God for the relief of his church, which is so dear to him, and for fulfilling his promise, of which he is ever mindful, and for destroying his daring and implacable reproachers, will not long be unanswered.

10 All the horns of the wicked also will I cut off; but the horns of the righteous shall be exalted.

PSALM LXXVI.

This psalm is nearly allied to the 48th, and was penned on occasion of some remarkable victory: but whether in the days of David, Asa, Jehoshaphat, or Hezekiah [2 Chron. xiv. xx. xxxii.] is uncertain. We have in it (1) Encouraging congratulations of the church's happiness, in having God so manifested in her, and so near unto her; and in having his power so employed in her behalf, to the advancement of his own glory and the destruction of her enemies; 1—6. (2) Important instructions how to improve this victory, to the terror of enemies, the comfort of saints, and the excitement of all to vow to God, and to obey and revere him; 7—12.

To the chief musician on ^aNeginoth,
A psalm or song ^{*}of Asaph.

IN ^bJudah is God known: ^chis name is great in Israel.

2 In Salem also is his tabernacle, and his dwelling place in Zion.

3 There brake he the arrows of the bow, the shield, and the sword, and the battle. Selah.

4 Thou art more glorious and excellent than ^dthe mountains of prey.

5 The stout hearted are spoiled, they have slept their sleep: and none of the men of might have found their hands.

6 At thy rebuke, O God of Jacob, both the chariot and horse are cast into a dead sleep.

7 Thou, even thou, art to be feared; and ^ewho may stand in thy sight when once thou art angry?

8 Thou didst cause judgment to be heard from heaven; the earth feared, and was still.

9 When ^mGod arose to judgment, to save all the meek of the earth. Selah.

10 Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee: ^othe remainder of wrath shalt thou restrain.

11 Vow, and pay unto the LORD your God: ^alet all that be round about him bring presents ^runto him that ought to be feared.

12 He shall cut off the spirit of princes: he is terrible to the kings of the earth.

PSALM LXXVII.

This psalm relates to (1) A most afflicted case, in which are remarkable, fervent, and incessant prayers, agonizing restlessness, heart-overwhelming meditations, melancholy fears, and almost desperate outcries, concerning God; 1—9. (2) The effectual cure of this mournful case, by serious meditation on, and solemn acknowledgment of, the power, greatness, and grace, of God as our God;—and of the holiness and mysteriousness of his providential conduct; particularly in bringing Israel out of Egypt, and in leading them through the wilderness to the promised land; 10—20.

To the chief musician, to ^aJeduthun,
A psalm ^bof Asaph.

I ^cCRIED unto God with my voice, even unto God with my voice; and he gave ear unto me.

2 In the day of my trouble I sought the LORD; my ^{*}sore ^eran in the night, and ceased not: ^fmy soul refused to be comforted.

3 I remembered God, and was troubled: ^hI complained, and my spirit was overwhelmed. Selah.

4 Thou holdest mine eyes waking: I am so troubled that I cannot speak.

5 I have considered the days of old, the years of ancient times.

6 I call to remembrance my ⁱsong in the night: ^mI commune with mine own heart; and my spirit made diligent search.

7 Will the LORD cast off for ever? and will he be favourable no more?

8 Is his mercy clean gone for ever? doth his promise fail ⁺for evermore?

9 Hath God forgotten to be gracious? hath he in anger shut up his tender mercies? Selah.

10 And I said, ^aThis is my infirmity: but I will remember the ^ryears of the right hand of the Most High.

11 I will remember the works of the LORD: surely I will remember thy wonders of old.

12 I will ^tmeditate also of all thy work, and talk of thy doings.

13 Thy way, O God, is in the sanctuary: ^{*}who is so great a God as our God!

14 Thou art the God that dost wonders: ⁺thou hast declared thy strength among the people.

15 Thou hast with thine arm redeemed thy people, the sons of Jacob and Joseph. Selah.

16 The waters saw thee, O God, the waters saw thee; they were afraid; the depths also were troubled.

17 The clouds poured out water; the skies sent out a sound; ^tthine ^earrows also went abroad.

18 The voice of thy thunder was in the heaven; the lightnings lightened the world; the earth trembled and shook.

19 Thy way is in the sea, and thy path in the great waters, and thy footsteps are not known.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXXV.—While we think of Jesus Christ, whom God has marvellously crowned with glory and honour, and of the infinite danger of opposing his government, let us remark what wonderful works of God have been exercised to us-ward. Great is the praise which we owe to God on every review of his mercies. Important and useful is the charge which is committed to magistrates and ministers: and there is great need of activity and care in their administrations, as they must be accountable to God, from whom they received their power. One true patriot may sometimes save a disjointed church or state from impending ruin. But vain and dangerous is it to withstand God's deputies. The righteous shall be advanced and flourish, while obstinate sinners shall be plunged into everlasting misery.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXXVI.—Happy are those nations and churches which have the knowledge and presence of God in them! How profitable, pleasant, and enriching! Gloriously he protects them in danger, and destroys their enemies, however mighty or numerous. Their tyrannical oppressors, though like mountains of prey, shall be destroyed by his hand. His meek ones must indeed patiently wait a while; but at last he will, to the terror of all around, appear for their relief. Whatever his people suffer shall but brighten their graces, and redound to his glory. And whatever of his enemies' fury hath not this tendency he restrains. The more awful our God and our deliverances are, the more ought we to wait on him, fear him, and make and pay grateful vows to him.

PSALM LXXVIII.

This psalm is a brief but instructive history of the transactions between Israel and their God, for about four hundred and eighty years from Moses to David. Here is (1) The introduction; containing a solemn call to an attentive consideration of God's word and works, in order to a faithful transmitting of the knowledge of them to posterity, that they might set their hope in God, and reform from their father's wickedness; 1—8. (2) The history itself: in which are exhibited, 1. God's favours to Israel before their settlement in Canaan, in plugging the Egyptians, in dividing the Red Sea, in giving them water from the rock and manna from heaven, in bringing them into Canaan, notwithstanding their unnumbered provocations; particularly their forgetfulness of his mighty works; their ingratitude for his favours: their murmuring against his trying dispensations; their eagerness to satiate their lusts with his benefits; their impenitent obduracy, or hypocritical repentance, under his rebukes; 9—35. 2. Their ingratitude, treachery, and idolatry, after their entrance into Canaan;—with God's righteous resentment thereof, in removing his tabernacle from Shiloh, and in delivering up his ark and people into the hand of the Philistines; 36—64. 3. God's merciful return to them, in obliging the Philistines, by the plague of emrods, to restore his ark; in providing at length an habitation for it at Jerusalem; and in raising up and qualifying David, a descendant of Judah, to govern them in a manner both honourable and happy; 65—72. These things are more largely recorded in the books of Exodus, Numbers, Deuteronomy, Joshua, Judges, Samuel I. and II. and part of Kings I.

* Maschil of Asaph.

GIVE ear, O my people, to my law: incline your ears to the words of my mouth.

2 'I will open my mouth in a parable: I will utter dark sayings of old:

3 'Which we have heard and known, and our fathers have told us.

4 'We will not hide them from their children, shewing to the generation to come the praises of the LORD, and his strength, and his wonderful works that he hath done.

5 'For he established a testimony in Jacob, and appointed a law in Israel, which he commanded our fathers, * that they should make them known to their children:

6 'That the generation to come might know them, even the children which should be born; who should arise and declare them to their children:

7 'That they might set their hope in God, and not forget the works of God, but keep his commandments:

8 And might not be ¹ as their fathers, a stubborn and rebellious generation; a generation [†]that set not their heart aright, and whose spirit was not stedfast with God.

9 The children of Ephraim, being armed, and [‡]carrying bows, ^m turned back in the day of battle.

10 ⁿ They kept not the covenant of God, and refused to walk in his law;

11 ^o And forgot his works, and his wonders that he had shewed them.

12 ^p Marvellous things did he in the sight of their fathers, in the land of Egypt, in the field of Zoan.

13 'He divided the sea, and caused them to pass through; and he made the waters to stand as an heap.

14 'In the day time also he led them with a cloud, and all the night with a light of fire.

15 'He clave the rocks in the wilderness, and gave them drink as out of the great depths.

16 He brought ^qstreams also out of the rock, and caused waters to run down like rivers.

17 ^r And they sinned yet more against him, by provoking the Most High in the wilderness.

18 ^y And they tempted God in their heart, by asking meat for their lust.

19 Yea, they spake against God; they said, ^s Can God ^{||} furnish a table in the wilderness?

20 ^a Behold, he smote the rock, that the waters gushed out, and the streams overflowed. Can he give bread also? can he provide flesh for his people?

21 Therefore the LORD heard this, and ^b was wroth: so a fire was kindled against Jacob, and anger also came up against Israel;

22 Because ^c they believed not in God, and trusted not in his salvation:

23 Though he ^d had commanded the clouds from above, and opened the ^e doors of heaven, 24 ^f And had rained down manna upon them to eat, and had given them of the corn of heaven.

25 ^g Man did eat angels' food: he sent them meat to the full.

26 ^h He caused an east wind ^{*} to blow in the heaven: and by his power he brought in the south wind.

27 He rained flesh also upon them as dust, and [†] feathered fowls like as the sand of the sea:

28 And he let ⁱ it fall in the midst of their camp, round about their habitations.

29 ^j So they did eat, and were well filled: for he gave them their own desire.

30 ^k They were not estranged from their lust. But, while their meat was yet in their mouths,

31 The wrath of God came upon them, and slew the fattest of them, and [‡] smote down the ^{||} chosen men of Israel.

32 ^l For all this they sinned still, and believed not for his wondrous works.

33 ^m Therefore their days did he consume in vanity, and their years in trouble.

34 ⁿ When he slew them, then they sought him: and they returned, and inquired early after God.

35 And they remembered ^o that God was their rock, and the high God their Redeemer.

36 Nevertheless, ^p they did flatter him with their mouth, and they lied unto him with their tongues.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXXVII.—What days of trouble saints have to endure, from temptations, corruptions, afflictions, and desertions! But in distress we must flee to the compassionate bosom of our God, and pour out our complaints before him. And, if we would speed, we must be both importunate and unwearied in our application. If we but speak in groans, God can understand us, and will answer. But often, under strong temptations, saints feed their sorrows and reject the consolations which God suggests to them in his word: often they indulge the melancholy apprehension that he hath forsaken them and left them to eternal perdition. Terrible then is their case: and dis-honourable to God is this their distrust. But hopeful is the appearance when they are brought to condemn their own unbelief, and to cast themselves on his almighty power and mercy; and when they continue meditating on, and declaring, his former mighty works of providence or grace. This awakens themselves and others to honourable thoughts of his conduct, and to grateful praise. However deep and mysterious the dispensations of his providence, they are all holy and just. And, however awful, they are infinitely gracious, and issue in the deliverance of his chosen from their manifold bondage, and in their guidance, by Jesus their great Leader and Priest, to the Canaan above.

37 For ^atheir heart was not right with him, neither were they ^astedfast in his covenant.

38 But he, ^abeing full of compassion, forgave their iniquity, and destroyed them not: ^ayea, many a time turned he his anger away, and did not stir up all his wrath.

39 ^aFor he remembered that they were but flesh: a wind that passeth away and cometh not again.

40 ^aHow oft did they ^aprovoke him in the wilderness, and grieve him in the desert!

41 Yea, ^athey turned back and tempted God, and limited the Holy One of Israel.

42 They remembered not ^ahis hand, nor the day when he delivered them ^afrom the enemy.

43 ^aHow he had ^awrought his signs in Egypt, and his wonders in the field of Zoan:

44 ^aAnd had turned their rivers into blood; and their floods, that they could not drink.

45 ^aHe sent divers sorts of flies among them, which devoured them; and ^afrogs, which destroyed them.

46 ^aHe gave also their increase unto the caterpillar, and their labour unto the locust.

47 ^aHe ^adestroyed their vines with hail, and their sycamore trees with ^afrost.

48 ^aHe gave up their cattle also to the hail, and their flocks to ^ahot thunderbolts.

49 ^aHe cast upon them the fierceness of his anger, wrath, and indignation, and trouble, by sending evil angels among them.

50 ^aHe made a way to his anger; he spared not their soul from death, but gave ^atheir life over to the pestilence;

51 ^aAnd smote all the first-born in Egypt: the chief of their strength in the tabernacles of ^aHam:

52 ^aBut made his own people to go forth like sheep, and guided them in the wilderness like a flock.

53 And he led them on safely, so that they feared not: but the sea ^aoverwhelmed their enemies.

54 And he brought them ^ato the border of his sanctuary, even to this mountain, which his right hand had purchased.

55 ^aHe cast out the heathen also before them, and divided them an inheritance by line, and made the tribes of Israel to dwell in their tents.

56 ^aYet they tempted and provoked the most high God, and kept not his testimonies:

57 ^aBut turned back, and dealt unfaithfully like their fathers: they were turned aside ^alike a deceitful bow.

58 ^aFor they provoked him to anger with their high places, and moved him to jealousy with their graven images.

59 When God ^aheard this he ^awas wroth, and greatly abhorred Israel:

60 ^aSo that he forsook the tabernacle of Shiloh, the tent which he placed among men;

61 And delivered his ^astrength into captivity, and his glory into the enemy's hand.

62 ^aHe gave his people over also unto the sword; and was wroth with ^ahis inheritance.

63 The ^afire consumed their young men; and their maidens were not ^agiven to marriage.

64 ^aTheir priests fell by the sword; and their widows made no lamentation.

65 ^aThen the LORD awaked as one out of sleep, and like a mighty man that shouteth by reason of wine.

66 And he ^asmote his enemies in the hinder part: he put them to a perpetual reproach.

67 Moreover, ^ahe refused the tabernacle of Joseph, and chose not the tribe of Ephraim:

68 ^aBut chose the tribe of Judah, the mount Zion which he loved.

69 And ^ahe built his sanctuary like high palaces, like the earth which he hath ^aestablished for ever.

70 ^aHe chose David also his servant, and took him from the sheepfolds:

71 ^aFrom following the ^aewes great with young, he brought him ^ato feed Jacob his people, and Israel his inheritance.

72 ^aSo he fed them according to the integrity of his heart; and guided them by the skilfulness of his hands.

PSALM LXXIX.

This psalm relates to the havock made of the Jewish capital and nation by the Chaldeans and Syro-grecians, as typical of the afflictions of the gospel church. Observe (1) How deplorable the condition of these people of God was, when their enemies raged against their dwellings, persons, and characters, and their God himself long continued the tokens of his just displeasure; 1—5. (2) Their humble, but fervent, supplications for the just punishment of their heathen enemies; and for divine pity, pardon, and help, to themselves; 6—12. (3) The pleas with which they enforce their requests; viz. God's relation to them as their God and Shepherd; and the tendency of what they ask to promote the declarative glory of his name; 1, 6, 9, 10, 13.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXXVIII.—Important are the great things of God's law, and the matters of our eternal salvation; and they demand the most serious attention. With great care ought parents to instruct children in the knowledge of the great truths and works of God. Neglect of this issues in children's unbelief, hypocrisy, and lasting ruin. And, to avoid the bad effects of parents' guilt, children of wicked men ought to be doubly careful to avoid imitating them. How weak men are when God is their enemy; and how cowardly when their consciences are burdened with guilt! No miracles, however gracious and striking, can melt an ignorant and hardened heart, or induce it to gratitude. No favours will satisfy a discontented spirit, and restrain its malicious murmurings against God. With amazing patience and kindness God provides for his abusers amongst mankind! But, when he gratifies sinners in their requests, his gifts become their snare and curse: this world's abundance is abused to excess: reflection is banished: and men hurry headlong into ruin. They, who make a god of their belly, will find their end to be destruction: and they, who will not be bowed by mercies or corrections, must be broken by judgments. If sin be indulged, sorrow must follow. Nor shall the stoutest be able to resist the uplifted arm of an angry God. Troubles often force men to their professions, prayers, or tears; whose wickedness is quickly thereafter discovered.

The danger is scarcely blown over when all their convictions and promises are forgotten and contemned.—O the infinite compassion and patience of God towards his professing people! But, alas, his most singular favours and tremendous judgments are soon forgotten and despised!—The creatures of God, when armed with his wrath, in the most fearful manner cover his enemies with ruin. But abundant returns of thankfulness, love, and service, are due to him from those to whom he has been liberal of his favours. How ready are most to imitate their wicked progenitors, to the dishonour of their gracious God! But more fearfully criminal is the unfaithfulness of those who profess to serve him; it draws tremendous destruction upon the transgressors. If we forsake God he will forsake us; and no tabernacle, no formalities in religion, can avail us when he is departed.—But, however sharply he corrects his own people, he hath still mercy in store for them. They, who triumph over them a little, shall quickly have their glory turned to shame: and he will maintain a church to himself for ever. If, to punish one nation, he remove their gospel candlestick, he will send the light of his truth to another, and often the most unlikely. And not David, but Jesus Christ, shall for ever feed God's flock of ransomed men, according to the integrity of his heart and good skill of his hands.

A psalm *of Asaph.

O GOD, 'the heathen are come into b'thine inheritance; 'thy holy temple have they defiled; they have laid Jerusalem on heaps.

2 'The dead bodies of thy servants have they given to be meat unto the fowls of the heaven, the flesh of thy saints unto the beasts of the earth.

3 Their blood have they shed like water round about Jerusalem; and there was none to bury them.

4 'We are become a reproach to our neighbours, a scorn and derision to them that are round about us.

5 'How long, LORD? wilt thou be angry for ever? shall thy jealousy burn like fire?

6 'Pour out thy wrath upon the heathen that have not known thee, and upon the kingdoms that have not called upon thy name.

7 'For they have devoured Jacob, and laid waste his dwelling place.

8 'O remember not against us †former iniquities: 'let thy tender mercies speedily prevent us: for we are brought very low.

9 'Help us, O God of our salvation, for the glory of thy name: and deliver us, and purge away our sins, for thy name's sake.

10 'Wherefore should the heathen say,
Where is their God? 'let him be known among the heathen in our sight by the †revenging of the blood of thy servants which is shed.

11 'Let the sighing of the prisoner come before thee; 'according to the greatness of thy ||power, *preserve thou those that are appointed to die;

12 'And render unto our neighbours seven-fold into their bosom 'their reproach, wherewith they have reproached thee, O LORD.

13 'So we thy people, and sheep of thy pasture, will give thee thanks for ever: we will 'shew forth thy praise †to all generations.

PSALM LXXX.

This psalm relates to the distressed condition of the Hebrew church and nation, perhaps during the Philistine, Syrian, Assyrian, or Chaldean, invasions; [2 Kings xii. xiii. xv. xvii. xviii. xix. xxiv. xxv.] Here are (1) Earnest supplications for God's special presence and favour; 1—3, 7, 19. (2) Mournful complaints of the lasting appearances of God's anger; of the overflowings of their grief; of abuse and derision by their neighbours; and of the unkinging of their constitution, which God himself had fixed when he brought them out of Egypt; 4—13. (3) Further supplications that God would consider and pity his vineyard their church and nation; assist their king his vine-dresser; and convert them to, and quicken them in, his service; 14—19.

To the chief musician upon 'Shoshannim-eduth, A psalm *of Asaph.
GIVE 'ear, O 'Shepherd of Israel, thou that 'ledest Joseph like a flock; thou that 'dwest between the cherubims, 'shine forth.

2 'Before Ephraim, and Benjamin, and Manasseh, stir up thy strength, and †come and save us.

3 'Turn us again, O God, and 'cause thy face to shine; and we shall be saved.

4 O LORD God of hosts, how long 'wilt thou be angry against the prayer of thy people?

5 Thou feedest them with 'the bread of tears; and givest them tears to drink in great measure.

6 'Thou makest us a strife unto our neighbours: and our enemies laugh among themselves.

7 'Turn us again, O God of hosts, and 'cause thy face to shine; and we shall be saved.

8 Thou hast brought a 'vine out of Egypt: 'thou hast cast out the heathen, and planted it.

9 Thou 'preparedst room before it, and didst cause it to take deep root, and it filled the land.

10 'The hills were covered with the shadow of it, and the boughs thereof were like the †goodly cedars.

11 'She sent out her boughs unto the sea, and her branches unto the river.

12 Why hast thou then 'broken down her hedges, so that all they which pass by the way do pluck her?

13 'The boar out of the wood doth waste it, and the wild beast of the field doth devour it.

14 'Return, we beseech thee, O God of hosts: look down from heaven, and behold, and visit this vine;

15 And the 'vineyard which thy right hand hath planted, and the branch that thou madest strong for thyself.

16 'It is burned with fire, it is cut down: they perish at the rebuke of thy countenance.

17 Let thy hand be upon the 'man of thy right hand, upon the son of man whom thou madest strong for thyself.

18 So 'will not we go back from thee:
'quicken us, and we will call upon thy name.

19 'Turn us again, O LORD God of hosts; 'cause thy face to shine; and we shall be saved.

PSALM LXXXI.

This psalm was probably composed for the feast of trumpets, on the first day of the 7th month; [Lev. xxiii. 24.] Here are (1) Solemn exhortations to praise God for what he is to his people, and for what he has done for them; 1—7. (2) Instructions concerning God's new covenant grant of himself and his benefits to men; their ungrateful refusal of them; and the misery they incur, and happiness they lose thereby; 8—16.

God, and repeated manifestations of his favour. And if we are turned to God by his grace, we cannot fail to inherit eternal glory. But, through seeming rejection of prayers, and angry frowns from God, and through tears, griefs, and reproaches, must we sometimes go thither. With what kind care did God settle the Israelites in Canaan, and make them flourish there! With how much more did he gather, found, and increase, his gospel church! But, alas, the misery and ruin that sin draws down upon the best constituted churches and nations! Enemies, furious as wild beasts, waste them when God withdraws his protection. Yet the design hereof is not his people's ruin; but to excite their prayers, quicken their repentance, and magnify the wonders of his power and grace in their deliverance. It is impossible for his church to be ruined when her help is laid on her Almighty Redeemer, the man of God's right hand. God's regard to him is the source of all our salvation, quickening, and perseverance in grace. Through him strengthening us, we can do all things. No wonder then that prayer is the daily employment of such as are spiritually alive; and that a sense of God's favour is more earnestly desired than the removal of any affliction.

moon, in the time appointed, on our solemn feast day.

4 For ^gthis was a statute for Israel, and a law of the God of Jacob.

5 This he ordained in ^hJoseph for a testimony, when he went out ⁱthrough the land of Egypt: where ^jI heard a language that I understood not.

6 ^kI removed his shoulder from the burden: his hands ^l†were delivered from the ^m†pots.

7 ⁿThou calledst in trouble, and I delivered thee; I answered thee in the ^osecret place of thunder: ^p"I proved thee

10 ^uI am the LORD thy God which brought thee out of the land of Egypt: ^vopen thy mouth wide, and I will fill it.

11 ^wBut my people would not hearken to my voice; and Israel would none of me.

12 ^xSo I gave them up ^y*unto their own

PSALM LXXXII.

This psalm was probably penned for the direction and warning of the Jewish courts of judicature. It represents (1) The dignity of magistrates, and their dependance on God as their sovereign governor and judge; 1, 6. (2) Their duty; 3, 4. (3) Their too frequent degeneracy and mischievous corruption, and the just punishment thereof; 2, 5, 7. (4) The saints request for the establishment of God's kingdom in the world; 8.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXXXI.—God's saving relations are a delightful foundation of our warmest praise. Deliverances from God, as well as his authoritative command, oblige us to a punctual observance of his ordinances of worship. And nothing can do it more effectually than our eternal redemption through Christ. How ready is God to help and to save those who call upon him in trouble! And all our obedience is delightfully founded on his gospel grant of himself to us as our God. His service must then be our highest interest as well as duty. Past obligations are sufficient to engage our hearts, even though we had no future promises in view. And, when God grants himself and his fullness, our desires or prayers for enjoyment can never be too much enlarged. They only, who have him for their portion, have all that heart can wish. But how terrible is the punishment of a wilful refusal of his gracious offers! What loss of victory over enemies, of perpetuated enjoyments, and of delightful provision! Alas! what enemies are sinners to their own souls! And they, who resist God's word and Spirit, have only their own wilfulness to blame when their

PSALM LXXXIII.

This psalm relates to some combination of the heathens around against the Hebrews, either in the days of David; [2 Sam. viii. or x.] or of Jehoshaphat; [2 Chron. xx.] And contains (1) A solemn remonstrance to God concerning their malicious designs against his church and honour; 1—8. (2) Fervent supplications to God, that he would defeat these attempts, protect and preserve his church, humble his enemies, and glorify himself in the world; 9—18.

A song or psalm ^{*}of Asaph.

KEEP ^anot thou silence, O God: hold not thy peace, and be not still, O
God.

2 For, ^blo, thine enemies make a tumult: and they that hate thee have lifted up the head.

3 ^cThey have taken crafty counsel against thy people, and consulted against thy ^dhidden ones.

4 They have said, ^eCome, and let us cut them off from being a nation; that the name of Israel may be no more in remembrance.

5 ^fFor they have consulted together with one †consent: they are confederate against thee:

6 ^gThe tabernacles of Edom, and the Ishmaelites; of Moab, and the Hagarenes;

7 ^hGebal, and Ammon, and Amalek;
the Philistines with the inhabitants of Tyre:

8 ⁱAssur also is joined with them:
^kthey have holpen the children of Lot.
Selah.

9 Do unto them as unto the ^lMidianites; as to ^mSisera, as to Jabin, at the brook of Kison:

10 Who perished at En-dor: they became ⁿas dung for the earth.

11 Make their nobles like ^oOreb, and destruction comes. Their perishing is not through want of compassion in God, but through the hardness and impenitence of their own hearts.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXXXII.—Dignified is the office of magistrates, as the deputies of God. And with solemn awe and strict equity ought they to fix their decisions, as in God's presence, and as accountable to him. Yet how commonly do they indulge themselves in injustice and partiality! For want of substance to procure right to themselves, the poor are ordinarily trampled on: but God is their guardian; and, let magistrates do their worst, he will at last redress the grievances of his poor ones. The high station and mighty influence of magistrates shall not long protect them from death; nor, if wicked, from damnation. If our rulers then be wicked, let us give ourselves to prayer, that God may rectify matters, and subdue the world to the righteous government of his Son.

18 ¹That men may know that thou whose name alone is JEHOVAH, art the Most High over all the earth.

PSALM LXXXIV.

This psalm is much like the 27th, 42d, 43d, and 63d; and might be composed on the same occasion with the former, when David was banished from Jerusalem by Absalom his son; [2 Sam. xv. xvi.] We have here (1) David's ardent affection towards the public ordinances of God, and sense of their happiness who enjoyed them; 1-7, 10. (2) His heart-burning desire to the God of ordinances; 8, 9. (3) His assured faith of God's kindness, and persuasion of the happiness of such as trust in him; 11, 12.

2 ¹My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth, for the courts of the LORD: ¹my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God.
3 ¹Yea, the sparrow hath found an house, and the swallow a nest for herself, where she may lay her young, even thine altars, O LORD of hosts, my King and my God.
4 ¹Blessed are they that dwell in thy house: they will be still praising thee, Selah.
5 Blessed is the man ¹whose strength is in thee; ¹in whose heart are the ways of them.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXXXIII.—To quicken his people's importunity in prayer, the Lord sometimes appears for a time to disregard their distress. Whate'er pretences men make for their opposition to God's people, the real cause is their enmity against God himself, whose holiness they cannot endure, and whose image they cannot but hate. But, while saints are hid with Christ in God, no enemy can really hurt them. Wicked men, though diversified by nations, humours, or interests, strongly unite in opposing the cause of God and truth. Glad would they be if neither preacher nor professor of the true religion were left upon earth. But, though craft be employed to seduce, threatenings to intimidate, and fury to extirpate, the foundation of God standeth sure. God knoweth them that are his, and they shall never be moved. At the worst, they have their all-sufficient Lord to flee to, who can check the madness of the devourers. And past interpositions of God in favour of his people should encourage us to plead and hope for the like mercy. All opposition to God and his church is but rushing headlong into certain ruin. Even in this life, sinners' terrors of mind often make their life a burden, and are a presage of more dreadful misery in hell for ever. Men must know at last that the Lord omnipotent reigneth; and the execution of deserved vengeance on the ungodly will tend to his everlasting glory. Meanwhile we ought to long for the conviction and conversion of our bitterest enemies of mankind rather than their destruction.

9 Behold, O God ¹our shield, and look upon the face of ¹thine anointed.
10 ¹For a day in thy courts is better than a thousand: ¹I had rather be a door-keeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness.
11 For the LORD God is ¹a sun and ¹shield: the ¹LORD will give grace and glory: no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly.
12 O LORD of hosts, ¹blessed is the man that trusteth in thee.

PSALM LXXXV.

This psalm relates to some remarkable deliverance of the Jewish nation; but whether that effected by the advancement of David to the throne, or that from the Assyrian invasion, [2 Kings xix.] or from the Chaldean captivity, [Ezra i.] is uncertain. It contains (1) Thankful acknowledgments of divine favours received; 1-3. (2) Supplications that further favours and deliverances may be speedily bestowed; 4-7. (3) Firm expectations of a gracious answer in the coming, mediation, and blessings of the Messiah; 8-13.

To the chief musician, A psalm ¹for the sons of Korah.

LORD, ¹thou hast been ¹favourable unto thy land: ¹thou hast brought back the captivity of Jacob.
2 ¹Thou hast forgiven the iniquity of thy people; thou hast covered all their sin. Selah.
3 ¹Thou hast taken away all thy wrath: [†]thou hast turned thyself from the fierceness of thine anger.
4 ¹Turn us, O God of our salvation, and cause thine anger toward us to cease.
5 ¹Wilt thou be angry with us for ever? wilt thou draw out thine anger to all generations?
6 ¹Wilt thou not revive us again, that thy people may rejoice in thee?
7 ¹Shew us thy mercy, O LORD, and grant us thy salvation.
8 ¹I will hear what God the LORD will speak: ¹for he will speak peace unto his people, and to his saints: but ¹let them not turn again to folly.
9 ¹Surely his salvation is nigh them that fear him; that ¹glory may dwell in our land.
10 ¹Mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other.
11 ¹Truth shall spring out of the earth; and righteousness shall look down from heaven.
12 ¹Yea, the LORD shall give that which is good; and our land shall yield her increase.
13 ¹Righteousness shall go before him; and shall set us in the way of his steps.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXXXIV.—What inexpressible beauty gracious souls see in holiness and in holy work! Fellowship with God in Christ, in his ordinances, is the delight, the desire, of their soul. The meanest abode, with his presence and ordinances, is preferred to a palace without them. Not only faithful ministers, who attend to their work, but all who study a life of close fellowship with God, and faithful service of him, increase their joy in the Lord, and their strength for his work. If our heart be once engaged, we shall walk with pleasure in God's ways, and in attending his solemn ordinances. However troublesome the way to heaven be, not one of those who truly set out ever faint or miscarry. And O the inexpressible glories they there enjoy, in the immediate vision and presence of God! If he be our own and our fathers' God, we shall never seek him in vain. If he be our Shield, we shall be safe from fear of evil. If our confidence towards him be founded solely on the merit and intercession of Jesus his Anointed, he cannot but behold us in mercy and love. Infinitely preferable is fellowship with God in his ordinances to all the pleasures of sin or sense that can be enjoyed on earth; and happy are those who have God ALL IN ALL to them, bestowing all on them; and who, in all cases, depend for ALL they need only upon him.

PSALM LXXXVI.

This psalm contains (1) David's fervent supplications, that God would hear his prayers; 1, 6, 7: mercifully preserve and save him; 2, 3, 16: and afford him joy, strength, and honour; 4, 11, 17. (2) His pleas, with which he enforces his prayers, drawn from the goodness of God; 5, 13, 15: his own relation to and trust in God; 2, 4, 16: his former experience of God's kindness; 17: and from the malice of his enemies; 14. (3) His ascription of praise to God, as matchless in his nature and work; as the sole object of worship; and as great and infinitely gracious; 8—10, 12, 13.

* A prayer of David.

BOW down thine ear, O LORD, hear me; for I am poor and needy.

2 Preserve my soul; for I am holy. O thou my God, save thy servant that trusteth in thee.

3 Be merciful unto me, O LORD; for I cry unto thee daily.

4 Rejoice the soul of thy servant; for unto thee, O LORD, do I lift up my soul.

5 For thou, LORD, art good, and ready to forgive; and plenteous in mercy unto all them that call upon thee.

6 Give ear, O LORD, unto my prayer; and attend to the voice of my supplications.

7 In the day of my trouble I will call upon thee; for thou wilt answer me.

8 Among the gods there is none like unto thee, O LORD; neither are there any works like unto thy works.

9 All nations whom thou hast made shall come and worship before thee, O LORD; and shall glorify thy name.

10 For thou art great, and dost wondrous things: thou art God alone.

11 Teach me thy way, O LORD; I will walk in thy truth: unite my heart to fear thy name.

12 I will praise thee, O LORD my God, with all my heart; and I will glorify thy name for evermore.

13 For great is thy mercy toward me: and thou hast delivered my soul from the lowest hell.

14 O God, the proud are risen against me, and the assemblies of violent men have sought after my soul; and have not set thee before them.

15 But thou, O LORD, art a God full of compassion, and gracious, long-suffering, and plenteous in mercy and truth.

16 O turn unto me, and have mercy upon me: give thy strength unto thy servant, and save the son of thine handmaid.

17 Shew me a token for good; that they which hate me may see it, and be ashamed; because thou, LORD, hast holpen me and comforted me.

PSALM LXXXVII.

This psalm is an encomium upon Mount Zion, as typical of the gospel church. (1) For the sake of the temple, Mount Zion is preferred to every other place in Canaan; as more honoured by God, and delighted in by him; 1—3. (2) In respect of better inhabitants, greater stability, and more important joys and blessings, the church is preferred to all other nations; 4—7.

A psalm or song *for the sons of Korah.

HIS foundation is in the holy mountains.

2 The LORD loveth the gates of Zion more than all the dwellings of Jacob.

3 Glorious things are spoken of thee, O city of God. Selah.

4 I will make mention of Rahab and Babylon to them that know me: behold Philistia, and Tyre, with Ethiopia; this man was born there.

5 And of Zion it shall be said, This and that man was born in her: and the Highest himself shall establish her.

6 The LORD shall count, when he writeth up the people, that this man was born there. Selah.

7 As well the singers as the players on instruments shall be there: all my springs are in thee.

PSALM LXXXVIII.

In this doleful psalm, after a very short declaration of his faith, we have (1) Heman's bitter wailing over his distressed case, that his troubles were great; his body at the point of death; his soul filled with grief; his God hiding and angry; his mind distressed with terrors; and his friends unkind; 3—9, 14—18. (2) His bitter groans to, and expostulations with, God, importing that he had long cried for mercy, and that in death nothing could be done for him; 1, 2, 9—14.

A song or psalm *for the sons of Korah, to the chief musician upon Mahalath Leanoth, † Maschil of Heman the Ezrahite.

O LORD God of my salvation, I have cried day and night before thee:

2 Let my prayer come before thee: incline thine ear unto my cry;

3 For my soul is full of troubles, and my life draweth nigh unto the grave.

4 I am counted with them that go down into the pit: I am as a man that hath no strength:

5 Free among the dead, like the slain that lie in the grave, whom thou rememberest no more: and they are cut off from thy hand.

6 Thou hast laid me in the lowest pit, in darkness, in the deeps;

7 Thy wrath lieth hard upon me, and thou hast afflicted me with all thy waves. Selah.

and his law and example, that we may be led into the paths of everlasting peace.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXXXVI.—While I here behold Jesus as the holy, but impoverished, servant of his Father, imploring his favours, and triumphing in his praise, let me in every case pour forth importunate prayers; place all my confidence in God; lodge all my complaints and requests with him; and ascribe to him the glory of his own perfections, and of all my own and his people's deliverances.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXXXVII.—Behold how firmly and publicly our gospel church is founded upon Jesus Christ the Rock of ages! And how JEHOVAH delights in fellowship with his people in the public and private ordinances of his grace. Glorious things are spoken of her foundation, her ordinances, her members, her properties, her fulness. And, under the influence of almighty grace, the heathen nations on every side crowd into her. Behold also the exact and kind care which God takes of every true member! And great spiritual joy and rejoicing, and fresh springs of salvation, are found in her by the saints.

the grateful memory of God's past favours. His pardons of sins, through Jesus' blood are all free, full, and everlasting; and, when guilt is removed, wrath ceases of course. Though our unfaithfulness may have plunged us into distress, God is rich in mercy, and ready to turn us to himself. But no salvation can be hoped for while we continue indulging our sins. And, unless he save us freely, without respect to our deserts, we are undone for ever. Impenitent sinners must undergo eternal wrath; but the people of God are only corrected for a time. Having experienced the power of his quickening and restoring grace, they rejoice in God their Saviour, and speak to his glory, of the wonders of his grace. And, having expected and obtained an answer to their prayers, the peace which God speaks in his promise withdraws their heart from sinning. But how sure was the promise, near the fulfilment, and great the glory, of Jesus' incarnation and office! Herein the mercy, faithfulness, and equity, of God appear harmoniously and brightly displayed. While Jesus, the truth, grows upward from earth, his righteous Father from heaven beholds him with pleasure. While the gospel, and its influences, take place among men, JEHOVAH manifests his righteousness in pardoning and blessing us with all spiritual blessings in Christ; in making us to abound in fruits of righteousness, to the praise of his glory; and in directing us to Jesus,

PSALM LXXXIX.

This psalm was, perhaps, composed on the occasion of Absalom's rebellion, [2 Sam. xv.] or of the revolt of the ten tribes from their subjection to the family of David, [1 Kings xii.] or it relates to the Chaldean oppression and captivity, [2 Kings xxiv. xxv.] In the first and joyful part we have (1) The foundation of all comfort, happiness, honour, and stability, laid in the mercy of God and his covenant with David; emblematical of that made with Jesus Christ for the redemption of mankind; 1—4. (2) A celebration of the God of the covenant, in his faithfulness, glory, greatness, mercy, and equity, and in his works; 5—14. And of the glorious dignity, happiness, and safety of the covenant people; 15—18. (3) A collection of covenant promises, securing proper qualifications, assistance and glory, to the Head of the covenant; and indefeasible blessings to his covenant seed, notwithstanding their manifold sins and chastisements; 19—37. In the second and mournful part we have, (4) Grievous lamentations over the dishonour, distress, and danger, of David's family; 38—45. (5) Expostulations with God concerning the same; drawn from the continuance of trouble; the shortness of human life, and certainty of death; the withdrawal of former kindness promised in the covenant; and the insolent reproaches of enemies; 46—51. (6) A triumphant conclusion of praise to God; 52.

* Maschil of ^aEthan the Ezrahite.

I WILL sing of the mercies of the LORD for ever: with my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness to all generations.

2 For I have said, Mercy shall be built up for ever; thy faithfulness shalt thou establish in the very heavens.

3 I have made a covenant with my chosen; I have sworn unto David my servant:

4 Thy seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne to all generations. Selah.

5 And the heavens shall praise thy wonders, O LORD: thy faithfulness also in the congregation of the saints.

6 For who in the heaven can be compared unto the LORD? who among the sons of the mighty can be likened unto the LORD?

7 God is greatly to be feared in the assembly of the saints, and to be had in reverence of all them that are about him.

8 O LORD God of hosts, who is a strong LORD like unto thee? or to thy faithfulness round about thee?

9 Thou rulest the raging of the sea: when the waves thereof arise, thou stillest them.

10 Thou hast broken Rahab in pieces, as one that is slain; thou hast scattered thine enemies with thy strong arm.

11 The heavens are thine, the earth also is thine: as for the world and the fulness thereof, thou hast founded them.

12 The north and the south, thou hast created them: Tabor and Hermon shall rejoice in thy name.

13 Thou hast a mighty arm: strong is thy hand, and high is thy right hand.

14 Justice and judgment are the habitation of thy throne: mercy and truth shall go before thy face.

15 Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound: they shall walk, O LORD, in the light of thy countenance.

16 In thy name shall they rejoice all the day: and in thy righteousness shall they be exalted.

17 For thou art the glory of their strength: and in thy favour our horn shall be exalted.

18 For the LORD is our defence; and the Holy One of Israel is our king.

19 Then thou spakest in vision to thy Holy One, and saidst, I have laid help upon one that is mighty; I have exalted one chosen out of the people.

20 I have found David my servant; with my holy oil have I anointed him:

21 With whom my hand shall be established: mine arm also shall strengthen him.

22 The enemy shall not exact upon him; nor the son of wickedness afflict him.

23 And I will beat down his foes before his face, and plague them that hate him.

24 But my faithfulness and my mercy shall be with him: and in my name shall his horn be exalted.

25 I will set his hand also in the sea, and his right hand in the rivers.

26 He shall cry unto me, Thou art my father, my God, and the rock of my salvation.

27 Also I will make him my first-born, higher than the kings of the earth.

28 My mercy will I keep for him for

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXXXVIII.—How inexpressibly grievous are the afflictions of some of God's principal favourites! nay, of his Son! Their sorrows are enlarged. They are reduced to the very brink of despair; loaded with a sense of divine wrath; deserted by friends; and while their case is apparently remediless, their way lies along the brink of Hell. If I be cast into this depth, let me, though with a trembling heart, still claim the Lord as my God, my Saviour. Let me, with fervent cries and humble expostulations, pour out my complaints into his bosom. The more my afflictions press me, let my supplications be the more pressing and persevering. And, if I wish to live longer on earth, let my great end be to serve God's interests and to shew forth his praise.

PSALM XC.

This psalm was composed by Moses, the man of God, some time after God had sentenced the Hebrews to wandering and death in the wilderness; [Num. xiv.] In it (1) Moses comforts himself and his people with the eternal and unchangeable duration of God himself, and their interest in him; 1, 2. (2) He humbles himself, and his people with the consideration of human frailty; 3—6. (3) He submits himself and his people to the righteous sentence of God passed upon them; 7—11. (4) By prayer, he commits himself and his people to their gracious and merciful God; and requests the sanctified use of their awful chastisements, the averting of divine wrath, the bestowal of true comforts and joys, the returns of his favour, and the progress of his work of mercy among their children; 12—17.

*A prayer of Moses the ^aman of God.

LORD, thou hast been our ^bdwell-ling place †in all generations.

2 'Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, ^aeven from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God.

3 'Thou turnest man to destruction; and sayest, Return, ye children of men.

4 'For a thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday †when it is past, and as a watch in the night.

5 'Thou carriest them away as with a flood; ^bthey are as a sleep: in the morning they are 'like grass which ||groweth up.

6 ^kIn the morning it flourisheth, and groweth up; and in the evening it is cut down, and withereth.

7 'For we are consumed by thine anger, and by thy wrath are we troubled.

8 'Thou hast set our iniquities before thee, our secret sins in the light of thy countenance.

9 For all our days are *passed away 'in thy wrath: we spend our years 'as a tale that is told.

10 †The days of our years are threescore years and ten; and, if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, ^pyet is their strength labour and sorrow, for 'it is soon cut off, and we fly away.

11 'Who knoweth the power of thine anger? even according to thy fear, so is thy wrath.

12 'So teach us to number our days, that we may 'apply our hearts unto wisdom.

13 'Return, O LORD, how long? and let it repent thee concerning thy servants.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM LXXXIX.—Glorious is that covenant of grace which JEHOVAH has made with Jesus Christ, as the Head and Representative of an elect world. The mercy and faithfulness of God are therein for ever clearly and comfortably manifested; and for ever adored, both in heaven and earth. How infinite are the greatness and majesty of our covenant God! How unbounded his strength! No unruly elements in nature, nor outrageous nations of men, can control it. His dominion extends to all the parts and ends of the earth; and in a powerful, steady, judicious, righteous, and merciful manner, he conducts his whole providential work; but chiefly that of redemption through the blood of his Son. Happy are they who experimentally know the joyful sound of the gospel, proclaiming Jesus' victories over sin, Satan, the world, death, and hell; and pardon, peace, liberty, and eternal happiness, through his blood, to sinful men. They walk in the light of JEHOVAH's favour, direction, and joys; And gloriously are they justified, saved, strengthened, and honoured, in Christ!—In these declarations of God to Samuel, concerning David, let me contemplate how JEHOVAH found out and laid our help, our salvation, upon Jesus Christ. He it was that supported, strengthened, attended, honoured, and owned, him. He it is that forms, favours, corrects, but establishes, his chosen seed. Behold too the sufferings of Jesus and his church, from Satan, from Jews, from Heathens, from Antichristians: and how terrible the Almighty's displeasure! To be under it for ever constitutes hell. How short, how uncertain, are our days on earth! If through Jesus, as our Righteousness and quickening Head, we do not live to God's glory here, and with God in glory hereafter, our life is worse than in vain. But painful is it for exercised souls to want the sense of God's love, even though it be secured in the covenant promise. And grievous are the virulent reproaches of Christ, his Father, and his people, and hard to be borne by a tender saint.

17 *And let the beauty of the LORD our God be upon us: and *establish thou the work of our hands upon us; yea, the work of our hands *establish thou it.

PSALM XCI.

This psalm was perhaps penned on the occasion of the pestilence, inflicted for numbering the people; [2 Sam. xxiv.] In it, while the psalmist by faith takes God for his own refuge and keeper; 2, 9: he for the encouragement of others to do the same, represents (1) The dignity, extent, and continuance, of their happiness and safety, who have God for their residence; 1—4. (2) Their preservation from all malice and baleful influence of the powers of darkness, while multitudes are ruined thereby; 5—9. (3) Their enjoyment of angels for their guard; and their triumph over devils and other opposers; 10—12. (4) Their possession of special favour from, and delightful intimacy with, God here and hereafter; 13—16.

HE *that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High shall *abide under the shadow of the Almighty.

2 I will say of the LORD, *He is my refuge and my fortress: *my God; in him will I trust.

3 *Surely he shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler, and from the noisome pestilence.

4 *He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust: his truth shall be thy shield and buckler.

5 *Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night; nor for the arrow that flieth by day;

6 Nor for the pestilence that walketh in darkness; nor for the destruction that wasteth at noon-day.

7 A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand; but it shall not come nigh thee.

8 *Only with thine eyes shalt thou behold, and see the reward of the wicked.

9 Because *thou hast made the LORD, who is my refuge, even the Most High, thy habitation;

10 *There shall no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling.

11 *For he shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways.

12 *They shall bear thee up in their hands, lest thou dash thy foot against a stone.

13 Thou shalt tread upon the lion and *adder: the young lion and the dragon shalt thou trample under feet.

14 *Because he hath set his love upon me, therefore will I deliver him: *I will set him on high, because he hath known my name.

15 *He shall call upon me, and I will answer him: *I will be with him in trouble; I will deliver him, and honour him.

16 *With † long life will I satisfy him, and *shew him my salvation.

PSALM XCII.

In this psalm or song for the sabbath-day, (1) Praise, the business of the sabbath, is earnestly recommended; 1—3. (2) God's works, which are the reason of the sabbath, and ground of praise, are celebrated in their greatness and unsearchableness; 4—6. (3) The ruin of sinners and the felicity of saints are beautifully contrasted. Sinners shall perish; but God, the portion and life of saints, shall endure for ever. Sinners, notwithstanding their temporary flourishing, shall be cut off and destroyed: saints shall be exalted and comforted. Sinners shall be confounded and ruined: but saints, through their union to, and fellowship with, Christ, shall continue to prosper and flourish, to the manifestation of God's faithfulness and equity; 7—15.

A psalm or song for the sabbath-day. IT *is a good thing to give thanks unto the LORD, and to sing praises unto thy name, O Most High:

2 *To shew forth thy loving-kindness in the morning, and thy faithfulness *every night;

3 *Upon an instrument of ten strings, and upon the psaltery; † upon the harp with *a solemn sound.

4 For thou, LORD, hast made me glad through thy work: I will triumph in the works of thy hands.

5 O LORD, how great are thy works! and thy thoughts are very deep.

6 *A brutish man knoweth not; neither doth a fool understand *this.

7 *When the wicked spring as the grass, and when all the workers of iniquity do flourish; it is that they shall be *destroyed for ever:

8 But thou, LORD, art *most high for evermore.

9 For, lo, thine enemies, O LORD, for, lo, thine enemies shall perish; all the workers of iniquity shall be scattered.

10 *But my horn shalt thou exalt like the horn of an unicorn: *I shall be anointed with fresh oil.

11 *Mine eye also shall see my desire on mine enemies, and mine ears shall hear my desire of the wicked that rise up against me.

12 *The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree: he shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon.

13 Those that *be planted in the house of the LORD shall flourish in the courts of our God.

that he may herein be glorified, not only in them, but also in their posterity after them.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XCI.—While I here contemplate Jesus Christ as the Father's darling, protected, guarded, attended, heard in his prayers, honoured, and crowned with life and glory everlasting, let me with wonder behold the happiness of all the saints, who make God their refuge and delightful habitation; who know his name, set their love on him, and call on him. Secured against every disappointment and danger, distinguished in the providence of God, guarded by angels, delivered from, and victorious over, the devil, that fowler, dragon, and lion of hell, JEHOVAH attends them in their troubles, hears their prayers, and gives them answers of peace. He exalts them on Christ their Rock, and makes them to sit with him on his throne; honours them with the relations of children, kings, and priests, unto God, and decks them with imputed righteousness and imparted grace. And, after preserving them in life according to their desire, he bestows upon them his unutterable blessedness above. May these things in Christ be the desire of my heart!

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XC.—Happy are they who, amidst a transitory and perishing world, have the eternal God for their ALL IN ALL. Sovereign is his dominion over mankind, and unsearchable his duration. But weak and short-lived are men. And it is madness to seek satisfaction and happiness in things so fleeting and unsubstantial. With what armies of sorrow hath sin invaded and overspread our earth: and how exactly every crime is observed by God, in order to correct or punish on account of it! But it is unavailing to live, or live long, unless we live to and in Christ. Yea, intolerable is the wrath which God has reserved for those who die in their sins. Every day, therefore, ought to be so numbered, as to flee from them to Jesus Christ our refuge. The great business of life is to make ready for death. To ponder aright what is to become of us in eternity is wisdom indeed, and deserves the most serious application. Gracious souls cannot without sorrow abide the sense of God's displeasure. And they, who have truly tasted the bitterness of sin, cannot rest till the Lord return in pardoning mercy, speak peace to their conscience, and enable them to rejoice in himself. And such as are faithful to Christ will be greatly concerned that he may work all in them, do all for them, give all to them; and 15 To shew "that the LORD is upright: he is my rock, and there is no unrighteousness in him.

PSALM XCIII.

This psalm is a triumphant celebration of the government of JEHOVAH, and of Jesus our Redeemer, in (1) The awfulness, strength, stability, and duration, of it; 1, 2. (2) In his triumphant victories over all opposition; 3, 4. (3) In the faithfulness and certainty of his words, and the holiness of his court; 5.

THE LORD reigneth, he is clothed with majesty; the LORD is clothed with strength, wherewith he hath girded himself: the world also is established, that it cannot be moved.

2 "Thy throne is established *of old: 'thou art from everlasting.

3 "The floods have lifted up, O LORD, the floods have lifted up their voice; the floods lift up their waves.

4 "The LORD on high is mightier than the noise of many waters, yea, than the mighty waves of the sea.

5 "Thy testimonies are very sure: holiness becometh thine house, O LORD, †for ever.

PSALM XCIV.

This is a psalm for the afflicted people of God; in which, (1) God's just vengeance is implored upon their haughty, active, cruel, and atheistical, oppressors, whose folly is exposed from the consideration of God's works of creation, providence, and grace; 1—11. (2) His gracious comforts are presented to the persecuted saints, viz. that he will bless them in and by their afflictions, and give them rest after them, while their enemies are ruined; that God will not cast them off when cast down, but will, in his due time, reduce things to their right course:—to verify which, the psalmist produces part of his own experience; 12—24.

O LORD God, to whom vengeance belongeth; O God, to whom vengeance belongeth; shew thyself.

2 "Lift up thyself, 'thou Judge of the earth: "render a reward to the proud.

3 LORD, 'how long shall the wicked, how long shall the wicked triumph?

4 How long shall they "utter and speak hard things, and all the workers of iniquity boast themselves?

5 "They break in pieces thy people, O LORD, and afflict thine heritage.

6 They slay the widow and the stranger, and murder the fatherless.

7 "Yet they say, the LORD shall not see, neither shall the God of Jacob regard it.

8 "Understand, ye brutish among the people, and ye fools, when will ye be wise?

9 "He that planted the ear, shall he not hear? he that formed the eye, shall he not see?

10 He that "chastiseth the heathen, shall not he correct? he that "teacheth man knowledge, shall not he know?

11 "The LORD knoweth the thoughts of man, that they are vanity.

12 "Blessed is the man whom thou chastenest, O LORD, and teachest him out of thy law;

13 "That thou mayest give him rest from the days of adversity, until the pit be digged for the wicked.

14 "For the LORD will not cast off his people, neither will he forsake his inheritance.

15 "But judgment shall return unto righteousness: and all the upright in heart 'shall follow it.

16 "Who will rise up for me against the evil doers? or who will stand up for me against the workers of iniquity?

17 "Unless the LORD had been my help, my soul had almost dwelt in silence.

18 When I said, "My foot slippeth; thy mercy, O LORD, held me up.

19 "In the multitude of my thoughts within me thy comforts delight my soul.

20 "Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee, which 'frameth mischief by a law?

21 "They gather themselves together against the soul of the righteous, and condemn the innocent blood.

22 "But the LORD is my defence; and my God is the rock of my refuge.

23 "And he shall bring upon them their own iniquity, and shall cut them off in their own wickedness; yea, the LORD our God shall cut them off.

PSALM XCV.

This psalm contains (1) Solemn calls to celebrate the praises of Jesus Christ and his Father, on account of what he is, what he has done, and what he is to us, and we to him; 1—7. (2) Alarming warnings to hear his voice, and not to harden our hearts, as the Israelites did in the desert, who on that account were debarr-ed from the promised land; 7—11.

COME, let us sing unto the LORD: let us make a joyful noise to the 'rock of our salvation.

2 Let us 'come before his presence with thanksgiving, and make a joyful noise unto him with psalms.

3 "For the LORD is a great God, and a great King above all gods.

4 "In his hand are the deep places of the earth: 'the strength of the hills is his also.

None need be ashamed of holiness, which is the ornament of God's nature, of his renewed hearts, his church, and his heaven.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XCIV.—Saints must always expect manifold injuries and oppressions in this world. But never must they usurp God's prerogative in avenging themselves, but patiently endure, and wait for the day when he that judges righteously should arise to punish their adversaries. When men are abandoned by God to themselves, how their heart, hands, and tongue, concur in abusing him and his people! Astonishing is their atheism and stupidity! They sink even below common sense. But God makes the correction of his people to issue in their instruction, and in their spiritual or eternal rest and safety, while their wicked enemies are ruined. In due time he will rectify all seeming disorders; and the righteousness of his judgments shall be made clearly manifest, to the encouragement of the upright to follow him, and to praise him for his providences. And thrice happy are they who have treasured up manifold experiences of God's support, comfort, and deliverance, in their times of extreme distress! It will encourage them to expect the proper, seasonable, and righteous, ruin of all the enemies of the church, whether wicked courts in Israel, Assyrians, Chaldeans, Syro-grecians, obstinate Jews, Romish Heathens, Antichristians, or others.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XCIII.—Solid and believing views of Jesus Christ are excellent means to subdue the pride, and remove the fear, of man. They, who have him for their King and Keeper, have no reason to be moved from their steadfastness. No earthly dishonours need disquiet those who have Christ, the Lord of all, to be their Father and Portion. No troubles need dismay those who are by grace made one with the King eternal. No changes need discontent them who have God's sure testimonies for their heritage and the ground of their hope.

PSALM XCVI.

This psalm was part of the hymn sung at the translation of the ark from the house of Obed-edom to the city of David; (1 Chron.
xvi. 1, 22—30.) but relates to the calling of the Gentiles to our Redeemer. Here are (1) Solemn calls to ascribe praises and glory to our high and great Immanuel; 1—9. (2) Loud proclamations of Jesus' establishment of his gospel church, and of his coming to judge the world, to the great joy of his friends; 10—13.

O SING unto the LORD a new song: sing unto the LORD, all the earth.

2 Sing unto the LORD, bless his name; shew forth his salvation from day to day.

3 Declare his glory among the heathen, his wonders among all people.

4 For the LORD is great, and greatly to be praised: he is to be feared above all gods.

5 For all the gods of the nations are idols: but the LORD made the heavens.

6 Honour and majesty are before him: strength and beauty are in his sanctuary.

7 Give unto the LORD, O ye kindreds of the people, give unto the LORD glory and strength.

8 Give unto the LORD the glory due unto his name: bring an offering, and come into his courts.

9 O worship the LORD in the beauty of holiness: fear before him, all
the earth.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XCV.—God richly deserves our highest and most cordial praise. And we should invite one another to this blessed employ. How great is he, possessed of every necessary, infinite, and eternal excellency! How glorious his formation of all things, and his extensive dominion over them! How delightful and effective of blessings unnumbered, is his new covenant relation to men!—But, if he be our Saviour and King, it is proper, it is necessary, that we be obedient subjects. To none but such is he the author of eternal salvation.
To day, without a moment's delay, we ought to hear his voice in the gospel, and to receive the offers of his grace. However slightly men pass over their sins, they are highly provoking in God's sight. And disbelief of his promises is one of the greatest insults that we can put upon him. That heart is hardened indeed, whom the great and precious promises of the gospel cannot affect. Let us take warning by the ruin of others, that we fall not after the same example of unbelief. Though God bear long with us, he will not bear always. The mercies which we have received from him, as well as the wilfulness of our ignorance, and our love to our errors, will fearfully aggravate our sin. And dreadful will be our case, if by his irrevocable oath he once exclude us from his new covenant, his celestial rest, on account of our despising it when offered to us in the gospel.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XCVI.—Since to us Gentiles Jesus Christ and his word of salvation are now come, let us, in songs ever fresh, ever cordial, publish the glories of his grace, and the wonders of his redeeming mercy, power, holiness, and majesty. Let us acknowledge him as our saving Sovereign, present established that it shall not be moved:

he shall judge the people righteously.

11 Let the heavens rejoice, and let the earth be glad: let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof.

12 Let the field be joyful, and all that is therein: then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice

13 Before the LORD; for he cometh, for he cometh to judge the earth: he shall judge the world with righteousness, and the people with his truth.

PSALM XCVII.

This psalm is in the same strain with the preceding; and contains
(1) Solemn calls to the Gentile nations to rejoice at the equity and extent of Jesus' new testament kingdom, and at the destruction of hardened Jews and heathen idolaters, occasioned by the establishment thereof; 1—7. (2) Representations of the pure and holy joy of the saints on account of Jesus' highness, the glory of God manifested therein, and of the care taken for their safety and comfort; 8—12.

THE LORD reigneth; let the earth rejoice; let the multitude of isles be glad thereof.

2 Clouds and darkness are round about him: righteousness and judgment are the habitation of his throne.

3 A fire goeth before him, and burn-eth up his enemies round about.

4 His lightnings enlightened the world: the earth saw and trembled.

5 The hills melted like wax at the presence of the LORD, at the presence of the LORD of the whole earth.

6 The heavens declare his righteousness, and all the people see his glory.

7 Confounded be all they that serve graven images, that boast themselves of idols: worship him, all ye gods.

8 Zion heard, and was glad; and the daughters of Judah rejoiced; because of thy judgments, O LORD.

9 For thou, LORD, art high above all the earth: thou art exalted far above
all gods.

10 Ye that love the LORD, hate evil:
he preserveth the souls of his saints; he delivereth them out of the hand of the wicked.

11 Light is sown for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart.

12 Rejoice in the LORD, ye righteous; and give thanks at the remembrance of his holiness.

11. Hab. 1. 12, 13.

PSALM XCVIII.

This psalm insists on the same subject as the two preceding; and contains (1) Demands of praise to the Redeemer, for the won-ourselves to him as living sacrifices, and in the pure ordinances of his grace worship him with pure hearts, and in a reverent and holy manner. Let us rejoice that his kingdom has been, is, and will be, established among the Gentiles on earth. Let us, with joy, hope for these latter days, in which Satan shall be bound, and all the kingdoms on earth subjected to the righteous and merciful government of our Redeemer. And let us, with more exalted joy, expect his coming in the clouds, with power and great glory, to judge, and finally decide, the eternal state of men and angels.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM XCVII.—However mysterious and unsearchable God's providences be, they are always just and equal. A great shaking of the nations, by the Roman and other conquests, ushered in the gospel kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. A great destruction of obstinate Jews and Heathens, and overturning of idolatry in the world, attended the erection and spread of it. And a great overturning of Antichristians, Mahometans, and all their false worship, shall yet take place in its most glorious period. No exalted potentates, no mighty nations, nor fixed customs of wickedness, shall be able to withstand his conquering influence. Let saints then rejoice in his dignity of person, office, and state; in his gracious preservation and deliverance of his people; in the comforts and glory which he has prepared for them; and in his righteous judgments upon their implacable foes. And let their delight in his holiness inflame their love to himself, and their hatred of sin.

ders he hath wrought, the victories he hath won, the discoveries he hath made, and the promises he fulfils; 1—3. (2) Demands of universal and high rejoicing at the erection and establishment of his gospel church, and at his coming in the clouds to judge the world; 4—9.

A psalm.

PSALM XCIX.

This psalm is of the same general nature with the three preceding; and calls men to revere, worship, and praise, the Messiah and his Father, (1) For the glory, greatness, mercy, and equity, of his government; 1—5. (2) For the instances of his kindness to Israel, in remarkably regarding and honouring their noted deliverers and reformers; 6—9.

PSALM C.

This psalm (1) Contains a solemn call to the Gentiles to praise God and rejoice in him; 1—4. (2) Furnishes us with matter of praise; viz. that he is God, and stands nearly related to us; and that his mercy and truth are everlasting; 3, 5.

A psalm of *praise.

MAKE a joyful noise unto the LORD, ye lands.

² Serve the LORD with gladness: come before his presence with singing.

³ Know ye that the LORD he is God; it is he that hath made us, and not we ourselves; we are his people, and the sheep of his pasture.

⁴ Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: be thankful unto him, and bless his name.

⁵ For the LORD is good; his mercy is everlasting; and his truth endureth to all generations.

PSALM CI.

This psalm was probably composed when David assumed the government of his kingdom; and contains his holy resolutions (1) To make God's mercies and judgments the connected matter of his song; and to walk circumspectly before his family, through the assisting presence of God; 1, 2. (2) To purge his family and kingdom; discouraging and punishing persons mischievous and wicked, slanderers, liars, and deceitful workers; and encouraging the pious; 3—8.

A psalm of David.

I WILL sing of mercy and judgment: unto thee, O LORD, will I sing.

² I will behave myself wisely in a perfect way. O when wilt thou come unto me? I will walk within my house with a perfect heart.

³ I will set no wicked thing before mine eyes: I hate the work of them that turn aside; it shall not cleave to me.

⁴ A froward heart shall depart from me: I will not know a wicked person.

⁵ Whoso privily slandereth his neighbour, him will I cut off: him that hath an high look and a proud heart will not I suffer.

⁶ Mine eyes shall be upon the faithful of the land, that they may dwell with me: he that walketh in a perfect way, he shall serve me.

effectual are their intercessions for the preservation of nations and churches. But he will make the dearest of them to smart severely for their sin in this life, notwithstanding they are fixed in a pardoned state. Great praise is due to God for his mercies. And deep awe and inward purity are necessary in worshipping him that is infinitely holy.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM C.—What joyful praise, what grateful thanksgiving, what cheerful and hearty service, do we Gentiles owe to the Lord!—to him who is JEHOVAH, the infinite, ALL!—to him who forms us both in nature and in grace!—to him who is our high Proprietor and Redeemer, our kind Shepherd, Leader, Provider, and Provision!—to him who is good in himself, and whose mercy and truth are for ever exerted in the fulfilment of gracious and new covenant promises to ransomed men!

PSALM CII.

This psalm relates to some grievous distress; and contains (1) Bitter complaints, of divine hidings and wrath; of sore bodily troubles; of inward griefs and perplexities; of calumniating reproaches; of sudden changes of condition; and of apparent nearness to death; 1—11. (2) Seasonable comforts against these grievances, drawn from the eternity and unchangeableness of God; 12, 24, 27: from the deliverances, spread, and establishment, which he will grant to his church in answer to the prayers, and for the comfort, of his afflicted people; 13—28.

A prayer * of the afflicted, when he is overwhelmed, and poureth out his complaint before the LORD.

HEAR ^b my prayer, O LORD, and let my cry come unto thee.

2 "Hide not thy face from me in the day when I am in trouble; incline thine ear unto me: in the day when I call answer me speedily.

3 "For my days are consumed like smoke, and my bones are burned as an hearth.

4 "My heart is smitten, and withered like grass; so that I forget to eat my bread.

5 "By reason of the voice of my groaning my bones cleave to my skin.

6 "I am like a pelican of the wilderness: I am like an owl of the desert.

7 "I watch, and am as a sparrow alone upon the house top.

8 "Mine enemies reproach me all the day; and they that are mad against me are sworn against me.

9 "For I have eaten ashes like bread, and mingled my drink with weeping, 10 "Because of thine indignation and thy wrath: for thou hast lifted me up and cast me down.

11 "My days are like a shadow that declineth; and I am withered like grass.

12 But thou, O LORD, shalt endure for ever; and thy remembrance unto all generations.

13 "Thou shalt arise, and have mercy upon Zion: for the time to favour her, yea, the set time, is come.

14 "For thy servants take pleasure in her stones, and favour the dust thereof.

15 "So the heathen shall fear the name of the LORD, and all the kings of the earth thy glory.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CI.—The lot of saints on earth is a strange mixture of mercies and judgments. But all of them, taken in their connection and tendency, are to be improved as matter of praise and thanksgiving. Fellowship with, and influences from, God must strengthen and animate us to every holy practice. Serious godliness is the most substantial wisdom; and to act for God in the religious management of families, kingdoms, or in other relative stations, is a noted branch of it. With the utmost care ought men, by whatever power they have, to discourage every thing wicked, and to encourage every thing virtuous and holy. But it is in vain to attempt instructing or reforming others, if we do not set them an example in our own practice.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CII.—To what low condition God reduces his church and people, for the exercise and trial of their grace, and for exciting their more importunate prayers! In darkness, vexation, and trouble, their days often pass toward an end. Afflicted, dispirited, and pained, in their heart; and their body wasted to skin and bones: like owls and pelicans, they shun converse and comfort, and pine away in melancholy solitude. Often, like lonely sparrows, PSALM CIII.

In this psalm David labours to promote thankful praises to God for his kindness in redemption; and in the four following for his kindness in creation and external providence. Here (1) He earnestly stirs up himself to praise God for favours to himself in particular, for pardon of sins, healing of diseases, redemption from death; 1—5; and for his mercies to his people, in revealing his mind to them, pardoning their sins, sympathizing with their weakness, pitying their afflictions, and perpetuating his new covenant mercy towards them and their seed; 6—18. (2) Conscious of his own insufficiency, he requests the assistance of angels, and of all the works of God, to praise him who is their Sovereign; 19—22.

A psalm of David.

BLESS the LORD, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless his holy name.

2 Bless the LORD, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits:

3 Who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases;

4 "Who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with loving kindness and tender mercies;

5 "Who satisfieth thy mouth with good they are debarred from rest and sleep, and are deserted by friends, or avoid their company: are exposed to the reproach and fury of inveterate enemies—oppressed with grief—overwhelmed with a sense of God's indignation, in his sudden and awful changing of their comforts into depths of misery, till near the grave and apparently near the pit! But great is the mercy that they have, notwithstanding, a God, a hearer of prayer, to whom they may complain; and a heart to pour out before him. Be the afflictions of the righteous as numerous as they will, the eternal Saviour has, and does, and will, deliver them out of them all. He has fixed the periods of his church's deliverance, and issued forth promises ascertaining the same. While with deep concern his servants are affected with her ruinous case, and pour forth their importunate prayers, he will fly to her relief, to the conversion of multitudes and the terror of obstinate opposers. What he did in former times, in delivering from Babylon, in erecting the new testament church, and in destroying her Jewish and Heathen persecutors, encourages us to hope for more glorious deliverances from Antichrist, and at last from the world that lieth in wickedness. And, whatever distresses befall the redeemed in their way to the heavenly mansions, Jesus' eternity secures the perseverance and stability of his church, and of every true member of it.

things; so that ^bthy youth is renewed like the eagle's.

6 The ⁱLORD executeth righteousness and judgment for all that are oppressed.

7 ^kHe made known his ways unto Moses, his acts unto the children of Israel.

8 ⁱThe LORD is merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy.

9 ^mHe will not always chide: neither will he keep his anger for ever.

10 ⁿHe hath not dealt with us after our sins; nor rewarded us according to our iniquities.

11 For, ^oas the heaven is high above the earth, so great is his mercy toward them that fear him.

12 ^pAs far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us.

13 ⁱLike as a father pitieth his children, so the LORD pitieth them that fear him.

14 ^rFor he knoweth our frame; he remembereth that we are dust.

15 ^sAs for man, his days are as grass: ^tas a flower of the field, so he flourisheth.

16 ^uFor the wind passeth over it, and ^vit is gone; and the place thereof ^xshall know it no more:

17 ^yBut the mercy of the LORD is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him; and ^zhis righteousness unto children's children;

18 ^aTo such as keep his covenant, and to those that remember his commandments to do them.

19 ^bThe LORD hath prepared his throne in the heavens; and his kingdom ruleth over all.

20 ^cBless the LORD, ye his angels, ^dthat excel in strength, that ^edo his commandments, hearkening unto the voice of his word.

21 Bless ye the LORD, all ye ^fhis hosts; ye ministers of his, that do his pleasure.

22 ^gBless the LORD, all his works in all places of his dominion: bless the LORD, O my soul.

PSALM CIV.

This psalm was perhaps composed along with the preceding one; and contains (1) High celebrations of God as the God of nature; particularly of his appearances in his heavenly palaces; 1—4: of his creation of the sea and dry land; 5—9: of the provision which he makes for his creatures, according to their respective needs; 10—28: and of his sovereign dominion and influence over them; 29—32. (2) Holy resolutions to meditate on and praise the Lord, in the view of his destruction of the wicked; 33—35.

BLESS ^athe LORD, O my soul. O LORD my God, ^bthou art very great; ^cthou art clothed with honour and majesty.

2 Who coverest thyself ^dwith light as with a garment; ^ewho stretchest out the heavens like a curtain;

3 ^fWho layeth the beams of his chambers in the waters; ^gwho maketh the clouds his chariot; ^hwho walketh upon the wings of the wind;

4 ⁱWho maketh his angels spirits; his ministers a flaming fire;

5 ^kWho laid the foundations of the earth, that it should not be removed for ever.

6 ^lThou coveredst it with the deep as with a garment: the waters stood above the mountains.

7 ^mAt thy rebuke they fled; at the voice of thy thunder they hasted away.

8 ⁿThey go up by the mountains; they go down by the valleys unto the place which thou hast founded for them.

9 ^oThou hast set a bound that they may not pass over; that they turn not again to cover the earth.

10 ^p†He sendeth the springs into the valleys, which †run among the hills.

11 ^qThey give drink to every beast of the field: the wild asses || quench their thirst.

12 By them shall the fowls of the heaven have their habitation; which ^rsing among the branches.

13 ^sHe watereth the hills from his ^tchambers: the earth is satisfied with the fruit of thy works.

14 ^uHe causeth the grass to grow for the cattle, and herb for the service of man: that he may bring forth food out of the earth;

15 And ^vwine that maketh glad the heart of man, and ^woil to make his face to shine, and ^xbread which strengtheneth man's heart.

16 ^yThe trees of the LORD are full of sap; the cedars of Lebanon, which he hath planted;

17 ^zWhere the birds make their nests: as for the ^astork, the fir trees are her house.

18 ^bThe high hills are a refuge for the wild goats, and the rocks for ^cthe conies.

19 ^dHe appointeth the moon for seasons; the sun knoweth his going down.

20 ^eThou makest darkness, and it is night; wherein †all the beasts of the forest do creep forth.

21 ^fThe young lions roar after their prey, and seek their meat from God.

22 The ^gsun ariseth, they gather themselves together, and lay them down in their dens.

23 ^hMan goeth forth to his work and to his labour until the evening.

24 O LORD, ⁱhow manifold are thy works! in wisdom hast thou made them all: the earth is full of ^kthy riches.

25 So is ^lthis great and wide sea, wherein are things creeping innumerable, both small and great beasts.

26 ^mThere go the ships: there is that

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CIV.—Our hearts need to be much encouraged and excited, even to the most proper and most delightful exercises. And in dealing with God our hearts ought to be wholly engaged. But how shameful it is that we ever forget, that we so early forget, his mercies!—his mercies so great, so necessary, so numerous, so connected, so everlasting!—his unbounded compassion to us, who are so mean, so frail, so polluted!—his free, full, and everlasting, pardons should humble our hearts, and animate us to holy fear, love, and obedience. And, while all his creatures in heaven and earth concur to bless and serve him, surely we above all, whom Christ hath redeemed by his blood, should never be silent, never be slothful!

PSALM CV.

This psalm was a part of the solemn hymn sung at the translation of the ark from the house of Obed-edom to the city of David ; [1 Chrou. xvi.] and contains (1) Solemn calls to meditate on, seek, magnify, and praise, God, who is so great, so gracious, and so nearly connected with us ; 1—7. (2) A narrative of the particular mercies of God to Israel for the space of four hundred and eighty years, as grounds of praise ; particularly 1. His covenant with their patriarchs ; 8—11 : 2. His care of them while strangers and sojourners ; 12—15 : 3. His advancement of Joseph to be the shepherd and stone of Israel ; 16—22 : 4. His increasing them in Egypt, and at last delivering them from it, by inflicting manifold plagues on the Egyptians ; 23—38. 5. His care of them in the wilderness, and settling them in Canaan as a peculiar people to himself ; 39—45.

GIVE thanks unto the LORD ; call upon his name : make known his deeds among the people.

2 Sing unto him, sing psalms unto him : talk ye of all his wondrous works.

3 Glory ye in his holy name : let the heart of them rejoice that seek the LORD.

4 Seek the LORD, and his strength : seek his face evermore.

5 Remember his marvellous works that he hath done ; his wonders, and the judgments of his mouth ;

6 O ye seed of Abraham his servant, ye children of Jacob his chosen.

7 He is the LORD our God ; his judgments are in all the earth.

8 He hath remembered his covenant for ever, the word which he commanded to a thousand generations.

9 Which covenant he made with Abraham, and his oath unto Isaac ;

10 And confirmed the same unto Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant :

land of Canaan, the lot of your inheritance :

12 When they were but a few men in number ; yea, very few, and strangers in it.

13 When they went from one nation to another, from one kingdom to another people ;

14 He suffered no man to do them wrong : yea, he reprov'd kings for their sakes ;

15 Saying, Touch not mine anointed, and do my prophets no harm.

16 Moreover, he called for a famine upon the land : he brake the whole staff of bread.

17 He sent a man before them, even Joseph, who was sold for a servant :

18 Whose feet they hurt with fetters : he was laid in iron :

19 Until the time that his word came : the word of the LORD tried him.

20 The king sent and loosed him, even the ruler of the people, and let him go free.

21 He made him lord of his house, and ruler of all his substance :

22 To bind his princes at his pleasure, and teach his senators wisdom.

23 Israel also came into Egypt ; and Jacob sojourned in the land of Ham.

24 And he increased his people greatly ; and made them stronger than their enemies.

25 He turned their heart to hate his people, to deal subtilly with his servants.

26 He sent Moses his servant, and Aaron whom he had chosen.

27 They shewed him signs among them, and wonders in the land of Ham.

28 He sent darkness, and made it dark ; and they rebelled not against his word.

29 He turned their waters into blood, and slew their fish.

30 Their land brought forth frogs in abundance, in the chambers of their kings.

31 He spake, and there came divers sorts of flies and lice in all their coasts.

32 He gave them hail for rain, and flaming fire in their land.

33 He smote their vines also and their fig trees ; and brake the trees of their coasts.

34 He spake, and the locusts came, and caterpillars, and that without number,

35 And did eat up all the herbs in their land, and devoured the fruit of their ground.

36 He smote also all the first-born in their land, the chief of all their strength.

37 He brought them forth also with silver and gold : and there was not one feeble person among their tribes.

power, his kindness, and his care, owe their whole selves and service to this mighty Lord ! Can he then, who hangs a whole creation on his arm, and feeds them at his board, let slip a ransomed child, or let him starve ? While he with pleasure upholds all, governs all, and rejoices in all, his works, let my soul, touched by his grace, meditate and praise : and, while obstinate sinners are consumed from earth, and shut up in hell, let my Hosannas and Hallelujahs ascend to him that loved me and gave himself for me.

40 * The people asked, and he brought quails; and satisfied them with the bread of heaven.

41 ^a He opened the rock, and the waters gushed out; they ran in the dry places like a river.

42 ^b For he remembered his holy promise, and Abraham his servant.

43 ^c And he brought forth his people with joy, and his chosen with *gladness:

44 ^d And gave them the lands of the heathen; and they inherited the labour of the people;

45 ^e That they might observe his statutes, and keep his laws. ^f Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CVI.

This psalm may be considered as a supplement to the preceding. That exhibited to our view the marvellous kindness of God to Israel: this exhibits the fearful rebellions of Israel against their gracious God. We have here (1) A preface, ascribing praise to God, exhibiting comfort to his saints, and requesting favours from God; 1—5. (2) An alarming confession or narrative of Israel's wickedness against their God, notwithstanding his marvellous kindness to them; in provoking him at the Red sea; 6—12: in lusting after sensual gratifications; 13—15: in mutinying against his vicegerents; 16—18: in worshipping the golden calf; 19—23: in murmuring contempt of the promised land; 24—27: in joining with the Moabites and Midianites in the worship of Baal-peor; 28—31: in quarrelling with Moses at Kadesh; 32, 33: in incorporating themselves with the Canaanites, and imitating their idolatrous and cruel customs; 34—39. (3) An affecting view of God's great compassion to Israel, notwithstanding they had provoked him to inflict sore and almost destructive punishments upon them; 40—46. (4) An affectionate improvement of his kindness, in imploring his powerful deliverance; and ascription of endless praises to his name; 47, 48.

PRAISE ^a ye the LORD. O ^b give thanks unto the LORD; for he is ^c good; for his mercy endureth for ever.

2 Who ^d can utter the mighty acts of the LORD? who can shew forth all his praise?

3 Blessed are they that ^e keep judgment, and he that doth righteousness at all times.

4 ^f Remember me, O LORD, with the favour that thou bearest unto thy people: O visit me with thy salvation;

5 That I may see ^g the good of thy chosen, that I may rejoice in the gladness of thy nation, that I may glory with thine inheritance.

6 ^h We have sinned with our fathers; we have committed iniquity; we have done wickedly.

7 Our fathers ⁱ understood not thy wonders in Egypt; they remembered not the multitude of thy mercies; ^k but provoked him at the sea, even at the Red sea.

8 ^l Nevertheless, he saved them for his name's sake, that he might make his mighty power to be known.

9 ^m He rebuked the Red sea also, and it was dried up: so he led them through the depths as through the wilderness.

10 ⁿ And he saved them from the hand of him that hated them, and redeemed them from the hand of the enemy.

11 ^o And the waters covered their enemies: there was not one of them left.

12 ^p Then believed they his words; they sang his praise.

13 ^q * They soon forgot his works; they waited not for his counsel:

14 ^r But [†] lusted exceedingly in the wilderness, and tempted God in the desert.

15 ^s And he gave them their request; but sent leanness into their soul.

16 ^t They envied Moses also in the camp, and Aaron the saint of the LORD.

17 ^u The earth opened, and swallowed up Dathan, and covered the company of Abiram.

18 ^v And a fire was kindled in their company; the flame burned up the wicked.

19 ^w They made a calf in Horeb, and worshipped the molten image.

20 ^x Thus they changed their glory into the similitude of an ox that eateth grass.

21 ^y They forgot God their Saviour, which had done ^z great things in Egypt;

22 Wondrous works in the land of Ham, and terrible things by the Red sea.

23 ^a Therefore he said that he would destroy them, had not Moses his chosen stood before him in the breach, to turn away his wrath, lest he should destroy them.

24 Yea, ^b they despised ^c the pleasant land; ^d they believed not his word:

25 ^e But murmured in their tents, and hearkened not unto the voice of the LORD.

26 Therefore he ^f lifted up his hand against them, to overthrow them in the wilderness:

27 ^g [†] To overthrow their seed also among the nations, and to ^h scatter them in the lands.

28 ⁱ They joined themselves also unto Baal-peor, and ate the sacrifices of the dead.

29 Thus ^j they provoked him to anger with their inventions: and the ^k plague brake in upon them.

30 ^l Then stood up Phinehas, and executed judgment: and so ^m the plague was stayed.

31 And that was ⁿ counted unto him for righteousness unto all generations for evermore.

32 ^o They angered him also at the REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CV.—How infinitely excellent is this God, who deserves such gratitude, such praise, such search, such confidence! Marvellous is his covenant relation to us, and covenanted mercies towards us: and thrice happy are they who have him their own and their fathers' God! Happy are they who know the judgments of his mouth, his word, and live thereby; and for whose welfare the judgments of his hand are executed in all the earth! From mean appearances God's great manifestations of himself take their rise. But great is the care he takes of his chosen in this world, where they are but few and strangers. He that touches them touches the apple of his eye. And apparent difficulties easily vanish before the power of a promising God. But how mysterious are his ways of providence! When things seem most against us, they are often strongly working for our good. Even calumnies and sufferings are made to try and prepare men for, and advance them to, honour. His church shall never want a friend in time of need. He can raise them up protectors where they least expected to find favour. And, if God advance us, our duty is to discern his hand, and to adorn our station, by making it subservient to his glory. No danger or difficulty must deter us when his work is to be done.—All creatures concur in executing God's will of judgment or mercy. His protection, deliverance, and care, of his people, are wonderfully connected with the most fearful plagues and rain on their enemies. And through trials unnumbered, and of long continuance, God's promises are at last perfectly accomplished in his people's perfect happiness.

waters of strife, so that it went ill with Moses for their sakes:

33 Because they provoked his spirit, so that he 'spake unadvisedly with his lips.

34 'They did not destroy the nations, 'concerning whom the LORD commanded them :

35 'But were mingled among the heathen, and learned their works.

36 *And they served their idols; which were a snare unto them.

37 'Yea, they sacrificed their sons and their daughters unto devils,

38 And shed innocent blood, even the blood of their sons and of their daughters, whom they sacrificed unto the idols of Canaan: and the land was 'polluted with blood.

39 Thus were they defiled with their own works, and 'went a whoring with their own inventions.

40 Therefore ^bwas the wrath of the LORD kindled against his people, inso-much that he abhorred his own inheritance.

41 'And he gave them into the hand of the heathen; and they that hated them ruled over them.

42 Their enemies also oppressed them, and they were brought into subjection under their hand.

43 'Many times did he deliver them; but they provoked him with their counsel, and were || brought low for their iniquity.

44 Nevertheless, he regarded their affliction 'when he heard their cry :

45 'And he remembered for them his covenant, and 'repented according to the multitude of his mercies.

46 'He made them also to be pitied of all those that carried them captives.

47 'Save us, O LORD our God, and gather us from among the heathen, ^k to give thanks unto thy holy name, and to triumph in thy praise.

48 'Blessed be the LORD God of Israel from everlasting to everlasting: and let all the people say, Amen. Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CVII.

This psalm may be considered as an appendix to the two foregoing. Those represented the providence of God towards his chosen Israelites, who prefigured his gospel church: this (1) Represents the providences of God to the children of men in general, and calls them to praise him for his kindness and mercy in them: particularly 1. In directing and gathering travellers, whom he had justly dispersed; 1—7: 2. In delivering prisoners, whom he had justly confined; 8—14: 3. In healing the sick, whom he had justly plagued; 15—22: 4. In relieving mariners, whom he had justly brought into a storm; 23—30: 5. In changing the condition of territories, persons, and families, at his pleasure, to the comfort of his people, and the restraining of wickedness; 31—42. (2) It encourages men to a careful observation of God's providences; 43.

O 'GIVE thanks unto the LORD, for he is good; for his mercy endureth for ever.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CVI.—Wonderful and thank-worthy are all the deeds, the gracious deeds, of our God. Blessed are they who make his word their rule, and his righteousness the ground of their acceptance, and the example of their holy practice! Happy are they who enjoy intimate fellowship with him in his saving works and benefits. But how horrid is sin, which seeks to trample him and all his kindness under foot! And awful is the reflection that one generation should follow another in adding sin to sin. We need not upbraid the sinners who went before us, as we are involved in the same fearful crimes. Notwithstanding both mercies and judgments, how stupidly insensible, how strangely forgetful, how discontented with God's marvellous provision, how rebellious against his deputies and government,—what distinguished idolaters, murmurers, infidels, adulterers, and how perversely disobedient—does sin make

2 Let the 'redeemed of the LORD say so, whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy ;

3 And 'gathered them out of the lands, from the east and from the west, from the north and from the *south.

4 'They wandered in the wilderness in a solitary way; they found no city to dwell in.

5 'Hungry and thirsty, their soul fainted in them.

6 'Then they cried unto the LORD in their trouble, and he delivered them out of their distresses.

7 And he 'led them forth by the right way, that they might go to a city of habitation.

8 'Oh that men would praise the LORD for his goodness, and for his wonderful works, to the children of men !

9 'For he satisfieth the longing soul, and filleth the hungry soul with goodness.

10 'Such as sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, being bound in affliction and iron ;

11 'Because they rebelled against the words of God, and contemned the ^mcounsel of the Most High :

12 'Therefore he brought down their heart with labour; they fell down, and there was none to help.

13 'Then they cried unto the LORD in their trouble, and he saved them out of their distresses.

14 ^pHe brought them out of darkness and the shadow of death, and brake their bands in sunder.

15 'O that men would praise the LORD for his goodness, and for his wonderful works, to the children of men !

16 'For he hath broken the gates of brass, and cut the bars of iron in sunder.

17 'Fools, 'because of their transgression, and because of their iniquities, are afflicted.

18 'Their soul abhorreth all manner of meat; and they draw near unto the gates of death.

19 'Then they cry unto the LORD in their trouble, and he saveth them out of their distresses.

20 'He sent his word, and healed them, and delivered them from their destructions.

21 'Oh that men would praise the LORD for his goodness, and for his wonderful works, to the children of men !

22 'And let them sacrifice the sacrifices of thanksgiving, and declare his works with [†]rejoicing.

23 'They that go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters ;

God's professed people! Often they proceed from evil to worse, till his indignation breaks forth against them without remedy. But great is the mercy when sinful nations and churches have any among them who, by their prayers and their zeal stand in the gap, and avert the Lord's indignation. With pleasure he looks upon such, and highly honours them on that account. But infinite is the goodness of our God, who, when provoked to add one stroke to another, and to make wicked tempters to sin cruel tormentors for it, is so ready to step in for our relief, and to rebuke, or even turn the hearts of, them that destroyed us. Never is a penitent prayer poured out into his bosom but it returns in gracious preservation and deliverance. Let then all our troubles drive us to the throne of grace; and all our mercies, bestowed or promised, encourage our prayers, and animate our praise.

PSALM CIX.

Probably David penned this psalm with a view to Doeg or Ahithophel; and hence it is much like to the 41st, 52d, 55th, 120th, and 140th. But the Holy Ghost herein hath a mediate respect to Jesus and Judas the traitor; [Acts i. 20.] Observe (1) The psalmist's bitter complaints of his enemies, as spiteful, deceitful, false, restless, unjust, ungrateful; 1—5. (2) His fearful denunciations of divine vengeance against his distinguished enemy, that he should be delivered into the hand of Satan;—should have his prayers rejected, his life shortened, his substance wasted, and his posterity rendered miserable; 6—20. (3) His lamentation over his inward trouble, his approaching death, his instability of condition, pining sickness, reproach of enemies; and his prayers for mercy to himself, confusion to his enemies, and glory to his God; 21—29. (4) His triumph in God, as his supporter and deliverer amidst all his troubles; 30, 31.

children of men.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CVIII.—Quickly God can change the lot, can change the frames, and change the songs, of his people; and put high praises in the room of bitter wailings. How confidently then may saints expect to see the salvation of God! What he has promised faith can rejoice in, as if already performed: and, whatever difficulties be in the way, nothing is too hard for the Lord. However strong their enemies, and weak their souls, they shall prove more than conquerors through him that loveth them.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CVII.—Behold the effects of sin in forms unnumbered! in wanderings, imprisonments, sickness, storms, barrenness, poverty, &c. Behold also the power of effectual fervent prayer!—It brings speedy relief in every case. The holiness and equity, the goodness, mercy, and sovereignty, of God, are connectedly displayed in his providence to men. With exact and humble care ought we then to consider the doing of the Lord, and to compare it with his word, and with our prayers, and one part of it with another; so shall we understand the loving-kindness of the Lord. And, were we accurate observers of providence, constantly would our heart, our lips, and life, be filled be condemned; and let his prayer become sin.

8 ^hLet his days be few; and let another take his office.

9 ⁱLet his children be fatherless, and his wife a widow.

10 ^mLet his children be continually vagabonds, and beg: let them seek their bread also out of their desolate places.

11 ⁿLet the extortioner catch all that he hath; and let the stranger spoil his labour.

12 Let there be none to extend mercy unto him: neither let there be any to favour his fatherless children.

13 ^oLet his posterity be cut off; and in the generation following let their name be blotted out.

14 ^pLet the iniquity of his fathers be remembered with the LORD; and let not the sin of his mother be blotted out.

15 ^qLet them be before the LORD continually, that he may cut off the memory of them from the earth.

16 ^rBecause that he remembered not to shew mercy, but persecuted the poor and needy man, that he might even slay the broken in heart.

17 ^sAs he loved cursing, so let it come unto him: as he delighted not in blessing, so let it be far from him.

18 As he clothed himself with cursing like as with his garment, so let it come into his bowels like water, and like oil into his bones.

19 ^tLet it be unto him as the garment which covereth him, and for a girdle wherewith he is girded continually.

20 ^vLet this be the reward of mine adversaries from the LORD, and of them that speak evil against my soul.

21 ^wBut do thou for me, O God the LORD, for thy name's sake: because thy mercy is good, deliver thou me.

22 ^aFor I am poor and needy, and my heart is wounded within me.

23 ^bI am gone like the shadow when it declineth: I am tossed up and down as the locust.

24 My knees are weak through fasting; and my flesh faileth of fatness.

25 ^cI became also a reproach unto them: when they looked upon me they shook their heads.

26 ^dHelp me, O LORD my God: O save me according to thy mercy:

27 ^eThat they may know that this is thy hand; that thou, LORD, hast done it.

28 ^fLet them curse, but bless thou: when they arise, let them be ashamed; but let thy servant rejoice.

29 ^gLet mine adversaries be clothed with shame; and let them cover themselves with their own confusion, as with a mantle.

30 ^hI will greatly praise the LORD with my mouth; yea, I will praise him among the multitude.

31 ⁱFor he shall stand at the right hand of the poor, to save him from those that condemn his soul.

32 ^jLet them curse, but bless thou: when they arise, let them be ashamed; but let thy servant rejoice.

33 ^kLet mine adversaries be clothed with shame; and let them cover themselves with their own confusion, as with a mantle.

34 ^lI will greatly praise the LORD with my mouth; yea, I will praise him among the multitude.

35 ^mFor he shall stand at the right hand of the poor, to save him from those that condemn his soul.

28 ¹Let them curse, but bless thou: when they arise, let them be ashamed; but let thy servant rejoice.

29 ²Let mine adversaries be clothed with shame; and let them cover themselves with their own confusion, as with a mantle.

30 ³I will greatly praise the LORD with my mouth; yea, I will praise him among the multitude.

31 ⁴For he shall stand at the right hand of the poor, to save him from those that condemn his soul.

PSALM CX.

This psalm relates wholly to Jesus Christ: and represents him (1) In his glorious offices; as a Prophet, gathering the nations by the proclamation of his gospel as the rod of his strength; 2, 3: as our great High Priest; 4: and as our exalted, victorious, and ruling, King; 2, 3, 5, 6. (2) In his diversified states of debasement and exaltation; 7, 1, 5.

A psalm of David.

THE LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou at my right hand until I make thine enemies thy footstool.

2 The LORD shall send the rod of thy strength out of Zion: rule thou in the midst of thine enemies.

3 Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power, in the beauties of holiness from the womb of the morning: thou hast the dew of thy youth.

4 The LORD hath sworn, and will not repent, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchizedek.

5 The LORD at thy right hand shall strike through kings in the day of his wrath.

6 He shall judge among the heathen; he shall fill the places with the dead bodies; he shall wound the heads over many countries.

7 He shall drink of the brook in the way; therefore shall he lift up the head.

PSALM CXI.

In this psalm, every sentence of which begins with a new letter of the Hebrew alphabet, we have (1) The praising of God inculcated and exemplified; 1. (2) The grounds of praise exhibited, viz. that God himself is gracious, full of compassion, and ever mindful of his covenant; and that his works are magnificent, pleasant, righteous, wonderful, perfect, kind, prudent, and durable; and all conformed to his promise and covenant; 2-9. (3) A recommendation of an holy and reverential obedience to God; as the beginning of wisdom; 10.

PRAISE ye the LORD. I will praise the LORD with my whole heart, in the assembly of the upright, and in the congregation.

2 The works of the LORD are great, sought out of all them that have pleasure therein.

3 His work is honourable and glorious; and his righteousness endureth for ever.

4 He hath made his wonderful works

Glorious is his reward for his work of obedience and suffering. And all his enemies—sin, Satan, the world, and death—are made to bow under his feet. The everlasting gospel, sent forth into all the world, becomes effectual to men's salvation, and his kingdom is established in despite of all opposition. Multitudes of his enemies, made willing in the day of his power, cheerfully enlist themselves in his service, and worship him in the beauties of holiness. In the morning of the gospel period, through the heavenly influence of the blessed Spirit, multitudes, fresh and flourishing in heart, surrendered themselves to the Lord. And upon the most solid ground are believers' hopes and comforts founded—the all-sufficiency of Jesus Christ, and the oath of the eternal JEHOVAH. With confidence thou ought we always to expect pardon, peace, and all the blessings of salvation, from this great High Priest of our profession. Horrid is the crime, if for a moment we dare question his power and grace, and stagger at promises confirmed by two immutable things—the word and oath of that God who cannot lie. And, while Jesus, finishing his obedience, and strengthened by the Holy Ghost, lifts up his head in everlasting triumph, dreadful is the ruin of his malicious and powerful opposers, Jews, Heathens, Antichristians, and others.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CIX.—Dreadful must be the nature of sin, which makes men so desperate and outrageous enemies to Christ and his people. But terrible, spreading, and extensive, lasting, and yet most righteous, are the judgments that overtake them from heaven, from earth, and from hell! Deep marked was this truth on the enemies of David, on Judas the traitor, and his Jewish brethren, the murderers of our Lord and his saints; and on heathenish and popish Romans. But, if men spitefully abuse us, let us give ourselves unto prayer. Though our God be long silent, he will speak at the last. If he help, we need not regard who harass us. If he bless, we need not care who curse us. If all our hopes be placed on his boundless mercy and grace, no matter how we be loaded with poverty, wounds of spirit, decay of body, or revilings of men. He can quickly help and save us. The more shame we take to ourselves for our sins, we are in the less danger of suffering for them. And God's support and salvation shall quickly fill our mouths with high and everlasting praise.

PSALM CXII.

This psalm is also alphabetically composed; and contains (1) Invitations to praise God; 1. (2) A delineation of the saints' character and blessedness; that they are well principled, honest, sincere and kind; and shall be blessed with prosperity outward and inward; with comfort amidst griefs, wisdom amidst perplexity, and with honour and stability; and that their posterity shall be blessed after them; 2—9. (3) The misery of the wicked; 10.

PRAISE ye the LORD. Blessed is the man that feareth the LORD, that delighteth greatly in his commandments.

2 His seed shall be mighty upon earth: the generation of the upright shall be blessed.

3 Wealth and riches shall be in his house: and his righteousness endureth for ever.

4 Unto the upright there ariseth light in the darkness: he is gracious, and full of compassion, and righteous.

5 A good man sheweth favour, and lendeth: he will guide his affairs with discretion.

6 Surely he shall not be moved for ever: the righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance.

7 He shall not be afraid of evil tidings: his heart is fixed, trusting in the LORD.

8 His heart is established; he shall not be afraid, until he see his desire upon his enemies.

9 He hath dispersed, he hath given to the poor; his righteousness endureth for ever; his horn shall be exalted with honour.

10 The wicked shall see it, and be grieved: he shall gnash with his teeth, and melt away; the desire of the wicked shall perish.

PSALM CXIII.

This psalm, with the five immediately following, were called the great HALLELUJAH, and used to be sung at the passover supper; [Mat. xxvi. 30.] Here (1) We are solemnly called to celebrate the praises of God; 1—3. (2) We are plentifully furnished with matter of praise; viz. the heights of his glory and greatness, and the depths of his condescension and grace; 4—9.

PRAISE ye the LORD. Praise, O ye servants of the LORD, praise the name of the LORD.

2 Blessed be the name of the LORD from this time forth and for evermore.

3 From the rising of the sun unto the going down of the same the LORD's name is to be praised.

4 The LORD is high above all nations, and his glory above the heavens.

5 Who is like unto the LORD our God, who dwelleth on high,

6 Who humbleth himself to behold the things that are in heaven and in the earth!

7 He raiseth up the poor out of the dust, and lifteth the needy out of the dunghill;

8 That he may set him with princes, even with the princes of his people.

9 He maketh the barren woman to keep house, and to be a joyful mother of children. Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CXIV.

In this psalm are celebrated (1) God's bringing Israel out of their Egyptian slavery; 1. (2) His setting up his tabernacle among them, and taking them for his peculiar people; 2. (3) His dividing the Red sea and Jordan before them; 3, 5. (4) His awful descent on Mount Sinai to give them his law; 4, 6, 7. (5) His providing them with water from the flinty rocks; 8.

WHEN Israel went out of Egypt, the house of Jacob from a people of strange language;

2 Judah was his sanctuary, and Israel his dominion.

3 The sea saw it, and fled; Jordan was driven back.

4 The mountains skipped like rams, and the little hills like lambs.

5 What ailed thee, O thou sea, that thou fleddest? thou Jordan, that thou wast driven back?

6 Ye mountains, that ye skipped like rams; and ye little hills, like lambs?

7 Tremble, thou earth, at the presence of the LORD, at the presence of the God of Jacob;

8 Who turned the rock into a standing water, the flint into a fountain of waters.

PSALM CXV.

This psalm instructs us (1) To whom glory and praise ought to be ascribed: not to ourselves, but to God, for his mercy and truth; 1: not to lifeless, senseless idols, but to God, whose throne is in the heavens, and who does whatever he pleases; 2—8, 15, 16. (2) the wicked, whose wishes shall be either cursed or denied; and to whom even the happiness of the godly is an insupportable vexation!

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXIII.—O what an eternity it will require for the redeemed servants of the Lord sufficiently to praise their high, their unparalleled, their condescending Redeemer, who, by his own debasement, raises multitudes of mankind from the pit of corruption to the loftiest thrones in bliss; and now makes the Gentile world, after long barrenness, to bring forth a numerous seed of converts to himself in his gospel church.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXIV.—In infinite sovereignty God chuses whom of mankind he pleases to be his peculiar people, and to be blessed with his oracles, ordinances, and gracious influences. And nothing can detain his people in their spiritual bondage when he draws them out. Nothing, no not seas of tribulation, nor mountains of unbelief and corruption, can stop their passage to the heavenly Canaan. Nor, while Jesus, our smitten rock of ages, continues a fountain opened, shall they want refreshment by the way. Tremble then, my carnal heart, at the presence of a God in Christ as my own. And let all my hardened powers be melted by his love.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXI.—Praising of God ought to be hearty, candid, and avowed: and they who inculcate it upon others should carefully exemplify it in their own practice. How extensive are the grounds of it! A God infinitely gracious and faithful, ever mindful of his new covenant and every promise thereof; holy and reverend in nature and in name. His works are unsearchably glorious, memorable, powerful, just and true; and all of them communicating provision and riches to them that fear him. Fixed, everlasting, true, and candid, are all his counsels and words, exactly conformable to his righteous nature, and must be obeyed in simplicity by them that serve him. Everlasting, ordered in all things and sure, is his covenant, and all the redemption it prepares and communicates to men. And they are the only wise persons, who fear him and keep his commandments; everlasting shall be their honour and reward.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXII.—What holy awe of God, delight in spiritual things, candour, kindness, and equity, are necessary in our obedience to God's law! And great profit, stability, honour, safety, quietness of mind, and victory over all our enemies, are secured for its reward. But how unhappy are

PSALM CXVI.

This is a psalm of thanksgiving, somewhat similar to the 18th, 30th, 40th, and 103d; and represents (1) The Psalmist's great distress and danger, which had almost driven him to despair; 3, 10, 11. (2) The application which he made to God by prayer for relief; and his experience of God's gracious kindness, in granting his requests; and in hearing, pitying, and delivering him; 1, 2, 4—6, 8. (3) His sincere and hearty resolutions to make a grateful acknowledgment of God's kindness; by loving him; 1: continuing to call on him, and receive from him; 2, 13, 17: resting in him; 7: walking before him as his devoted servant; 9, 16: public confession of God's tender regard to him; 12, 15: and sincere and public paying of his vows to him; 10—19.

I^a LOVE the LORD, because ^bhe hath heard my voice and my supplications.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXV.—Let us be always nothing in our own eyes, and let Christ be all and in all. To his grace every good thing in us, or done by us, must be ascribed. But disgracing to human nature, as well as dishonouring to God, is the worshipping of idols. And how absurd it is for idolaters to upbraid the saints with their all-present, all-creating, and all-governing. JEHOVAH! Great is their encouragement to trust in a God, who is so much and gives so much to his people; nay, gives so much to men! They can never fail whose faith stands firm. And greatly then should we exert ourselves in praising and serving God here, as in death we shall have no such opportunities for it.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXVI.—Happy are they who love the Lord! They are every moment laid under fresh obligations to this delightful exercise. Prayers heard by God should always make us to love him more, and praise him more. And, if we are in Christ, our troubles may be very sore, but our victory and deliverance are sure and near. Delightful consolation and rest succeed the bitterest tribulations to his saints. And pleasant is that rest which is enjoyed in

PSALM CXVII.

This psalm relates to the gospel church. Here are, (1) A short, but solemn, call to the redeemed of all nations to praise their God; 1. (2) Rich matter of praise suggested; viz. the unbounded mercy and everlasting faithfulness of God; and hence the fulness, kindness, and stability, of his covenant promises, and the accomplishment of them; 2.

O^a PRAISE the LORD, all ye nations: praise him, all ye people.

2^b For his merciful kindness is great toward us; and the truth of the LORD endureth for ever. Praise ye the LORD.

a Saviour's arms, and under the covert of his blood. It is honourable, as well as dutiful, to walk always as under his eye, and in conformity to him; in subjection to his will as our Sovereign, and in dependence on him as our all-sufficient portion. The consideration that we are in the land of the living should quicken us to it. And it is delightful to speak and practise that which our heart believes upon God's testimony, ratified by the blood of his Son. But often, under strong temptations, and in deep afflictions, the strongest believers have had their faith shaken, and have been surprised into thoughts and words extremely dishonourable to God. Yet he upholds them that fall, and makes them quickly to change their voice. And O how pleasant it is to be so overwhelmed with a sense of God's love that we scarcely know what praise, what vows, or what service, to return him in gratitude! But, while we praise him for what we have received, we must eagerly drink more and more of his cup of salvation, and receive more and more out of his fulness, and grace for grace. How precious and delightful to God is the death of his saints for or in the Lord! But much more that unparalleled death of Jesus Christ for the saints, who loosed all our bonds and purchased all our blessings.

PSALM CXVIII.

This psalm was probably composed by David, soon after his advancement to, and settlement on, his throne; [2 Sam. v. viii.] and contains (1) His earnest exhortations to persons of all ranks, offices, and states, to praise the Lord for his everlasting mercy and kindness; 1-4. (2) By a recital of the great and gracious things which God had done for him, he encourages himself and others to trust in God alone; 5-18. (3) His thanksgivings for God's advancement of him to the throne, notwithstanding all opposition, as typical of the exaltation of Jesus Christ; 19-23. (4) His and the priests' and people's triumph in the expected prosperity of his reign, and of the flourishing kingdom of Christ; 24-29.

O ^aGIVE thanks unto the LORD, for he is good; because his mercy endureth for ever.

^bLet Israel now say that his mercy endureth for ever.

^cLet the house of Aaron now say that his mercy endureth for ever.

^dLet them now that fear the LORD say that his mercy endureth for ever.

^eI called upon the LORD ^{*}in distress: the LORD answered me, and set me in a large place.

^fThe LORD is [†]on my side; I will not fear: what can man do unto me?

^gThe LORD taketh my part with them that help me; ^htherefore shall I see my desire upon them that hate me.

ⁱIt is better to trust in the LORD than to put confidence in man.

^kIt is better to trust in the LORD than to put confidence in princes.

^lAll nations compassed me about: but in the name of the LORD will I [†]destroy them.

^mThey compassed me about; yea, they compassed me about: but in the name of the LORD I will destroy them.

ⁿThey compassed me about like bees; they are quenched as the fire of thorns: for in the name of the LORD I will [†]destroy them.

^oThou hast thrust sore at me, that I might fall; but the LORD helped me.

^pThe LORD is my strength and song, and is become my salvation.

^qThe voice of rejoicing and salvation is in the tabernacles of the righteous: ^rthe right hand of the LORD doth valiantly.

^sThe right hand of the LORD is exalted: the right hand of the LORD doth valiantly.

^tI shall not die, but live, and declare the works of the LORD.

^uThe LORD hath chastened me sore: but he hath not given me over unto death.

^vOpen to me the gates of righteousness: I will go into them, and I will praise the LORD:

^wThis gate of the LORD, ^xinto which the righteous shall enter.

^yI will praise thee; for thou hast heard me, and art become my salvation.

^zThe stone which the builders refused is become the head stone of the corner.

^aThis is the LORD's doing; ^bit is marvellous in our eyes.

^cThis is the day which the LORD hath made; we will rejoice and be glad in it.

^dSave now, I beseech thee, O LORD: O LORD, I beseech thee, send now prosperity.

^eBlessed be he that cometh in the name of the LORD: ^fwe have blessed you out of the house of the LORD.

^gGod is the LORD, which hath shewed us light: ^hbind the sacrifice with cords, even unto the horns of the altar.

ⁱThou art my God, and I will praise thee: ^jthou art my God, I will exalt thee.

^kO give thanks unto the LORD, for he is good; for his mercy endureth for ever.

PSALM CXIX.

This psalm is a collection of David's precious thoughts, sorrowful complaints, humble petitions, and holy resolutions; which, it seems, he had written down as they occurred, and which, in the end of his life, he digested into the form in which they now stand, consisting of as many parts as there are letters in the Hebrew alphabet, the eight verses of each always beginning with the same letter in the original. The general scope of it is to magnify God's word, and make it honourable; to inform us of what ever we ought to expect from God in the way of gracious donation; and of whatever he may expect from us in the way of grateful returns of duty; it is represented under ten different characters, one or other of which is to be found in every verse excepting the 122d and 132d: as—God's LAW, because framed and published by him as our Sovereign;—His COMMANDMENTS, because given with authority, and lodged with us as a trust;—His PRECEPTS, because peremptorily prescribed, and not left as a thing indifferent;—His STATUTES, because fixed and determined, and of perpetual obligation;—His WORD, because it is the declaration of his mind, and Christ his essential Word is ALL and IN ALL therein;—His WAY, because it represents Christ, the Way, the Truth, and the Life, and in the rule of our faith and obedience;—His TESTIMONIES, because therein God, upon his word and his oath, declares to men the truths necessary to be known, in order to his honour and their salvation, as ratified in the death of his Son;—His JUDGMENTS, because framed in infinite wisdom, and by which we must both judge and be judged;—but in verses 75, 84, 121, judgment denotes righteous conduct;—it is called his RIGHTEOUSNESS, because it is holy, just, and good, and is the perfect standard of righteousness;—and his TRUTH or FAITHFULNESS, because its leading truths are eternal; and the faithfulness of God is pledged in every point thereof.

ALEPH. Part i.

Here (1) David marks out holy men as the only blessed men; 1-3. (2) Begs that, to his own honour and satisfaction, he may be helped of God to an upright observance of his laws; 4-6. (3) In the faith of God's direction and assistance, he resolves to praise and obey him; 7, 8.

BLESSED ^aare the ^{*}undefiled in the way, who walk in the law of the LORD.

^bBlessed are they that ^bkeep his testimonies, and that ^cseek him with the whole heart.

^dThey also do no iniquity: they walk in his ways.

^eThou hast commanded us to keep thy precepts diligently.

contempt on all created confidences, and disregard all opposition from earth and hell! No wonder they ascribe the glory of all to God; that they ask all from God; that they gratefully dedicate themselves, and all that they have, to his service; and exert all their powers to exalt his honour and spread his renown!—But chiefly let us here behold Jesus, and his sure mercies.—He was made a little lower than the angels, for the suffering of death. Terrible was his distress, innumerable his conflicts with the enemies of our salvation! But, trusting in God, complete was his victory, and glorious his deliverance! Solemn was his ascension into heaven. And, crowned with glory and honour, invested with all power in heaven and on earth, and furnished with all gifts, all blessings, for men, he reigns upon his throne above. Encouraged by these views, let us welcome him into our hearts, families, and churches, and devote ourselves to his service. And, believingly claiming him and his Father as our God, our all in all, let us ever exult in his praise.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXVII.—Thrice happy is the Gentile world when blessed with the fulness of Christ! Behold mercy preached, offered, and given, to us! mercy abounding to the chief of sinners! mercy extending to millions of lost souls, and securing to them everlasting pardon, purity, strength, comfort, and glory! Behold also the unchangeable faithfulness of God, confirmed by his oath and blood, and engaged to make good to us all the promises of his everlasting covenant!

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXVIII.—Animated are the saints' praises to their God, when the mercy, that is in his nature and relation to them, is clearly discerned; the miseries he hath granted are kindly reviewed; and the mercies he hath in store and in promise are firmly believed! No wonder that such invite all around them to sing of his everlasting mercy and grace! No wonder they pour

5 'O that my ways were directed to keep thy statutes!

6 Then shall I not be ashamed, when I have respect unto all thy commandments.

7 I will praise thee with uprightness of heart, when I shall have learned thy righteous judgments.

8 I will keep thy statutes: O forsake me not utterly.

BETH. Part ii.

He (1) Points out the proper method of mortifying lusts, and attaining true holiness; 9. (2) Professes his attachment to God and his word, and supplicates wisdom, direction, and support 10—12. (3) Reflects with satisfaction on his former regard to God's truths and ways; 13, 14: and (4) Resolves to persevere therein; 15, 16.

9 Wherewith shall a young man cleanse his way? by taking heed thereto according to thy word.

10 With my whole heart have I sought thee: O let me not wander from thy commandments.

11 Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee.

12 Blessed art thou, O LORD: teach me thy statutes.

13 With my lips have I declared all the judgments of thy mouth.

14 I have rejoiced in the way of thy testimonies as much as in all riches.

15 I will meditate in thy precepts, and have respect unto thy ways.

16 I will delight myself in thy statutes: I will not forget thy word.

GIMEL. Part iii.

(1) With eagerness and longings of heart, he supplicates divine favour and instruction in God's truths; 17—20. (2) Remarks the just vengeance of God upon such as wander from his ways; 21. (3) Supplicates preservation from reproach, as he observed, meditated on, delighted in, and consulted, God's word in all his conduct; 22—24.

17 Deal bountifully with thy servant, that I may live, and keep thy word.

18 * Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law.

19 I am a stranger in the earth; hide not thy commandments from me.

20 My soul breaketh for the longing that it hath unto thy judgments at all times.

21 Thou hast rebuked the proud that are cursed, which do err from thy commandments.

22 Remove from me reproach and contempt; for I have kept thy testimonies.

23 Princes also did sit and speak against me: but thy servant did meditate in thy statutes.

24 Thy testimonies also are my delight, and my counsellors.

DALETH. Part iv.

He (1) Represents his distress, and his behaviour under it; 25, 28, 29, 30, 31. (2) Supplicates spiritual quickening, instruction, strength, rectitude of sentiment, and honour in the Lord's way; 25—31. (3) Resolves, under the influences of heaven, to be more active in holiness; 32.

25 My soul cleaveth unto the dust: quicken thou me according to thy word.

26 I have declared my ways, and thou heardest me: teach me thy statutes.

27 Make me to understand the way of thy precepts; so shall I talk of thy wondrous works.

28 My soul melteth for heaviness: strengthen thou me according unto thy word.

29 Remove from me the way of lying; and grant me thy law graciously.

30 I have chosen the way of truth: thy judgments have I laid before me.

31 I have stuck unto thy testimonies: O LORD, put me not to shame.

32 I will run the way of thy commandments when thou shalt enlarge my heart.

HE. Part v.

He (1) Prays for divine instructions, sanctifying influences, and quickening grace, for the accomplishment of God's promises to him; and against covetousness, vanity, and reproach; 33—40. (2) Enforces his requests from his holy resolutions; his relation to God; his zeal for his honour; and his regard to his excellent declarations, promises, and precepts; 33, 34, 38, 39, 40.

33 Teach me, O LORD, the way of thy statutes; and I shall keep it unto the end.

34 Give me understanding, and I shall keep thy law; yea, I shall observe it with my whole heart.

35 Make me to go in the path of thy commandments, for therein do I delight.

36 Incline my heart unto thy testimonies, and not to covetousness.

37 * Turn away mine eyes from beholding vanity; and quicken thou me in thy way.

38 Stablish thy word unto thy servant, who is devoted to thy fear.

39 Turn away my reproach which I fear: for thy judgments are good.

40 Behold, I have longed after thy precepts: quicken me in thy righteousness.

VAU. Part vi.

Here are (1) The prayers which he presented to God; 41, 43. (2) The graces which he exercised upon God and his word; faith, hope, love; 42, 43, 47, 48. (3) The practice which he resolved on—through grace, to keep God's law; to seek and cheerfully practise his precepts; boldly to publish his truth to others; and to delight in, meditate on, and zealously reduce them to practice; 44—48.

41 Let thy mercies come also unto me, O LORD, even thy salvation, according to thy word.

42 So shall I have wherewith to answer him that reproacheth me: for I trust in thy word.

43 And take not the word of truth utterly out of my mouth; for I have hoped in thy judgments.

44 So shall I keep thy law continually for ever and ever.

45 And I will walk at liberty: for I seek thy precepts.

46 I will speak of thy testimonies also before kings, and will not be ashamed.

47 And I will delight myself in thy commandments, which I have loved.

48 My hands also will I lift up unto thy commandments, which I have loved; and I will meditate in thy statutes.

ZAIN. Part vii.

Represents (1) The comfort which he had found in God's word; 49, 50, 52, 54. (2) His desire that God would fulfil his promises; 49: and his care to remember, think on, and practise,

cir. 1015.

God's truths; 51, 52, 55, 56. (3) The injurious reproach which he suffered from the wicked; and his abhorrence of their sin, and dread of their punishment; 51, 53.

70 Their heart is as fat as grease; but I delight in thy law.

Before Christ
cir. 1015.

71 It is good for me that I have been afflicted; that I might learn thy statutes.

72 The law of thy mouth is better unto me than thousands of gold and silver.

JOD. Part x.

Contains (1) Thankful acknowledgments of God's kindness in creation, and of his equity and faithfulness in afflicting; 73, 75. (2) Earnest supplications for divine instruction; for fresh discoveries of God's mercy; for the confusion of enemies, and the comfortable fellowship of friends; and for an honourable soundness of heart; 73, 76, 77, 79, 80. (3) Holy joy in the comfort of fellow saints, and especially in God's mercy and word; 74, 76, 77. (4) An holy resolution to meditate on, and cleave to God's testimonies amidst persecution; 78.

73 Thy hands have made me and fashioned me: give me understanding, that I may learn thy commandments.

74 They that fear thee will be glad when they see me, because I have hoped in thy word.

75 I know, O LORD, that thy judgments are right, and that thou in faithfulness hast afflicted me.

76 Let I pray thee, thy merciful kindness be for my comfort, according to thy word unto thy servant.

77 Let thy tender mercies come unto me, that I may live: for thy law is my delight.

78 Let the proud be ashamed, for they dealt perversely with me without a cause; but I will meditate in thy precepts.

79 Let those that fear thee turn unto me, and those that have known thy testimonies.

80 Let my heart be sound in thy statutes, that I be not ashamed.

CAPH. Part xi.

Contains (1) Bitter complaints of great and long distress; 81—87. (2) Ferrent supplications for speedy comfort, help, and quickening; 82, 86, 88. (3) Pleas with which these supplications are enforced; as, that his distress was become insupportable; that his hope was in God's word, and he clave to it in profession and practice; that his life was but short, to have so much of it spent in the furnace of affliction; that the malice and pride of his enemies were excessive; and, in fine, that God's loving-kindness was infinite; 81—88.

81 My soul fainteth for thy salvation: but I hope in thy word.

82 Mine eyes fail for thy word, saying, When wilt thou comfort me?

83 For I am become like a bottle in the smoke; yet do I not forget thy statutes.

84 How many are the days of thy servant? when wilt thou execute judgment on them that persecute me?

85 The proud have digged pits for me, which are not after thy law.

86 All thy commandments are faithful: they persecute me wrongfully; help thou me.

87 They had almost consumed me upon earth; but I forsook not thy precepts.

88 Quicken me after thy loving-kindness; so shall I keep the testimony of thy mouth.

LAMED. Part xii.

Represents (1) The eternity and unchangeableness of God's word and works; 89—91. (2) The advantage of delighting in, and cleaving to, God's truths; 92, 93. (3) God's interest in men a 49 Remember the word unto thy servant, upon which thou hast caused me to hope.

50 This is my comfort in my affliction: for thy word hath quickened me.

51 The proud have had me greatly in derision; yet have I not declined from thy law.

52 I remembered thy judgments of old, O LORD; and have comforted myself.

53 Horror hath taken hold upon me because of the wicked that forsake thy law.

54 Thy statutes have been my songs, in the house of my pilgrimage.

55 I have remembered thy name, O LORD, in the night, and have kept thy law.

56 This I had, because I kept thy precepts.

CHETH. Part viii.

We have here (1) The portion he chose; 57. (2) The purpose he formed; 57. (3) The prayers he offered up for favour, mercy, and instruction; 58—64. (4) The penitential cure he took to obey God's law; 59—61. (5) The complaint which he uttered; 61. (6) His fervent thanksgiving; 62. (7) His choice companions; 63. (8) His deep sense of God's abundant mercy and grace; 64.

57 Thou art my portion, O LORD: I have said that I would keep thy words.

58 I entreated thy favour with my whole heart: be merciful unto me according to thy word.

59 I thought on my ways, and turned my feet unto thy testimonies.

60 I made haste, and delayed not to keep thy commandments.

61 The bands of the wicked have robbed me: but I have not forgotten thy law.

62 At midnight I will rise to give thanks unto thee, because of thy righteous judgments.

63 I am a companion of all them that fear thee, and of them that keep thy precepts.

64 The earth, O LORD, is full of thy mercy: teach me thy statutes.

TETH. Part ix.

Contains (1) Hearty acknowledgments of God's faithfulness and goodness, and of the excellency and usefulness of his word; 65, 68, 72. (2) Humble acknowledgments of the advantage he had received from his afflictions; 67, 71. (3) Complaints of the pride, calumniating reproach, and luxurious stupidity, of wicked men; 69, 70. (4) Supplications for divine instruction; 66, 68. (5) Declarations of his regard to God's word, and resolutions to persevere in the observance of it; 66—72.

65 Thou hast dealt well with thy servant, O LORD, according unto thy word.

66 Teach me good judgment and knowledge; for I have believed thy commandments.

67 Before I was afflicted I went astray; but now have I kept thy word.

68 Thou art good, and dost good; teach me thy statutes.

69 The proud have forged a lie against me: but I will keep thy precepts with my whole heart.

AIN. Part xvi.

Here David (1) Appeals to God as to his integrity and equity; 121. (2) Supplicates that God would protect him against enemies, grant him merciful deliverance and saving instruction, and arise for the maintenance of his own honour; 121—126. (3) Enforces his requests with these pleas—that he was God's servant, and that he could no longer bear up under trouble; 122—125. (4) Professes his superlative regard to God's law and hatred of all iniquity; 127, 128.

TZADDI. Part xviii.

Contains (1) David's celebration of the righteousness of God's nature and work, and of the righteousness, faithfulness, and purity, of his word; 137, 138, 140, 142, 144. (2) His avowed remembrance of, zeal for, and delight in, God's word, notwithstanding much contempt and trouble suffered on account of his adherence to it; 139—143. (3) His fervent prayer for spiritual instruction; 144.

137 ^aRighteous art thou, O LORD, and upright are thy judgments.138 ^bThy testimonies that thou hast commanded are *righteous and very faithful.139 ^cMy zeal hath [†]consumed me; because mine enemies have forgotten thy words.140 Thy word is very ^dpure; therefore thy servant loveth it.141 ^eI am small and despised; yet do not I forget thy precepts.142 ^fThy righteousness is an everlasting righteousness, ^gand thy law is the truth.143 ^hTrouble and anguish have taken hold on me: yet ^kthy commandments are my delights.144 ⁱThe righteousness of thy testimonies is everlasting: ^mgive me understanding, and I shall live.

KOPH. Part xix.

Contains (1) David's importunate supplications for gracious audience, necessary salvation, and quickening influence; 145—147, 149. (2) His hopes in, and meditations on, God's word, as perfectly true and perpetually stable; 147, 148, 151, 152. (3) In danger from wicked men, he flees to God for relief; 149—151.

145 ^aI cried with my whole heart; hear me, O LORD; ^bI will keep thy statutes.146 I cried unto thee; save me, *and I shall keep thy testimonies.147 ^cI prevented the dawning of the morning, and cried: I hoped in thy word.148 ^dMine eyes prevent the night watches, that I might meditate in thy word.149 ^eHear my voice according unto thy loving-kindness: O LORD, ^fquicken me according to thy judgment.150 ^gThey draw nigh that follow after mischievous: they ^hare far from thy law.151 ⁱThou art near, O LORD; and all thy commandments are truth.152 Concerning thy testimonies, I have known of old ^jthat thou hast founded them for ever.

RESCH. Part xx.

Contains (1) David's cries to God that he would consider his affliction, plead his cause, deliver him, and quicken his soul; 153, 154, 156, 159. (2) His adherence to, love for, and high esteem of, God's word; 153, 154, 157, 159, 160. (3) His description of the character and misery of the wicked; 155, 157, 158.

153 ^aConsider mine affliction, and deliver me: for I do not forget thy law.154 ^bPlead my cause, and deliver me:
^cquicken me according to thy word.155 ^dSalvation is far from the wicked;
for they seek not thy statutes.156 ^e* Great are thy tender mercies, O LORD: ^fquicken me according to thy judgments.157 ^gMany are my persecutors and mine enemies; yet ^hdo I not decline from thy testimonies.158 ⁱI beheld the transgressors, and was grieved; because they kept not thy word.159 ^kConsider how I love thy precepts: ^lquicken me, O LORD, according to thy loving-kindness.160 ^m† Thy word is true from the beginning: ⁿand every one of thy righteous judgments endureth for ever.

SCHIN. Part xxi.

Here (1) David complains to God of persecution from princes; 161. (2) Professes his holy awe of, his delight in, his love to, and careful observance of, God's testimonies, and his utter detestation of falsehood; 161—168. (3) Avows his persuasion of the happiness of the godly, and his own hopes of God's salvation; 165, 166.

161 ^aPrinces have persecuted me without a cause: but my heart ^bstandeth in awe of thy word.162 ^cI rejoice at thy word as one that findeth great spoil.163 ^dI hate and abhor lying; ^ebut thy law do I love.164 ^fSeven times a day do I praise thee, because of thy righteous judgments.165 ^gGreat peace have they who love thy law; and ^h*nothing shall offend them.166 LORD, ⁱI have hoped for thy salvation, and done thy commandments.167 ^jMy soul hath kept thy testimonies; and I love them exceedingly.168 I have kept thy precepts and thy testimonies; for all my ways are ^kbefore thee.

TAU. Part xxii.

Here are (1) David's prayers for access to God, and for instruction, deliverance, help, and recovery, from God; 169, 170, 173, 175, 176. (2) Heartly professions of his regard to God's word, and to the salvation therein contained; 169—176. (3) His humble confession of his wandering from God, and desire to be brought back; 176.

169 ^aLet my cry come near before thee, O LORD: ^bgive me understanding according to thy word.170 Let my supplication come before thee: deliver me according to thy word.171 ^cMy lips shall utter praise when thou hast taught me thy statutes.172 ^dMy tongue shall speak of thy word; ^efor all thy commandments are righteousness.173 ^fLet thine hand help me; for ^gI have chosen thy precepts.174 ^hI have longed for thy salvation, O LORD; ⁱand thy law is my delight.175 ^jLet my soul live, and it shall praise thee; and let thy judgments ^khelp me.176 ^mI have gone astray like a lost

PSALM CXX.

Why this psalm, and the fourteen following, are called Songs of Degrees, we do not certainly know. It is plain that some of them are suited to secret worship, some to the family, and others to the public assembly. This psalm, from its affinity to the 52d, is supposed to refer to Doeg the Edomite; [1 Sam. xxii.] We have (1) The psalmist's prayer to God for deliverance from the ruinous influence of malicious and false accusations; 1, 2. (2) His denunciation of the just, fearful, and lasting, judgments of God against his malicious accusers; 3, 4. (3) His complaints of his quarrelsome and vexatious neighbours; 5—7.

^a A song of degrees.

IN my distress I cried unto the LORD, and he heard me.

2 Deliver my soul, O LORD, from lying lips, and from a deceitful tongue.

3 *What shall be given unto thee, or what shall be done unto thee, thou false tongue?

4 †Sharp arrows of the mighty, with coals of juniper.

5 ^eWo is me, that I sojourn in Me-sech, that I dwell in the tents of Kedar!

6 My soul hath long dwelt with him that hateth peace.

7 I am || for peace: ^ebut when I speak they are for war.

PSALM CXXI.

Here, (1) In the firm faith of being heard, David supplicates divine help and protection; 1, 2. (2) He comforts himself and others with the assurance of God's infallible direction and protection; 3—8.

^a A song of degrees.

I* WILL lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help.

2 My help cometh from the LORD, who made heaven and earth.

3 He will not suffer thy foot to be moved: he that keepeth thee will not slumber.

4 Behold, he that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep.

5 The LORD is thy keeper: the LORD is thy shade upon thy right hand.

6 ^eThe sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night.

7 ^eThe LORD shall preserve thee from all evil: he shall preserve thy soul.

8 ⁱThe LORD shall preserve thy going out, and thy coming in, from this time forth and even for evermore.

PSALM CXXII.

This psalm appears to have been composed for the use of the Hebrews at their three solemn feasts; [Lev. xxiii.] We have in it (1) Expressions of great joy in going up to Jerusalem; 1, 2. (2) High commendations of the beauty, order, sanctity, and honour, of Jerusalem; 3—5. (3) The duty and happiness of such as are really concerned for the welfare of Jerusalem, the church of God; 6—9.

^a A song of degrees of David.

I^b WAS glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the LORD.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXIX.—Let this psalm be a touchstone, by which I may try my heart and my life. Let me constantly inquire—Are these gracious tempers and holy exercises of faith, love, hope, humility, patience, and zeal, to be found in my soul? Has my heart, purged from an evil conscience in Jesus' blood, made these meditations, prayers, resolutions, and confessions, truly my own? Is God's word, his testaments in Jesus' blood, the sole standard of all my faith and law of my practice? Is it the channel of Jesus' fullness of grace and comfort to my heart? Is it the instructor, the counsellor, the quickener, the medicine, the armour, the treasury, the wealth, the support, the guard, the joy, and the ALL, of my soul?—do I receive it as a word to me from God, and use it as my plea with him for whatever I need? Happy is he that is thus living in these delightful exercises.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXX.—Inveterate malice against the saints never refuses the basest means of venting itself: and it is the saints' ordinary lot to be virulently reproached by the wicked. But dreadful, penetrating, destructive, furious, and lasting, is the ruin of their reproachers at last! It is grievous for the lovers of God to be long removed from public ordinances, or to be forced by necessity into continued connections with the wicked. But every one born of God ought to be a child of peace. Envy and strife are all from hell. And, though

2 Our feet shall stand within thy gates, O Jerusalem.

3 Jerusalem is builded as a city that is compact together:

4 Whither the tribes go up, the tribes of the LORD, unto the testimony of Israel, to give thanks unto the name of the LORD.

5 For there ^{*}are set ^bthrones of judgment; the thrones of the house of David.

6 Pray for the peace of Jerusalem: they shall prosper that love thee.

7 Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity within thy palaces.

8 For my brethren and companions' sakes, I will now say, Peace be within thee.

9 Because of the house of the LORD our God I will seek thy good.

PSALM CXXIII.

This psalm relates to the distressed condition of the church; and contains (1) Earnest longings for, and believing expectations of, merciful deliverances from God; 1, 2. (2) An improvement of great distress as a plea for speedy and remarkable relief; 3, 4.

^a A song of degrees.

UNTO thee lift I up mine eyes, O thou that dwellest in the heavens.

2 Behold, as the eyes of servants look unto the hand of their masters, and as the eyes of a maiden unto the hand of her mistress; so our eyes wait upon the LORD our God, until that he have mercy upon us.

3 Have mercy upon us, O LORD, have mercy upon us; for we are exceedingly filled with contempt.

4 Our soul is exceedingly filled with the scorning of those that are at ease, and with the contempt of the proud.

PSALM CXXIV.

This psalm is highly applicable to every remarkable deliverance which God works for his church, especially to the great redemption wrought for his people by Christ. In it (1) David represents the great danger they were in; 1—5. (2) Ascribes the glory of their deliverance to God; 1, 2, 6, 7. (3) Improves the deliverance as an encouragement to trust in God; 8.

^a A song of degrees of David.

If it had not been the LORD who was on our side, now may Israel say;

2 If it had not been the LORD who was on our side, when men rose up against us;

3 Then they had swallowed us up quick, when their wrath was kindled against us:

4 Then the waters had overwhelmed us, the stream had gone over our soul:

5 Then the proud waters had gone over our soul.

others continue inveterate, we ought to abound in charity, and follow the things which make for peace.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXXI.—In every difficulty our eyes ought to be fixed on God, in his temple, his Christ, his heaven, as the author of our help, protection, and deliverance. He is a sure refuge to them who flee to him; and with him nothing is impossible. In him nothing good can be wanting, no direction, no preservation; and in him no troubles can hurt us.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXXII.—They who love God himself cannot but delight to draw near unto him in the ordinances of his worship; cannot but love his church, and be earnestly concerned in prayer and in practice for her real welfare. From regard to the saints, who are therein begotten and nourished up to eternal life, and especially from regard to the honour of her God, they will constantly seek her good.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXXIII.—In what a humble, resigned, and obedient, temper, and with what earnestness, ought we to look up to God for help and deliverance. While his great mercy encourages us, our great contempt and trouble should drive us to his throne of grace, and oblige us to wait upon him till he grant our requests.

PSALM CXXV.

Represents (1) The happiness of the saints in the fixedness of their new covenant state; the safety of their condition; the seasonableness of their deliverances; and the advantage of effectual fervent prayers in their behalf; 1—4. (2) The misery of the wicked, particularly of apostates from the ways of God; 5.

^a A song of degrees.

THEY ^b that trust in the LORD shall be as mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth for ever.

2 ^c As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the LORD is round about his people from henceforth even for ever.

3 ^d For the rod of ^{*} the wicked shall not rest upon the lot of the righteous: lest the righteous put forth their hands unto iniquity.

4 ^e Do good, O LORD, unto those that be good, and to them that are upright in their hearts.

5 ^f As for such as turn aside unto their crooked ways, the LORD shall lead them forth with the workers of iniquity: ^g but peace shall be upon Israel.

PSALM CXXVI.

This psalm relates to some remarkable deliverance of the Jewish church, perhaps from Babylon, as typical of those of the gospel church; and (1) Represents great admiration of, and thankfulness for, the deliverance; 1—3. (2) Contains prayers for, and encouragements of, saints exercised with tribulation; 4—6.

^a A song of degrees.

PSALM CXXVII.

This psalm relates to David's orders for building the temple; [1 Chron. xxii. xxviii.] or to Solomon's actual building of it; [2 Chron. ii—vi.] It teaches us constant dependance upon God in all our concerns; particularly (1) In prospering our under-

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXXIV.—How furiously the enemies of the church rage against her, and threaten to carry all before them! But power and policy in vain unite to destroy the souls which God will save. And, when we are in appearance nearest to be overcome and perish, then shall we be made more eminently to experience the salvation of God.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXXV.—Happy are they who trust in the Lord! Immoveable is their new covenant state. They are established, guarded, and protected, by God; and, in performance of his promise, he will supply them with every thing good. But dreadful and lasting is their misery who apostatise from him to the paths of wickedness!

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXXVI.—God's church is often in great tribulation for a time: and no deliverance comes till God himself effect it. Noted deliverance make observers to wonder, and saints to rejoice. But, the more his

2 ^b It is vain for you to ^c rise up early, to sit up late, to eat ^d the bread of sorrows: ^e for ^f so he giveth his beloved sleep.

4 ^h As arrows are in the hand of a mighty man, so are children of the youth.

5 ⁱ Happy is the man that [†] hath his quiver full of them: they shall not be ashamed, but they ^k shall speak with the enemies in the gate.

PSALM CXXVIII.

This psalm exhibits (1) The comprehensive duty of all, particularly married persons; 1. (2) The advantage of studying it; viz. success in employments; comfort and honour in relations; joy in the prosperity of God's church, and of their own offspring; 2—6.

^a A song of degrees.

BLESSED ^b is every one that feareth the LORD; that walketh in his ways.

2 ^c For thou shalt eat the labour of thine hands: ^d happy shalt thou be, and it shall be well with thee.

3 ^e Thy wife shall be as a fruitful vine by the sides of thine house: thy children like olive-plants round about thy table.

5 ^f The LORD shall bless thee out of Zion: and thou shalt see ^g the good of Jerusalem all the days of thy life.

6 Yea, ^h thou shalt see thy children's children, and peace upon Israel.

PSALM CXXIX.

Whether this psalm was penned when David brought up the ark of God to Mount Zion, [2 Sam. vi.] or relates to the Chaldean captivity, is uncertain. In it the people of God (1) Look back on their often-repeated tribulations, with thankfulness to God for their deliverances from Egypt, and from their oppressors under the Judges, Saul, &c. 1—4. (2) They look forward with a believing prayer for, and prospect of, the destruction of all their implacable enemies; 5—8.

^a A song of degrees.

2 Many a time have they afflicted me from my youth: yet ^d they have not prevailed against me.

3 The ^e plowers plowed upon my back: they made long their furrows.

4 ^f The LORD is righteous: he hath cut asunder the cords of the wicked.

people are now exercised in spiritual mourning, the more remarkable shall be their fruits of holiness and joy.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXXVII.—The less we depend upon our own schemes, or lean to our own understanding, and the more we look up to God for help and direction, the better shall we prosper. The most prudent projects and plans, the most anxious cares, and the most toilsome labours, are all to no purpose without God's blessing. But happy in their rest, and happier in their dutiful children, are they whom he blesses.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXXVIII.—How excellent and profitable is real and experimental godliness, issuing in a holy practice! It draws the blessing of God upon our labours, our families, on the church of God, and on our posterity.

PSALM CXXX.

This psalm contains (1) David's earnest cries to God out of the depths of corruption, desertion, temptation, or trouble; 1, 2. (2) His ingenuous repentance in the faith of God's merciful forgiveness; 3, 4. (3) His attentive waiting on God for his favours; 5, 6. (4) His encouraging expectations from God; 7, 8.

PSALM CXXXI.

This psalm contains (1) David's humble profession of his contentment with his lot; 1, 2. (2) His warm encouragement of others to a constant dependance upon God; 3.

^a A song of degrees of David.

PSALM CXXXII.

Whether this psalm was penned by David when he brought up the ark of God from Kirjath-jearim, [2 Sam. vi.] or for Solomon's dedication of the temple, [1 Kings viii.] is uncertain. It con-

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXXXIX.—In every age the seed of the serpent has raged in enmity against Jesus Christ and his church. There is no going honourably to heaven but through great tribulation. But, let the wicked lay their plots and execute them as they will, God will deliver his people at his pleasure; and his enemies shall plunge themselves at last into the most dreadful disappointment and ruin. The curse of God shall blast them, with all their schemes and attempts.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXXX.—In the most fearful manner God often corrects his own children in their way to his kingdom. But, while there is a praying heart within them, and a prayer-hearing God above them, there is no ground of despair. Sense of guilt is the first thing that strikes the mind of a convicted sinner; and, did not God manifest his forgiving mercy, it would drive him to despair. But the faith of God's forgiving our sins for Christ's sake begets a holy awe of, regard to, and earnest waiting for, him. And, the more we taste of God's forgiving and redeeming goodness, the more shall we encourage others to flee to him, and hope in him, in the time of great guilt and trouble. And only God is ready to, but he certainly will, accomplish the perfect redemption of all his people from sin and all its consequences.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXXXI.—Humility is the ornament of every sta-tains (1) A representation of David's pious and earnest care to provide a proper lodging for God's ark; 1—7. (2) Earnest prayers for God's presence and blessings to attend his ark; 8—10. (3) David's care to provide an habitation for God: and God's promises to David, relating to the prosperity and establishment of his family, especially in the Messiah, are pleaded as arguments to enforce these requests; 1—5, 10—18.

^a A song of degrees.

LORD, ^bremember David, and all his afflictions:

2 ^cHow he swore unto the LORD, and vowed unto ^dthe mighty God of Jacob;

3 Surely ^eI will not come into the tabernacle of my house, nor go up into my bed;

4 I will not give sleep to mine eyes, or slumber to mine eyelids,

5 Until I find out ^fa place for the LORD, ^gan habitation for the mighty God of Jacob.

6 Lo, we heard of it at ^hEphratah: we found it in the fields of the wood.

7 ⁱWe will go into his tabernacles: we will worship at his footstool.

8 ^jArise, O LORD, into thy rest; thou, and the ark of thy strength.

9 ^kLet thy priests be clothed with righteousness; and let thy saints shout for joy.

10 ^lFor thy servant David's sake, turn not away the face of thine anointed.

11 ^mThe LORD hath sworn in truth unto David; he will not turn from it; ⁿOf the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne.

12 ^oIf thy children will keep my covenant and my testimony that I shall teach them, their children also shall sit upon thy throne for evermore.

13 ^pFor the LORD hath chosen Zion; he hath desired it for his habitation.

14 ^qThis is my rest for ever: here will I dwell; for I have desired it.

15 ^rI will abundantly bless her provision: I will satisfy her poor with bread.

16 ^sI will also clothe her priests with salvation: and her saints shall shout aloud for joy.

17 ^tThere will I make the horn of David to bud: I have ordained a ^ulamp for mine anointed.

18 ^vHis enemies will I clothe with shame; but upon himself shall his crown flourish.

PSALM CXXXIII.

This psalm was perhaps penned when the Hebrew tribes concurred to fix David on his throne, or to restore him to it; [2 Sam. v. or xix.] Here is (1) A declaration of the excellency and pleasantness of brotherly affection; 1. (2) The illustration of this in two similitudes; 2, 3. (3) The great advantage of it; 3.

tion. A child-like spirit, meek and weaned from the things of this world, is a good symptom of a gracious heart. But to wade out of our depth, either in religion, learning, or power, is dangerous. And proud looks shew a proud heart. If we are in trouble, let us patiently hope and wait till God bring us out of it. They who hope in Jesus Christ, and wait for his salvation, shall partake of it in time and in eternity.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXXXII.—Great is the mercy to have fervent prayers of our own, or of our ancestors, lying before God's throne of grace. They shall receive a gracious answer at last. Lively and zealous saints can never be at ease till the ordinances of God be regularly and honourably settled, and his presence vouchsafed, to the comfort and edification of both ministers and people. However meanly the ark of God, or even Jesus Christ himself, reside for a time, its dwelling shall at last, and for ever, be glorious. Multitudes shall flock to it; and great fellowship with God shall be there enjoyed. Happy was David's family and kingdom on Christ's account; but infinitely happier in this is the family and church of God. In virtue of JEHOVAH's new covenant with him, his people are blessed with his presence, and with spiritual dignity, provision, salvation, and joy;—while Jesus himself triumphs in everlasting honours, and his enemies are reduced to disappointment, misery, and shame.

PSALM CXXXIV.

This psalm was perhaps penned when David appointed the orders of the priests and Levites; [1 Chron. xxiii—xxvi.] In it we have (1) The sacred watches of the temple stirred up to employ their time in praising God; 1, 2. (2) A fervent prayer for the blessing of God on them or on others; 3.

* A song of degrees.

PSALM CXXXV.

This psalm contains (1) Earnest exhortations to all concerned to praise the Lord; 1—3, 19—21. (2) Rich matter for praise: God considered as the God of Israel; 4: As the God of gods; 5: As the God of the whole world; 6, 7: As the God terrible to the enemies of Israel; 8—11: but kind to Israel; 12—14: And as the only true and living God, before whom all others are but vanity and falsehood; 15—18.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXXXIII.—Scarcely any thing more ruinous hath befallen the church of God than the manifold divisions, disputes, and animosities, of her members. Since God's children have one Father, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, they ought to have one heart and mind; to be united in the same worship, and affectionate in their regards to, bearing with, forbearing, and forgiving, one another; and only jealous who shall shew the most abundant meekness, charity, and kindness, to each other: this would mark them as anointed by the Spirit of Christ; would be refreshing and fructifying to their hearts and lives; and prepare them for the eternal life and blessedness above.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXXXIV.—How constant and active ought ministers to be in their service of Christ and his church! how remarkably given 20 Bless the LORD, O house of Levi: ye that fear the LORD, bless the LORD.

21 ^sBlessed be the LORD out of Zion, who dwelleth at Jerusalem. Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CXXXVI.

This psalm is a continued exhortation to praise the Lord for the perpetual displays of his mercy. The hearty singing of it has been honoured with the most signal appearances of God's kindness; [2 Chron. v. 13. and xx. 21, 22.] We are in it directed to praise God, (1) As great and good in himself; 1—3. (2) As the Creator of all things; 5—9. (3) As the God and Saviour of Israel, who brought them out of Egypt through the Red sea and wilderness, cast out the nations, and gave them the possession of Canaan; 10—22. (4) As our gracious and condescending Redeemer; 23, 24. (5) As the great and sovereign Benefactor of all creatures; 25, 26.

O ^aGIVE thanks unto the LORD, for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

2 O give thanks unto the ^bGod of gods: for his mercy endureth for ever.

3 O give thanks to the ^cLord of lords: for his mercy endureth for ever.

4 To him ^dwho alone doth great wonders: for his mercy endureth for ever.

5 ^eTo him that by wisdom made the heavens: for his mercy endureth for ever.

6 ^fTo him that stretched out the earth above the waters: for his mercy endureth for ever.

7 ^gTo him that made great lights: for his mercy endureth for ever.

9 The moon and stars to rule by night: for his mercy endureth for ever:

10 ⁱTo him that smote Egypt in their first-born: for his mercy endureth for ever.

11 ^jAnd brought out Israel from among them: for his mercy endureth for ever:

to prayer and praise! And, the more men wait upon God, the more they shall find the blessedness of his service. But it is only as enthroned in Zion, in his temple, in Christ, and his church, that God bestows his salvation.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXXXV.—The people of God should be always exercised in the most solid, extensive, and lasting, joys. Every thing in God's purpose, covenant, nature, and works, is a delightful ground thereof. And the more he is to us, or does for us, and the more we are related to him, or trust in him, the more we ought to abound in his praise. Our view of the base and insignificant idols of others, and of the stupidity of their votaries, should stir us up the more to trust in, admire, and praise, our God of unbounded perfection.

PSALM CXXXVII.

This psalm was probably composed in Chaldea during the captivity, and contains (1) The Jews grievous bewailing of their distress; contempt, and reproach; 1—4. (2) Their tender and affectionate remembrance of, and concern for, Jerusalem—the church and ordinances of God; 5, 6. (3) Denunciations of destruction to the Edomites, who had promoted, and the Chaldeans, who had effected, their distress and captivity; 7—9.

B^y the rivers of Babylon, there we ^bsat down, yea, we wept, when ^cwe remembered Zion.

2 ^dWe hanged our harps upon the willows in the midst thereof.

3 ^eFor there they that carried us away captive required of us ^aa song: and they that [†]wasted us ^{required of us} mirth, saying, Sing us one of the songs of Zion.

4 ^fHow shall we sing the LORD's song in a [†]strange land?

5 ^gIf I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget ^{her} cunning.

6 If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth:

if I prefer not Jerusalem above ^{||}my chief joy.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXXXVI.—Alas! how averse are mankind to the infinitely reasonable and delightful duty of praise and thanksgiving! They need repeated calls to it, even after it has been attended with remarkable blessings. God's mercy and goodness delightfully fill his nature and works, the most awful and tremendous not excepted. And stupid and careless observers must they be of creatures and events, who do not every where perceive the manifold and everlasting mercy and kindness of God. Past mercies ought never to be forgotten, nor present ones overlooked; and all should issue in repeated returns of grateful praise.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXXXVII.—The sins of God's people often reduce them to great misery on earth. They are often taught the worth of ordinances by the want of them; and their temple songs are turned into howlings and grief. But cruel are the tender mercies of the wicked to God's suffering saints. And it is base and blasphemous to insult them with their worshipping of God. Sacred songs ill suit the call or company of profane scoffers. That which is holy ought not to be given to dogs, nor pearls cast before swine. The interests of Jesus' church and kingdom must ever be dearer to us than our life: and, if duty be once clear, nothing must deter us from it. Not selfish revenge, but 7 ^hRemember, O LORD, ⁱthe children of Edom in the day of Jerusalem; who said, ^{*}Rase it, rase it, even to the foundation thereof.

8 O daughter of Babylon, ^kwho art to be [†]destroyed; happy shall he be [†]that rewardeth thee as thou hast served us.

9 Happy shall he be that taketh and [†]dasheth thy little ones against ^{||}the stones.

PSALM CXXXVIII.

This psalm was perhaps composed by David when he was newly advanced to his throne; [2 Sam. v.; 1 Chron. xii.] In it (1) He looks back with thankfulness upon the experience which he had of God's goodness to him; 1—3. (2) He looks forward with comfort, in hopes, 1st, That others would go on to praise God like him; 4, 5: 2d, That God would continue to do good to him; 6—8.

A psalm of David.

I^a WILL praise thee with my whole heart; ^bbefore the gods will I sing praise unto thee.

2 ^cI will worship toward thy holy temple, ^dand praise thy name for thy loving-kindness and for thy truth: for ^ethou hast magnified thy word above all thy name.

3 ^fIn the day when I cried thou answeredst me, and ^gstrengthenedst me with strength in my soul.

4 ^hAll the kings of the earth shall praise thee, O LORD, when they hear the words of thy mouth.

5 Yea, they shall sing in the ways of the LORD: for ⁱgreat is the glory of the LORD.

6 ^kThough the LORD ^{be} high, yet hath he respect unto the lowly: but the proud he knoweth afar off.

7 Though I walk in the midst ^lof trouble, thou wilt revive me: thou shalt stretch forth thine hand against the wrath of mine enemies, and thy right hand shall save me.

8 ^mThe LORD will perfect ^{that which} concerneth me: ⁿthy mercy, O LORD, endureth for ever: ^oforsake not the works of thine own hands.

PSALM CXXXIX.

This psalm was probably penned by David while he was loaded with some vile reproaches; and contains (1) His celebration of 1. The omniscient knowledge; 1—6: 2. The omnipresence; 7—12: And 3. The creating kindness, of God; 13—16. (2) His improvement of these, 1. In devout meditation on God; 17, 18. 2. In detestation of wicked men; 19—22: 3. In solemn profession of his uprightness before God; 23, 24.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

O LORD, ^athou hast searched me, and ^bknown me.

2 Thou knowest my ^bdown-sitting, and mine up-rising: ^cthou understandest my thought afar off.

holy zeal, must dictate our requests for the destruction of the church's enemies. Malicious and inhuman is their wickedness, and tremendous and correspondent is the punishment of it!

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXXXVIII.—The greatest on earth need not be ashamed of the public and regular worship of God. And the more he manifests his loving kindness and faithfulness in the fulfilment of his word to us, the more high and hearty ought to be our notes of praise. If we trust to his truth, he will display every perfection, and make every creature to work together for the glorious accomplishment of his word. If we flee to God in prayer he will not leave us destitute. And if he, by our afflictions, strengthen us inwardly in our souls, we are great gainers. The cheerful behaviour of saints in the ways of God engages their neighbours to join with them in it. And the more humble men are, the more God regards and exalts them. And nothing is more detestable to him than indulged pride. Whatever trouble God casts his people into, he will protect and preserve them in it. And the good works of grace or salvation, which he begins, he will perfect at last. He will never leave nor forsake his own. Let us then trust in him at all times, and pour out our hearts before him.

about me.

12 Yea, the darkness [†]hideth not from thee; but the night shineth as the day:
the darkness and the light are both alike to thee.

13 For ⁿthou hast possessed my reins:
thou hast covered me in my mother's womb.

14 I will praise thee; for 'I am fearfully and wonderfully made: ^pmarvellous are thy works; and that my soul knoweth || right well.

15 ^qMy *substance was not hid from thee when I was made in 'secret, and curiously wrought in the lowest parts of the earth.

16 Thine eyes did see my substance, yet being unperfect; and in thy book [†]all my members were written, [†]which in continuance were fashioned 'when as yet there was none of them.

17 'How precious also are thy thoughts unto me, O God! how great is the sum of them!

18 If I should count them, they are more in number than the sand: "when I awake I am still with thee.

19 'Surely thou wilt slay the wicked,
O God: 'depart from me therefore, ye bloody men.

20 'For they speak against thee wickedly, and thine enemies take thy name in vain.

21 'Do not I hate them, O LORD, that hate thee? and am not I grieved with those that rise up against thee?

22 I hate them with perfect hatred:
I count them mine enemies.

23 ^bSearch me, O God, and know my heart: try me, and know my thoughts;

24 'And see if there be any || wicked way in me, and lead me in ^dthe way everlasting.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXXXIX.—In the faith of these things let me always live, and always act, whether in religious or in civil affairs, under the deepest impressions of God's eyes, upon me, his perfect knowledge of my heart, my thoughts, and deeds; of his all-filling presence ever with me, to witness, support, or comfort me; of his marvellous formation of me in nature and grace; of his new covenant marriage to me, and his everlasting redemption of my soul. Let my whole life, night and day, be filled up with precious, fixed, and delightful, thoughts concerning these things, and with holy improvements of them. Let me never make the Lord's enemies my intimates. They who hate God, hate his name and image wherever it appears. Let me therefore hate the ways of sinners while I have true love and pity to their souls. And let a thorough

PSALM CXL.

This psalm was probably penned by David when persecuted by Saul; and perhaps partly relates to Doeg the Edomite: [as Psalm lii. and cxx.] In it (1) David complains of the malice of his enemies, and supplicates God's preservation from them; 1—5.
(2) He encourages himself in God as his God; 6, 7. (3) He prays for, and prophesies the destruction of, all his enemies; 8—11. (4) He assures himself, and other saints, that all their troubles should end happily; 12, 13.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

DELIVER ^ame, O LORD, from the evil man: preserve me from the ^bviolent man:

2 'Who imagine mischiefs in their heart: continually are they gathered together for war.

3 ^dThey have sharpened their tongues like a serpent: adders' poison is under their lips. Selah.

4 'Keep me, O LORD, from the hands of the wicked; preserve me from the violent man; who have purposed to overthrow my goings.

5 'The proud have hid a snare for me, and cords; they have spread a net by the way-side; they have set gins for me.
Selah.

6 ^eI said unto the LORD, Thou art my God: hear the voice of my supplications, O LORD.

7 O God the LORD, ^hthe strength of my salvation, thou hast covered my head in the day of battle.

8 ⁱGrant not, O LORD, the desires of the wicked; further not his wicked device, ^klest they exalt themselves. Selah.

9 'As for the head of those that compass me about, let the mischief of their own lips cover them.

10 ^mLet burning coals fall upon them: let them be cast into the fire; into ⁿdeep pits, that they rise not up again.

11 Let not ^o*an evil speaker be established in the earth: evil shall hunt the violent man to overthrow him.

12 I know ^pthat the LORD will maintain the cause of the afflicted and the right of the poor.

13 Surely ^qthe righteous shall give thanks unto thy name: the upright shall ^rdwell in thy presence.

PSALM CLXI.

This psalm was likewise composed under distress and persecution.
In it David prays (1) For God's kind acceptance of his prayers;
1, 2. (2) For his powerful assistance in keeping his tongue, his heart, and hand, in the way of duty; 3, 4. (3) That others might be helpful to him with their reasonable reproofs, and he to them with his prayers; 5, 6. (4) That, when he and his friends were brought to the last extremity, God would graciously appear for their relief; 7—10.

A psalm of David.

LORD, ^aI cry unto thee, make haste unto me; give ear unto my voice
when I cry unto thee.

2 Let my prayer be *set forth before cleansing from sin, and progress in holiness, be the earnest desire and ineffable delight of my soul.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXL.—Behold, as in a glass, how maliciously Jesus Christ was reproached and persecuted; how he gave himself to prayer on account of it; and how the vengeance of God overtook his Jewish murderers and persecutors! Let us likewise observe that sin turns men into a kind of devils, in deceit, malice, and diligence in evil, and in inveterate opposition to the people of God. But the saints may attain, even amidst their troubles, to the most pleasant prayers and praises; for God terribly resents the injuries done to his people; and kindly will he maintain their cause, and for their protection afford them his presence.

PSALM CXLII.

This psalm was framed by David when obliged, by Saul's persecution, to hide himself in a cave; [1 Sam. xxii. 1; or xxiv. 3.]
and contains (1) Bitter complaints of the subtlety, strength, and malice, of his enemies, and of the coldness and indifference of his friends; 1—4, 6. (2) The comfort he took in God's knowing his way, and in recognizing his claim to God as his portion; 3—5.
(3) His pleasant expectations that God would deliver him, and that his fellow saints would join with him in thanksgiving for his deliverance; 6, 7.

Maschil of David; a prayer when he was ^bin the cave.I ^cCRIED unto the LORD with my voice: with my voice unto the LORD did I make my supplication.2 ^dI poured out my complaint before him; I shewed before him my trouble.3 ^eWhen my spirit was overwhelmed within me, then thou knewest my path.
In the way wherein I walked ^fhave they privily laid a snare for me.4 ^g* I looked on my right hand, and beheld, ^hbut there was no man that would know me: refuge ⁱfailed me; ^jno man cared for my soul.5 ^kI cried unto thee, O LORD: I said, Thou art my refuge and ^lmy portion in the land of the living.6 Attend unto my cry; for ^mI am brought very low: ⁿdeliver me from my persecutors, for they are stronger than I.7 ^oBring my soul out of prison, that I may praise thy name: ^pthe righteousshall compass me about; for thou shalt ^qdeal bountifully with me.

PSALM CXLIII.

This psalm was probably penned by David during the unnatural rebellion of his son Absalom; [as Psal. iii. xlii. xliii.] It contains
(1) Sad complaints of trouble, and of the sinking of his spirit under it; 3—5, 7. (2) Fervent supplications that God would hear prayer; 1, 7: forgive his sins; 2: manifest his favours;
6—8: direct him in the way of duty; 8—10: quicken him in it; 11: deliver him out of trouble; 9, 11: and, in fine, punish his persecutors; 12.

A psalm of David.

HEAR ^amy prayer, O LORD; give ear to my supplications: ^bin thy faithfulness answer me, and in thy righteousness.2 ^cAnd enter not into judgment with thy servant: for ^din thy sight shall no man living be justified.3 ^eFor the enemy hath persecuted my soul; he hath smitten my life down to the ground; he hath made me to dwell in darkness, as those that have been long dead.4 ^fTherefore is my spirit overwhelmed within me; my heart within me is desolate.5 ^gI remember the days of old: I meditate on all thy works; I muse on the work of thy hands.6 I ^hstretch forth my hands unto thee:
ⁱmy soul thirsteth after thee as a thirsty land. Selah.7 ^kHear me speedily, O LORD; my spirit faileth: hide not thy face from me, ^l*lest I be like unto them that go down into the pit.8 ^mCause me to hear thy loving-kindness in the morning; for in thee do I trust: ⁿcause me to know the way wherein I should walk; ^ofor I lift up my soul unto thee.9 ^pDeliver me, O LORD, from mine enemies: ^qI ^rflee unto thee to hide me.10 ^sTeach me to do thy will; for thou art my God: ^tthy spirit is good; lead me into the ^uland of uprightness.11 ^vQuicken me, O LORD, for thy name's sake: ^wfor thy righteousness' sake bring my soul out of trouble.12 ^xAnd of thy mercy cut off mine enemies, and destroy all them that afflict my soul; ^yfor I am thy servant.

PSALM CXLIV.

This psalm was probably composed by David upon the occasion of his advancement to the throne; [1 Chron. xii. 2 Sam. v. as Psal.
cxxxviii. lxxv. &c.] In it we have (1) Thankful acknowledgments of God's relation to him, and condescending kindness towards him; 1—4. (2) Supplication for divine deliverance from his enemies, who still threatened him; 5—8: and for prosperity to his people; 11—14. (3) Triumphant joy in God, as his and their deliverer and portion; 9, 10, 15.

help us. If men forsake or disregard us, God, as our refuge and portion, will more than balance our want. If we are even fettered in the bands of corruption, temptation, or trouble, he can deliver us. And the mercies which our brethren enjoy should excite our praises, as members of the same body.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXLIII.—If ever we hope for God's acceptance of us, it must not be for any thing in us, but purely of grace, for his dear Son's sake, according to the promises of his word. The most righteous cannot bear the severity of God's justice. They who best know their own hearts will ever be the first to condemn themselves, and to cry for mercy at God's hand. And they who plead guilty before the law, and flee to the grace of the gospel in Christ shall be justified from all things. When our distress is greatest, God's power and grace shall be the more magnified in our deliverance. Though it be hard to exercise courageous faith under sore troubles, yet remembrance of God's kindness to ourselves or others, in former times, is very encouraging. And they who thirst for his presence, favour, and love, shall never be sent away empty from his throne of grace; whatever manifestations of mercy, direction, instruction, deliverance, guidance, quickening for themselves, and destruction of enemies, they may ask.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXLII.—A deep sense of need will make us im-portunate in prayer for speedy help, gracious acceptance, direction, preservation, and merciful restraints. Faithful and Christian reproof is a necessary and kind office of friendship. And to love reproof, and be thankful for it, is one of the surest symptoms of a gracious heart. But that reproof will be most effectual which comes from those whose unsuspected piety gives weight to their words, and whose tender manner of applying it renders it soft and penetrating. For men to pray to be put right, and yet to be displeased with rebuke for what is wrong, is base dissimulation. Often people never regard God's candidates for the magistracy or ministry, till their own be destroyed or shamefully disgraced. But, let the case of the church or saints be ever so deplorable, fervent prayers will soon render it hopeful. And, if our eyes be fixed on God, our feet shall not slip. But the destruction of the wicked is determined, and their devices to hurt others shall but hasten their own wretchedness.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXLII.—Sore troubles ought to produce fervent prayers. They, who have the God of all grace, to flee to, may safely leave in his hand all their troubles. And when our consciences condemn us not, then have we confidence before him. We can never be brought so low but God can

PSALM CXLV.

This psalm, like the 25th, 34th, 111th, 112th, and 119th, is composed in an alphabetical form. With the five following, it consists of pure praises to God, without so much as one complaint or petition. Here (1) David engages himself, and encourages others, to praise God; 1-7, 10, 21. (2) He represents the grounds of praise, viz. the greatness and glory, sovereign power, and eternity of God: 1. The greatness and glory of his works;
3-7, 11-13. 2. His unbounded goodness, mercy, and compassion; 7-9: manifested in pitying the afflicted, providing what is necessary for all creatures; and in his readiness to hear and answer his people's prayers, preserve them from evil, and destroy their enemies; 14-20.

David's^a psalm of praise.

I WILL extol thee, my God, O King; and I will bless thy name for ever and ever.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXLV.—Behold, as in a figure, Jesus Christ the darling of heaven, advanced by his father to his right hand, and invested with all power in heaven and in earth! There he rejoices in his God, and in his glorious victories of salvation, and makes intercession for the conquest and ruin of his enemies, and for the abundant happiness of his people.—Great and blessed is the believer's security in the divine relations and perfections; and infinite is the condescension and kindness of God towards man; so mean, so unsubstantial, so transitory! Certainly then there shall come a day in which God will redeem his people out of all their deep waters of trouble, and take vengeance on his and their enemies. O what a mercy is it to receive, out of the hand of a reconciled God, children endowed with every corporal and mental accomplishment; garners replenished with useful stores; thriving flocks and herds; and a safe and quiet commonwealth! Yet it is not in earthly enjoyments, but in God himself, as our God and our ALL IN ALL, that solid and everlasting happiness consists.

2 Every day will I bless thee; and I will praise thy name for ever and ever.

3^c Great is the LORD, and greatly to be praised; * and his greatness is un-searchable.

4^d One generation shall praise thy works to another, and shall declare thy mighty acts.

5 I will speak of the glorious honour of thy majesty, and of thy wondrous works.

6 And men shall speak of the might of thy terrible acts: and I will declare thy greatness.

7 They shall abundantly utter the memory of thy great goodness, and shall sing of thy righteousness.

8^b The LORD is gracious, and full of compassion; slow to anger, and † of great mercy.

9ⁱ The LORD is good to all; and his tender mercies are over all his works.

10^k All thy works shall praise thee,
O LORD; and thy saints shall bless thee.

11^j They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power;

12 To make known to the sons of men his mighty acts, and the glorious majesty of his kingdom.

13^m Thy kingdom is † an everlasting kingdom, and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations.

14ⁿ The LORD upholdeth all that fall, and raiseth up all those that be bowed down.

15^o The eyes of all || wait upon thee;
and thou givest them their meat in due season.

16^p Thou openest thine hand, and satisfiest the desire of every living thing.

17^q The LORD is righteous in all his ways, and * holy in all his works.

18^r The LORD is nigh unto all them that call upon him, to all that call upon him in truth.

19^s He will fulfil the desire of them that fear him: he also will hear their cry, and will save them.

20^t The LORD preserveth all them that love him; but all the wicked will he destroy.

21^u My mouth shall speak the praise of the LORD: and let^v all flesh bless his holy name for ever and ever.

PSALM CXLVI.

This psalm contains (1) Pleasant engagements and encouragements to the hearty and constant praises of God; 1, 2, 10. (2) Earnest dissuaves from trusting in man, who is so weak and short-lived: 3, 4. (3) Powerful persuasives to trust in God, whose power and goodness appear so remarkable in creation, providence, and redemption; 5-10.

PRAISE ye the LORD. Praise the LORD, O my soul.

2^c While I live will I praise the LORD:

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXLV.—O the infinite greatness, the unbounded grace, and everlasting preciousness, of a God in Christ! Happy are they who spend their time and their eternity in the enjoyment and praises of him! How delightful is it to tell our neighbours, to tell our posterity, that which our eyes have seen, and our hearts have believed, concerning this God, who is LOVE; and to tell how this God shall be our God for ever! And it is delightful to behold and praise our exalted Redeemer, who fills heaven and earth with his kindness.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXLVI.—Happy are they whose God is the Lord, and whose praises never end! But the greatest on earth appear as insignificant nothings before God, or even to a gracious heart, nothing on earth is properly a man's property but his grave. But, though in man there be no help, no ground of hope, our God-man is mighty to save; and hope in him knows no

I will sing praises unto my God while I have any being.

3 Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help.

4 His breath goeth forth; he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish.

5 Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the LORD his God:

6 Who made heaven and earth, the sea and all that therein is: who keepeth truth for ever:

7 Who executeth judgment for the oppressed: who giveth food to the hungry. The LORD looseth the prisoners:

8 The LORD openeth the eyes of the blind: the LORD raiseth them that are bowed down: the LORD loveth the righteous:

9 The LORD preserveth the strangers; he relieveth the fatherless and widow: but the way of the wicked he turneth upside down.

10 The LORD shall reign for ever, even thy God, O Zion, unto all generations. Praise ye the LORD.

11 The LORD shall reign for ever, even thy God, O Zion, unto all generations. Praise ye the LORD.

12 Praise the LORD, O Jerusalem; praise thy God, O Zion.

13 For he hath strengthened the bars of thy gates; he hath blessed thy children within thee.

14 He maketh peace in thy borders, and filleth thee with the finest of the wheat.

15 He sendeth forth his commandment upon earth: his word runneth very swiftly.

16 He giveth snow like wool: he scattereth the hoar frost like ashes.

17 He casteth forth his ice like morsels: Who can stand before his cold?

18 He sendeth out his word, and melteth them: he causeth his wind to blow, and the waters flow.

19 He sheweth his word unto Jacob, his statutes and his judgements unto Israel.

20 He hath not dealt so with any nation: and as for his judgments, they have not known them. Praise ye the LORD.

21 Praise ye the LORD, O Jerusalem; praise thy God, O Zion.

22 For he hath strengthened the bars of thy gates; he hath blessed thy children within thee.

23 He maketh peace in thy borders, and filleth thee with the finest of the wheat.

24 He sendeth forth his commandment upon earth: his word runneth very swiftly.

25 He giveth snow like wool: he scattereth the hoar frost like ashes.

26 He casteth forth his ice like morsels: Who can stand before his cold?

27 He sendeth out his word, and melteth them: he causeth his wind to blow, and the waters flow.

12 Praise the LORD, O Jerusalem; praise thy God, O Zion.

13 For he hath strengthened the bars of thy gates; he hath blessed thy children within thee.

14 He maketh peace in thy borders, and filleth thee with the finest of the wheat.

15 He sendeth forth his commandment upon earth: his word runneth very swiftly.

16 He giveth snow like wool: he scattereth the hoar frost like ashes.

17 He casteth forth his ice like morsels: Who can stand before his cold?

18 He sendeth out his word, and melteth them: he causeth his wind to blow, and the waters flow.

19 He sheweth his word unto Jacob, his statutes and his judgements unto Israel.

20 He hath not dealt so with any nation: and as for his judgments, they have not known them. Praise ye the LORD.

21 Praise ye the LORD, O Jerusalem; praise thy God, O Zion.

22 For he hath strengthened the bars of thy gates; he hath blessed thy children within thee.

23 He maketh peace in thy borders, and filleth thee with the finest of the wheat.

24 He sendeth forth his commandment upon earth: his word runneth very swiftly.

25 He giveth snow like wool: he scattereth the hoar frost like ashes.

26 He casteth forth his ice like morsels: Who can stand before his cold?

27 He sendeth out his word, and melteth them: he causeth his wind to blow, and the waters flow.

28 He sheweth his word unto Jacob, his statutes and his judgements unto Israel.

29 He hath not dealt so with any nation: and as for his judgments, they have not known them. Praise ye the LORD.

30 Praise ye the LORD, O Jerusalem; praise thy God, O Zion.

31 For he hath strengthened the bars of thy gates; he hath blessed thy children within thee.

32 He maketh peace in thy borders, and filleth thee with the finest of the wheat.

33 He sendeth forth his commandment upon earth: his word runneth very swiftly.

34 He giveth snow like wool: he scattereth the hoar frost like ashes.

35 He casteth forth his ice like morsels: Who can stand before his cold?

36 He sendeth out his word, and melteth them: he causeth his wind to blow, and the waters flow.

PSALM CXLVII.

This psalm was probably penned by David while he repaired and fortified Jerusalem; [2 Sam. v.] and contains (1) Solemn calls to praise God; 1, 7, 12, 20. (2) Weighty reasons for praising God; viz. 1. That, as the God of nature, he is infinitely intelligent and great, and the sovereign manager of all creatures; 4, 5, 8, 9, 15—18. 2. As the God of grace, he tenderly comforts and affectionately delights in his people; 3, 6, 10, 11. 3. As the God of Israel, Jerusalem, and Zion, he settles their civil and religious state; 2, 13, 14, 19, 20.

PRAISE ye the LORD: for it is good to sing praises unto our God; for it is pleasant, and praise is comely.

2 The LORD doth build up Jerusalem: he gathereth together the outcasts of Israel.

3 He healeth the broken in heart, and bindeth up their wounds.

4 He telleth the number of the stars: he calleth them all by their names.

5 Great is our LORD, and of great power: his understanding is infinite.

6 The LORD lifteth up the meek: he casteth the wicked down to the ground.

7 Sing unto the LORD with thanksgiving: sing praise upon the harp unto our God:

8 Who covereth the heaven with clouds: who prepareth rain for the earth; who maketh grass to grow upon the mountains.

9 He giveth to the beast his food, and to the young ravens which cry.

10 He delighteth not in the strength of the horse: he taketh not pleasure in the legs of a man.

11 The LORD taketh pleasure in them that fear him, in those that hope in his mercy.

disappointment. Be stirred up therefore, my soul, to depend on him, who is my almighty Maker, my faithful and promise-performing Friend, my kind and righteous Protector, my bountiful Provider, my omnipotent Deliverer, my gracious Enlightener, my seasonable Restorer, my perpetual Preserver, and the just Punisher of my enemies;—my King, my God, and my ALL!

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CLXVII.—How good and great must God be in himself, when his greatness, wisdom, power, and goodness, are so manifested in all his works. And, when he so observes and provides for all his creatures, how impossible is it that his ransomed children should be overlooked or starved!

Much of God is to be seen in all around us—in luminaries, in animals, in crops, in seasons, in human persons or societies; but above all, in his church, and in his word. If these be abused by us, it will be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment than for us.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXLVIII.—How great and good must God appear to his people when their minds are so overcharged with their debt of praise! And indeed, had the praises of God but due room on earth, it would much resemble heaven. But none are more deep in the debt of praise than ransomed men; sometime afar off, but now brought near to him by the blood of his Son!

PSALM CXLIX.

This psalm was perhaps penned by David when he took the strong hold of Zion from the Jebusites;—and represents (1) Abundant joys to the people of God, in his relation to, delight in, and kindness towards them; 1—5. (2) Abundance of terror to the proudest of their enemies, in their victory and power over them; 6—9.

PRAISE ^aye the LORD. ^bSing unto the LORD a new song, and his praise in the congregation of saints.

2 Let ^cIsrael rejoice in him that made ^dhim: let the children of Zion be joyful in their King.

3 Let them praise his name ^ein the dance: let them sing praises unto him with the timbrel and harp.

4 For the LORD taketh pleasure in his people: ^fhe will beautify the meek with salvation.

5 Let the saints be joyful in glory: let them sing aloud upon their beds.

6 Let ^gthe high praises of God be in their ^hmouth, and a two-edged sword in their hand;

7 To execute vengeance upon the heathen, and punishments upon the people;

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CXLIX.—Behold here Jesus, and his gospel church chiefly in her millennial state. He and his people mutually rejoice in one another:—while they praise him, he imparts the blessings of salvation to them; and, while he goes forth in his chariots of salvation, conquering sinners by his grace, or in his chariots of vengeance, to destroy his Jewish, Heathen, and Antichristian, enemies, by their prayers and influence, they work together with him.

8 To bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron;

9 To execute upon them the judgment written: ⁿthis honour have all his saints. Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CL.

This psalm contains thirteen calls to praise God. It directs (1) Who ought to praise him; 6. (2) Why they should praise him; viz. that he dwells with men; and for his mighty acts and his excellent greatness; 1, 2. (3) How he ought to be praised, in a public, earnest, and skilful manner; 1—5.

PRAISE ^aye the LORD. ^bPraise God in his sanctuary: praise him in ^cthe firmament of his power.

2 Praise him ^dfor his mighty acts: praise him according to his excellent greatness.

3 Praise him with the sound of the ^etrumpet: praise him with the psaltery and harp.

4 Praise him with the timbrel and ^fdance: praise him with stringed instruments and organs.

5 Praise him upon the loud cymbals: praise him upon the high-sounding cymbals.

6 Let every thing that hath breath praise the LORD. Praise ye the LORD.

REFLECTIONS UPON PSALM CL.—Happy are they who dwell in God's house above—they are always praising him on the highest key! And happy are they who are on the way to it—they have always matter, and often an heart, for praise.

THE BOOK OF

P R O V E R B S,

And the two immediately following, were penned by Solomon the renowned king of Israel. The repeated and warm dehortations from unchastity, contained in this, strongly tempt me to think that it was composed by him in his old age, when God's grace had rendered him an hearty penitent for his whoredom and idolatry. Its Hebrew name MISCHLIM imports sentences well pressed together, and powerful to command our assent and regulate our conduct. Teaching by such proverbs, or short substantial sentences, was a very ancient, and is a very plain, profitable, and easy method of instruction. These Proverbs of Solomon are not a mere collection of the wise sayings which had been uttered before his time, as some have pretended, but are the inspired dictates of the Holy Ghost to him; and are often quoted or alluded to as such in other inspired books, as may be remarked in the common margin of our Bibles. This book comprehends (1) A preface; consisting of manifold exhortations to the study and improvement of true wisdom, and of warnings to avoid connections or intimacy with wicked persons, whoredom, rash suretiship, sloth, and other things contrary thereto; chap. i—ix. (2) The Proverbs themselves; published from the beginning, x—xxiv. or copied out by the direction of Hezekiah; xxv—xxix. (3) The appendix; containing the prophecy of Agur, and the directions perhaps of Solomon's mother to him; xxx. xxxi. As the book of Psalms is calculated to make our hearts warm towards God in holy and pious affections, the scope of this is to make our face shine before men in a prudent, discreet, honest, and useful, conversation; which is a no less necessary part of practical religion. And no book in the world, in so small a compass, affords us such a complete body of rules for directing our personal and relative behaviour.

CHAP. I.

Contains (1) The title and general scope of the book: viz. to teach all, particularly simple and young persons, right notions of things, to discern between good and evil, and to order their conversation; 1—4: and the advantage of studying it; 5, 6. (2) An earnest recommendation of the fear of God as the first principle of all true wisdom; and of a regard to the instruction of parents as a proper mean of honour; 7—9. (3) Warm dehortations from intimacy or fellowship with wicked men; as their wickedness, however secret, successful or gainful, is certainly ruinous at last; 10—19. (4) A lively representation of the public reasonings of Jesus Christ, and his true wisdom, with gospel hearers, and of the certain ruin of those who despise and reject the same. This is a prediction of the misery which came upon the Jews and others for their contempt of Christ and his gospel; 20—33.

5 ^d A wise man will hear, and will increase learning; and a man of understanding shall attain unto wise counsels:

6 ^f To understand a proverb, and the interpretation; the words of the wise, and their dark sayings.

7 ^g The fear of the LORD is the beginning of knowledge: but fools despise wisdom and instruction.

8 ⁱ My son, hear the instruction of thy father, and forsake not the law of thy mother:

9 ^j For they shall be an ornament of grace unto thy head, and chains about thy neck.

10 ^k My son, if sinners entice thee, consent thou not.

11 If they say, Come with us, let us lay wait for blood, let us lurk privily for the innocent without cause:

12 ^l Let us swallow them up alive as the grave; and whole, as those that go down into the pit:

13 ^m We shall find all precious substance; we shall fill our houses with spoil:

14 Cast in thy lot among us; let us all have one purse:

15 My son, walk not thou in the way with them; refrain thy foot from their path:

16 ⁿ For their feet run to evil, and make haste to shed blood.

17 ^o Surely in vain the net is spread in the sight of any bird.

18 ^p And they lay wait for their own blood; they lurk privily for their own lives.

19 So are the ways of every one that is greedy of gain; which taketh away the life of the owners thereof.

20 ^q Wisdom crieth without; she uttereth her voice in the streets:

21 She crieth in the chief place of concourse, in the openings of the gates: in the city she uttereth her words, saying,

22 ^r How long, ye simple ones, will ye love simplicity? and the scorers delight in their scorning, and fools hate knowledge?

23 ^s Turn ye at my reproof: behold, I will pour out my spirit unto you, I will make known my words unto you.

24 ^t Because I have called, and ye refused; I have stretched out my hand, and no man regarded;

25 But ye have set at nought all my counsel, and would none of my reproof:

26 ^u I also will laugh at your calamity; I will mock when your fear cometh;

27 ^v When your fear cometh as desolation, and your destruction cometh as a whirlwind; when distress and anguish cometh upon you.

28 ^w Then shall they call upon me, but I will not answer; they shall seek me early, but they shall not find me:

29 ^x For that they hated knowledge, and did not choose the fear of the LORD:

30 ^y They would none of my counsel: they despised all my reproof.

31 ^z Therefore shall they eat of the fruit of their own way, and be filled with their own devices.

32 ^a For the turning away of the simple shall slay them, and the prosperity of fools shall destroy them.

32 ^b But whoso hearkeneth unto me shall dwell safely, and shall be quiet from fear of evil.

CHAP. II.

Having foretold the destruction of the obstinate, Solomon here addresses such as are willing to be taught; and (1) Shews them that, by serious attention to, and meditation on, God's word, and by fervent prayer and diligent use of other ordinances, they shall obtain from a wise and gracious God that knowledge and grace which they need and seek; 1—9. (2) To quicken their diligence in this study, he shews the unspeakable advantage of true wisdom, as it preserves from the snares of evil and mischievous men; 10—15: and of whorish women; 16—19. And directs to, and preserves in, the holy and happy ways of God; 20—22.

most unexpected, fearful, unpitied, and remediless, manner;—and that, while your most rueful cries for deliverance shall be disregarded, your own counsels and contrivances shall render you inexpressibly miserable, and your occasional escapes, and even prosperity, shall, by encouraging your folly, pride, and wickedness, prove means of hastening and aggravating your ruin; 33. While they, who hearken to his instructions, and believe on his name, shall, by his watchful providence, be marvellously protected, comforted, and eternally saved.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—The inspired oracles of God are calculated to convey the most solid and precious instruction in the things both of time and eternity; and it is necessary and profitable that all, even the wisest, should carefully search them, particularly in the days of youth, in which the faculties are most quick, the temptations most numerous, and our conversation for time and eternity just forming. Deep regard to God and to parental admonitions are highly necessary in those who desire true wisdom. But there can be no solid knowledge or prudence where the heart is not changed, believes not on Christ, and loves not God as in him. With amazing earnestness and craft do sinners seduce others, particularly young and simple ones, into fellowship with them in sin. It is necessary therefore to be always impressed with the awe of God's omniscience and just vengeance, that no temptation of secrecy or of gain may tempt us to wickedness: and to avoid the society of the wicked if we choose to escape their ruin. But with what infatuation do men, more stupid than birds, rush into danger when fairly warned! and in ruining others they but ruin themselves in a more miserable manner: and, however secrecy or power may protect them from men, the vengeance of God overtakes them. Their cruelty and avarice hurry them and their companions into lasting misery and woe. Alas! how great is their folly, who, for a perishing world, destroy an immortal soul; and for a momentary pleasure plunge themselves into everlasting fire! But great is the compassion of Jesus to such rebellious sinners: in the most earnest and open manner he pleads with them in the ordinances of his grace to promote their eternal salvation. Condescending are his offers and invitations of mercy, pointed to the most unworthy and wicked; and precious and necessary the benefits which he offers. But inexcusable is their guilt, and dreadful their ruin, who obstinately refuse them. Rejected of God in their misery, even their ease and prosperity harden and ensnare them, and aggravate their woe! But blessed above all with salvation and rest are those who receive them, and listen to his gracious voice.

rash and incautious, may become circumspect, prudent, and discreet, in their conduct: 5. And those who are wise in the matters of time and eternity may become still more wise and prudent; and be able, with great advantage, to govern themselves and others; 6. And be capable of finding out the meaning of the wise, though dark, sayings of God or men, and profitably to apply them to themselves, or explain them to others. 7. It is necessary that every one who desires true wisdom, should begin with, and chiefly study the saving knowledge of God, and live under an holy awe, in the love, worship, and service of him; as, without this, all other knowledge is vain and useless; and, for want of it, wicked men, who prefer trifles to things of infinite importance, pour contempt on the wisest instructions that can be given them. 8, 9. And, next to the fear of God, it is necessary, my dear young men, that you reverence, honour, and obey, your parents, and gladly receive, and earnestly practise, their instructions, as things of inestimable value, which will render you more amiable and honourable than all the gay adorning on earth. 10. And, in order to promote the fear of God, and regard to parental instructions, see, that with the utmost circumspection and earnestness, you avoid all unnecessary fellowship with wicked persons, and all hearkening to their flattering enticements. 11—15. If in the most courteous manner, and by every argument drawn from profound secrecy, sure success, immense profit, and good fellowship, they would seduce you to robbery, or any other wickedness, abhor their counsels, and flee from their company: 16. For, being set on mischief themselves, if they once entangle you, they will perpetually hurry you from one horrid crime to another. 17. And, while they lay snares for others, whom they reckon rash and inconsiderate, themselves, like silly birds, rush into courses, of which the dangerous issue might be easily perceived: 18. And, in the end, all their pains and cunning to undo others bring ruin upon themselves from the hand of God and men: 19. And all unrighteous methods of procuring wealth but issue in the destruction of the procurers. 20—23. While you shun and abhor the enticements of the wicked, listen to the voice of Jesus Christ, the wisdom of God, who, in his word and ordinances of the gospel, in the most public, affectionate, earnest, and importunate manner, calls you, however simple, ignorant, foolish, or even scornful, to forsake your wicked courses, and turn to him by faith and repentance, to receive his Spirit, freely given, and believe his words, divinely manifested unto you. 24—29. But in the most solemn manner he warns you that, if you persist in despising his gracious calls, instructions, and offers, his distinguished vengeance shall overtake and ruin you and your nation, in the

MY son, ^aif thou wilt receive my words, and hide my commandments with thee;

2 So that ^bthou incline thine ear unto wisdom, and apply thine heart to understanding;

3 Yea, ^cif thou criest after knowledge, and ^dlifest up thy voice for understanding;

4 ^eIf thou seekest her as silver, and searchest for her as for hid treasures;

5 ^fThen shalt thou understand the fear of the LORD, and find the knowledge of God.

6 ^gFor the LORD giveth wisdom: out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding.

7 He layeth up ^hsound wisdom for the righteous: ⁱhe is a ^jbuckler to them that walk uprightly.

8 He ^kkeepeth the paths of judgment, and preserveth the way of his saints.

9 ^lThen shalt thou understand righteousness, and judgment, and equity; yea, every good path.

10 ¶ ^mWhen wisdom entereth into thine heart, and knowledge is pleasant unto thy soul;

11 ⁿDiscretion shall preserve thee, understanding shall keep thee:

12 ^oTo deliver thee from the way of the evil man, from the man that speaketh froward things;

13 ^pWho leave the paths of uprightness, to walk in the ways of darkness;

14 ^qWho rejoice to do evil, and delight in the frowardness of the wicked;

15 ^rWhose ways are crooked, and they froward in their paths:

16 ^sTo deliver thee from the strange woman, even from the stranger which flattereth with her words;

17 Who forsaketh the ^tguide of her youth, and forgetteth ^uthe covenant of her God.

18 ^vFor her house inclineth unto death, and her paths unto the dead.

19 ^wNone that go unto her return again, neither take they hold of the paths of life.

20 ¶ ^xThat thou mayest walk in the way of good men, and keep the paths of the righteous.

21 ^yFor the upright shall dwell in the land, and the perfect shall remain in it.

22 ^zBut the wicked shall be cut off from the earth, and the transgressors shall be ^{aa}rooted out of it.

CHAP. III.

Contains the most excellent directions how to be truly religious, and most powerful arguments to enforce them. (1) We must be hearty, constant, and persevering, in our duty; for so shall we be remarkably happy; 1—4. (2) We must always depend on God for direction and assistance, as the way to be safe and successful; 5, 7. (3) We must live in the filial fear of God, and avoid what his law forbids, as the way to be healthful in soul and body; 7, 8. (4) We must serve God with our outward estates, for that is the way to be rich; 9, 10. (5) We must bear afflictions with holy awe, resignation, and patience, as a testimony of God's love to us; for that is the way to get good from them; 11, 12. (6) We must be at great pains to obtain true wisdom, Jesus Christ and his grace; because that is the way in which we may expect it, and the great, honourable, and God-like, advantages which attend it; 13—20. (7) We must always govern ourselves by the rules of true wisdom; because that is the way to enjoy uninterrupted strength, comfort, honour, and safety; 21—26. (8) We must do no evil, but all the good we can, to our neighbours; because, as we are just or unjust, charitable or uncharitable, humble or proud, so shall we be rewarded by God; 27—35.

MY son, forget not my law; but let thine heart keep my commandments:

2 For ^blength of days, and ^clong life, and peace, shall they add to thee.

3 ^dLet not mercy and truth forsake thee: ^ebind them about thy neck; write them upon the table of thine heart:

5 ¶ ^hTrust in the LORD with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding.

6 ⁱIn all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths.

7 ¶ ^jBe not wise in thine own eyes: fear the LORD, and depart from evil.

8 ^kIt shall be ^lhealth to thy navel, and ^mmarrow to thy bones.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1—5. And, for your excitement and encouragement, know assuredly, my children, that, if you entertain, receive, and lay up in your heart, the instructions and directions which I now give you; if you earnestly study, and importunately pray for, the enjoyment of Jesus Christ, and of all true and spiritual wisdom and knowledge in him, as infinitely more precious, useful and desirable, than all the treasures on earth, then you shall, by the influences of the Holy Spirit, happily obtain your desire, and be enabled and directed to know, obey, fear, love, worship, and serve, God in a proper and truly acceptable manner. 6—9. For, as wisdom and every other blessing is the free gift of God, he in his word hath revealed, and by his Spirit bestows, it upon men, and gives them a true and spiritual knowledge of himself and his ways. He hath in store, and is always ready to bestow upon such as ask it, true, solid, and substantial, wisdom. And, while he instructs and directs, he, by his almighty providence, infallibly preserves from soul-ruining mischiefs, such as walk in a sincere, candid, and upright manner. He guides and enables the lovers of holiness to persevere in their integrity, according to the rules of his word; and preserves them from being drawn aside from it, or endangered in it. And, in seeking wisdom from him, you shall come to understand his righteousness and wisdom in all his administrations, and be enabled to imitate him in every thing truly holy and virtuous. 10. And, if Jesus Christ, the spiritual knowledge of divine things, and the power of practical godliness, have once taken possession of your heart, and captivated your affections, 11—15. These will effectually preserve you from the crafty and ruinous seduction; either of subtle men, who having apostatized from every thing good, walk and delight in the perplexed ways of vice, and in making others as wicked as themselves, drawing them aside, and entangling them in courses directly contrary to their own true interest, safety, conscience, or reason; 16—19. Or of light and lewd women, unworthy to be reckoned Israelites, who set themselves, by all the arts of flattery, to decoy such as you into whoredom; 17. Perfidiously alienating their affections and persons from their own husbands, and disregarding the solemn vows made to them at marriage; 18. And who really love no one, but promote the death and eternal damnation of all such as cultivate any familiarity with them. 19. Very few, who are once ensnared into their impure embraces, are ever, by the grace of God, recovered to a penitent, chaste, and virtuous, life on earth, or to everlasting glory in heaven. 20—22. And, moreover, while you are preserved from the ruinous infection of these wicked seducers, you shall be enabled to follow the example of the holy patriarchs and prophets; and, in consequence of this, shall happily dwell in this promised land of Canaan, and inherit the spiritual and everlasting felicity prefigured by it.—While these wicked seducers, and their followers, shall, after a short-lived flourish of prosperity, be furiously driven from this land and earth, and cast into the flames and depths of hell.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—With remarkable diligence should we attend to all the exercises of true religion. The Lord is ready to bless such as are diligent with great success; and usually bestows upon them remarkable instruction, satisfaction, and protection. There is need of real religion to season and rule our heart; and of God's special preservation and our utmost caution while we live in this world, where men of corrupt principles, and women of treacherous and corrupt practices, so greatly abound. In their sinful courses such are generally obstinate, active, and crafty. Ensnaring are their enticements, and dangerous and ordinarily ruinous, their connections; and few, once entangled in their wickedness, ever seriously repent, or turn to Jesus Christ for life and salvation. Happy then are they who are delivered from them, and enabled to walk as truly pious and circumspect. Godliness has the promises of this life and of that which is to come. Even now the saints alone have a blessed portion on earth: and at last they only shall inhabit the new earth, into which no wicked person shall ever enter.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. 2. Let me therefore again entreat you, my dear children, to receive, and rivet in your judgment, memory, will, and affections, the counsels and commands which I now give, that you may practise them in your lives: thus shall your temporal life be long, healthful, and prosperous; be attended with a pleasant life of grace here, and followed by an eternal life of glory hereafter. 3, 4. And while you live by a cordial, constant, and assured faith in the mercy and faithfulness of God, pledged in his word, study always, as your great honour, to imitate him in kindness, compassion, and uprightness; thus shall you be highly respected and honoured, and shall prudently order your affairs both before God and men. 5, 6. Always, by faith in his new covenant promises and relations, depend wholly on God for strength, direction, and success, in your undertakings, and never upon your own knowledge or carnal prudence. In every undertaking believe and depend on his over-ruling power, observe his directions, and implore and wait for his favour and blessing, and he shall guide you in all your proceedings, and bring them to an happy issue. 7, 8. Never indulge a conceit of your own knowledge or wisdom, as if it were sufficient to direct you in the easiest matters; but, under the influence of a holy and filial law of, and regard to, God, avoid with care whatever he has forbidden in his law; as that is the way to promote the health, strength, and comfort, of both soul and body in time and eternity.

9, 10. In just gratitude to God, who has bestowed all that you have upon you, make conscience of employing your estates in works of piety, for the maintenance of his worship, and of charity to his poor, and of justice to all men; so shall his blessing abundantly increase them in every thing useful and comfortable. 11, 12. Never overlook or condemn the afflictions which you meet with, as if they were trifles, or happened by chance; and never grow weary of them as an intolerable burden, or take any unlawful course to remove them; but kindly receive and submit to them as the corrections of a kind and gracious Father, in which he manifests his distinguished love to, and care for, your souls.

13—18. Thrice happy is the man who through much tribulation, and with much care and pains, obtains the enjoyment of Jesus Christ, and the spiritual wisdom and knowledge that is in and by him. This is infinitely preferable to every thing gainful, comely, precious, or profitable, on earth. By this we are secured in all the real blessings of this present life, and of that which is to come. In cleaving to Jesus, and walking in his ordinances and laws, the most delightful comforts and pleasures, the most blessed tranquillity of mind and conscience, the most happy success of affairs, and eternal rest with God, in glory, are to be enjoyed.—Immortal, quickening, and invigorating, is the satisfaction enjoyed by every one who earnestly embraces his person, receives his instructions, and stedfastly walks in his ways.

19, 20. And no wonder that Jesus Christ, and the spiritual wisdom and knowledge that are hid in him, should be so profitable, pleasant, and comfortable, when by him, and in the exercise of his infinite wisdom, God formed, founded, and settled, the heavens, and earth, and seas, and all that is therein, and makes the fountains to pour forth streams for the nourishment of animals, and the clouds to drop down dews and rains for the nourishment of plants, corn, and grass.

21—26. Be it therefore your earnest care to fix these my instructions on your heart, and to keep them always before your eyes, as the means of obtaining true and profitable knowledge and prudence. You will find them infallible promoters of true life, and honour and comfort, temporal, spiritual, and eternal. By means hereof, you, by the blessing of God, shall prosper in your labours, and be kept from falling into sin or danger; and under his protection, you shall enjoy the most safe and pleasant rest and refreshment. No reports of sudden and approaching danger, or of desolating judgments, appointed for, or effected by, the wicked, need in the least terrify you; for the Almighty JEHOVAH, in whom you have

CHAP. IV.

Because of the great importance of divine truths, and the weakness and prejudice of our minds, the same things which we had in the former chapters are here again inculcated in a new manner. Here is (1) An earnest exhortation to the study of true wisdom, religion, or godliness, borrowed from the good instructions which Solomon's father David had given him, and enforced with the consideration of the comfort, protection, direction, and honour, which attend it; 1—13. (2) An earnest detestation from all intimacy with wicked men, or fellowship with their ungodly works of darkness; 14—19. (3) Particular directions for attaining and preserving true wisdom, and bringing forth the good fruits of it; viz. that we should receive God's word readily, and retain it carefully: keep our heart and tongue diligently, and our eye single and serious; and in our whole conduct act with consideration, steadiness, and consistency; 20—27.

HEAR, ye children, the instruction of a father, and attend to know understanding.

2 For I give you ^b good doctrine; for-sake ye not my law.

3 ^c For I was my father's son, tender and only beloved in the sight of my mother.

4 ^d He taught me also, and said unto me, ^e Let thine heart retain my words: keep my commandments, and live.

placed all your trust and confidence, shall support, protect, and preserve, you from danger.

27, 28. Never delay the payment of just debts, or the giving to the Lord, or to the poor, beyond the first opportunity afforded you, as you know not if ever providence will give you another.

29. Never contrive mischief against any; especially against such as depend on your equity and kindness.

30. Never be quarrelsome and contentious; and especially with such as have done you no injury.

31, 32. Never let the prosperity and wealth of oppressors tempt you to wish yourselves in their condition, or to imitate them in their injurious conduct; for wilful and obstinate oppressors are infinitely detested and hated of God; but his secret counsels and comforts are vouchsafed to such as walk uprightly and honestly.

33. Evil-doers, however great, and all that they have, are under the destructive influence of God's curse; but good men, being under the influence of his favour and blessing, may be happy in the meanest condition upon earth.

34. God will certainly at last expose proud mockers of religion and virtue to scorn and contempt; but will render such as are meek and humble highly respected and honoured.

35. And though persons truly wise unto salvation may for a time be abusively reproached and contemned, yet they shall, in the most free and fixed manner, enjoy honour from God and men at last; whereas contempt and misery are all the promotion that wicked men, ignorant of God, and regardless of their true interest, shall ever attain.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Real religion has a glorious and effectual tendency to render men happy in themselves and blessings to all around them. And those who neglect and despise it are in general mean-spirited, foolish, and self-ruining, wretches, dishonourers of God, and plagues to mankind. But great is the shame that the professors of religion so little conform their lives to the excellent rules thereof, and that they so little exemplify them in their behaviour and conduct. And comely would the church of God appear, if that regard to God's law, faith in him, devotion, resignation to his will, diligence in his work, and that truth, mercy, equity, peacefulness, humility, and prudence, towards men, required in his word, were duly exercised.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1, 2. My dear young friends, attend to, and receive, these affectionate, wholesome, and profitable, instructions which I give you; and while you live earnestly practise the same. 3. They are the very same which I myself, as a darling son, and intended successor on the throne, received from my pious and affectionate father David. 4—9. He, in the most careful and earnest manner, instructed me in my childhood, and begged me to fix his instructions and directions in my heart, and practise them in my life, as the means of attaining to true and lasting felicity. He earnestly recommended to me the getting of Jesus Christ, and the true knowledge and fear of God in him, and cleaving thereto, as the grand and effectual means of preservation from sin and danger, and of obtaining happiness and honour, both in time and eternity.* 10—13.

As you wish to live long and prosperously, receive, and observe in your practice, these my instructions. I do not direct you into paths of folly, fraud, or perverseness, but into a course of wisdom, integrity, and virtue; in which you may prosecute business without any entangling difficulties, and with ease, dispatch, and certain success. Carefully fix these instructions in your mind and heart, and persevere in the practice of them, as on this your happiness in time and eternity depends.

14—19. With the utmost care and abhorrence avoid the company and course of wicked men, and every temptation thereto; and, with the greatest speed and earnestness, flee from it if you have been entangled; for such is the malignity of their dispositions, that they can take no rest till they execute their villainous intentions, and are perpetually disturbing themselves in order to ruin others. They neither have, nor desire, any other provision to live on than what they get by unjust and violent courses. And, while good men daily grow in knowledge, grace, and holiness of conversation, till they arrive at perfection, wicked men, amidst gross ignorance, error, confusion, crimes, and wretchedness, rush on heedlessly till they are plunged into everlasting misery. 20—27. And, in order to retain in heart, and practise in life, these my excellent instructions, which are a source of lasting and complete happiness to all who improve them aright, watch over your heart, and keep your mind, conscience, will, affections, thoughts, and desires, with uncommon earnestness, as from these do originally issue the eternal happiness or misery of mankind. Resolutely shun all impure or wicked discourse; and never let any corrupt, false, filthy, idle, passionate, or scornful, communication, proceed from your lips. Let your mind and thoughts be fixed only upon the right paths of holiness and virtue, that you may walk in them without ever turning from them; and never let your eyes, by fixing on improper objects, seduce you into sin or danger. Contains a most affectionate and alarming warning against the sin of whoredom and all approaches to it. Here is (1) The warning itself; representing the seductive diligence of whorish women, and charging to avoid them to the utmost, and every temptation to unchastity; 3—8. (2) Arguments enforcing this warning; viz. that whoredom issues in terrors of conscience and torments in hell; 4, 5, 11: and that it blasts the criminal's reputation, wastes his time, ruins his estate, destroys his health, shortens his life, wounds his spirit, renders gospel instructions a savour of death unto death, stupifies and hardens his heart, and plunges him into every thing sinful and miserable; 9—14. (3) Remedies against whoredom prescribed; viz. an habitual regard to the rules of real religion; 1, 2: marriage, and therein an endeared love to wives and children; 15—20: habitual faith in, and awe of, God's perpetual observation of us, and an holy dread of the miserable end of the wicked in their sins; 22, 23.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—It is the greatest honour, as well as duty, of parents carefully to instruct their children: and it may be infinitely useful after both instructors and instructed are laid in the dust. Unspeakingly excellent are Jesus Christ, his grace, and holy religion. Multitudes of powerful reasons engage us to render and cleave to them; and to love, delight in, or exalt them. Yet how apt are our corrupt hearts to ensnare us into fellowship with wicked persons or practices, or even to render us intent on, and delighted in, the most cruel and barbarous conduct! But wide is the difference in time, and especially in eternity, between the way of holiness and that of iniquity. While the saints gradually grow up in grace here, and live in endless felicity hereafter, the wicked blindly rush forward into everlasting misery. Great circumspection, care, diligence, and watchfulness, are therefore necessary in denying ungodliness and worldly lusts; and in living soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present evil world.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1, 2. And, my children, what I am just going to say requires your particular and most serious consideration, that you may be able to preserve yourselves from the most subtle and dangerous deceits, and, by your pious and prudent discourses and admonitions, prevent the ensnarement of others.—3—6. For astonishing are the arts, and inconceivable the enchanting flatteries, of whorish women, as if nothing but the most pure and exquisite pleasures were to be enjoyed in fellowship with them: but dreadful is the real issue thereof, in the impairing of men's health, strength, estates, and reputation; and in remorse of conscience, wretched death, and endless damnation.—And, to prevent your repentance and escape from their snares, they will turn themselves into ten thousand forms, that they may work on your several humours. 7—14. Let me therefore, with the utmost affection, earnestness, and solemnity, beseech you to avoid such women, and all, even the most distant, approaches to familiarity with them, as a dangerous, an infernal, plague; lest you forfeit your credit,

CHAP. VI.

Contains (1) An earnest warning to avoid rash suretyship; and, if engaged in it, to disentangle ourselves as quickly as possible; 1—5. (2) A rebuke to slothfulness, drawn from the diligence of the ant, and from the poverty that attends sloth; 6—11. (3) The character and fate of malicious, deceitful, and mischievous persons; 12—15. (4) An account of seven things hated by, and abominable to, God; 16—19. (5) An exhortation to make the word of God and the instructions of parents very dear and familiar to us, as a preservative from temptations to lewdness; 20—24. (6) A repeated warning against whoredom; particularly adultery, as a sin that wastes the estate and reduces to beggary, endangers and shortens the life, defiles and wounds the conscience, blasts the reputation, and entails lasting infamy; and is more detestable than theft, as it exposes to the outrageous fury of the jealous husband; 24—35.

MY son, "if thou be surety for thy friend, if thou hast stricken thy hand with a stranger,

2 Thou art snared with the words of thy mouth, thou art taken with the words of thy mouth.

3 Do this now, my son, and deliver thyself, when thou art come into the hand of thy friend; go, *humble thyself, and make sure thy friend.

4 "Give not sleep to thine eyes, nor slumber to thine eyelids.

5 †Deliver thyself as a roe from the hand of the hunter, and as a bird from the hand of the fowler.

6 ¶ "Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise:

9 "How long wilt thou sleep, O sluggard? when wilt thou arise out of thy sleep?

10 "Yet a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep:

11 So shall thy poverty come as one that travelleth, and thy want as an armed man.

12 ¶ "A naughty person, a wicked man, walketh with a froward mouth.

13 "He winketh with his eyes, he speaketh with his feet, he teacheth with his fingers;

14 "Frowardness is in his heart, "he deviseth mischief continually; he "soweth discord.

15 "Therefore shall his calamity come suddenly; suddenly shall he be broken without remedy.

16 ¶ These six things doth the LORD hate; yea, seven are an abomination ||unto him:

17 " *A proud look, "a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood,

18 "An heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, "feet that be swift in running to mischief, Deut. 6. 8.

and sacrifice your vigour of life, to base and cruel wretches, who labour to ruin you to every intent, and for ever; and lest your wealth, and the fruit of your care and labour, should, by their means, be transferred from you to others; and, when your substance is gone, and your body pining to death, under horrible diseases, you should have nothing left you but inexpressible torment of conscience, reflecting upon the faithful admonitions of parents and teachers which you have contemned, and the miseries which you do, and must for ever, undergo.

15—19. And, to prevent your having the smallest inclination to the base and polluting pleasures of whoredom, marry; and in a wife wholly your own enjoy and rest contented with the pure, chaste, and honourable, pleasures of the marriage state. Take pleasure in having children by her, sporting in the streets, or dispersed into families. Have children by her alone, and which you are sufficiently certain are really your own. Make your wife happy, by an affectionate cleaving to her only; and take pleasure in her innocent and delightful company. While you live together, let her always be amiable in your eyes; cherish her with the most tender affection; and in her embraces, and tender regard, always take such satisfaction as to prevent your affections in the least fixing upon another in her stead. 20, 21. And, when you can so fully, pleasantly, securely, constantly, innocently, and honourably, enjoy such pleasure in a pious and affectionate wife, why risk every thing dear to enjoy the base, dishonourable, destructive, and damning, pleasures of whoredom,—especially when the all-seeing God witnesses your most secret conduct, and will quickly reward or punish you according to the nature of it? 21, 22. Nor shall whoremongers and adulterers long escape his insupportable vengeance;—their own guilt and lust shall for ever bind and hold them fast under the power of his wrath. To punish their contempt of former instructions and warnings, God shall abandon them to impenitence, and permit them madly to rush forward, through increasing crimes, into endless damnation.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—It is shameful and shocking that mankind should be inclined, nay so much inclined, to a sin so base, so beastly, and ruinous, as whoredom.—That, even in the sex where modesty ought to shine with distinguished lustre, wretches should be found who impudently entice to it! Surely it must be very absurd to prefer the pleasures of it, attended with miseries innumerable, to the innocent, the sanctified, joys and honours of the marriage state! But no wonder, that they, who atheistically discredit the omniscience and justice of God, and live thoughtless of their future account, should proceed to the most infamous lengths in wickedness. Yet let them remember, that in the most miserable manner, correspondent to their sins, they shall at last be hurried into endless fire!

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1—5. And, that no occasion may be given for family contentions or ruin, let me admonish you to beware of all rash engagements in suretyship, especially for such whose honesty or ability you know not; but, if you have rashly entangled and enslaved yourself by such obligations, endeavour as quickly as possible, by every humble and persuasive method you can think of, nay, struggle as for life, to disengage yourself, by pressing the debtor to pay what he owes, or the creditor to acquit you of your bond. 6—11. Mean-while, never indulge yourself in sloth, and want of provident care; but learn, from those puny insects the ants, to labour diligently in your calling, and carefully improve every opportunity of honestly providing for yourself and your family; and remember that, if that inclination to idleness and sloth so common to mankind be indulged by you, whether in greater or smaller degrees, unexpected, and at last extreme, poverty shall irresistibly come upon you. 12—15. Remember too, that it is the property of persons vile and wicked to accustom themselves to profane, blasphemous, proud, passionate, lewd, or reproachful discourse, or by signs made with their eyes, feet, or fingers, to stir up others to mischief. The heart of such being filled with perverse inclinations, they are perpetually contriving mischief, and stirring up hatred and contention among their neighbours: but suddenly shall their villany and wickedness issue in their irretrievable infamy and ruin. 16—19. And indeed proud looks, lying tongues, murderous hands, hearts given to mischievous contrivances, feet given to a speedy execution of injurious designs, perjured persons, and sowers of discord among friends or neighbours, are distinguished objects of God's indignation. 20—22. Let me therefore again press you to attend to, highly esteem, and carefully practise, those divine instructions which have been tendered to you

975.

21 Bind them continually upon thine heart, and tie them about thy neck.

22 "When thou goest, it shall lead thee; when thou sleepest, it shall keep thee; and, when thou awakest, it shall talk with thee.

23 "For the commandment is a lamp; and the law is light; and reproofs of instruction are the way of life:

24 "To keep thee from the evil woman, from the flattery † of the tongue of a strange woman.

25 ¶ "Lust not after her beauty in thine heart; neither let her take thee with her eyelids.

26 For by means of a whorish woman a man is brought to a piece of bread: and the adulteress will hunt for the precious life.

27 Can a man take fire in his bosom, and his clothes not be burned?

28 Can one go upon hot coals, and his feet not be burned?

29 So "he that goeth in to his neighbour's wife; whosoever toucheth her shall not be innocent.

30 Men do not despise a thief, if he steal to satisfy his soul when he is hungry.

31 But, if he be found, he shall restore seven-fold; he shall give all the substance of his house.

32 But whoso committeth adultery with a woman lacketh understanding: he that doth it destroyeth his own soul.

33 A wound and dishonour shall he get; and his reproach shall not be wiped away.

34 "For jealousy is the rage of a man; therefore he will not spare in the day of vengeance.

35 "He will not regard any ransom; neither will he rest content, though thou givest many gifts.

CHAP. VII.

Remembering the sad consequences of unchastity in his father, if not also in himself, and observing his son or subjects much addicted to it, Solomon issues forth a new warning against whoredom. Here is (1) A solemn exhortation to get our minds well principled and governed by the word of God, as a thing by your parents. This will be of great use to direct, preserve, and comfort, you in your whole labours of life. 23, 24. For the law of God, as a lamp, guides in adversity, and, as the light of the sun, directs and comforts in prosperity; and the reproofs of his word are excellent means of preserving from ruin and leading to true happiness; and are particularly useful to preserve from being deluded by the flattering speeches and enticements of lewd women, those sinks of wickedness and plagues of mankind. 25—29. As you regard your temporal or eternal welfare, never gaze on the beauty or fine attire of such: never let their wanton and enticing looks engage you to the most distant desire after their dangerous embraces; for, if once they ensnare you, they will never quit their hold till they have reduced you to extreme beggary, or to a miserable and ignominious death. You may more safely take fire into your bosom, or walk upon burning coals, than intermeddle, however privately or transiently, with a whorish woman, particularly if either party be married. 30—35. If one merely steal to fill his hungry belly, he is not exposed to shame or punishment: and, if it be found that he has stolen more, it is only required that he should make complete restitution according to the law, which may perhaps amount to all that he is worth. But he who commits adultery with a woman can have no necessity for it, but acts through mere folly and wickedness, and so exposes himself to the loss of his life by the magistrates, as well as to eternal damnation from the hand of God. He exposes himself to bloody quarrels, and renders himself irrecoverably infamous. And, though the civil magistrate should wickedly spare his life, yet is it exposed to the fury of a justly-enraged husband, who will regard no penitential submissions or entreaties, and accept no gifts as the ransom of it.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—Greatly advantageous, even to the outward interests of persons, families, and nations, is an exact obedience to God's commandments. And it is sinful and foolish to ruin our estates or families by engaging for other people's debts: but infamously wicked are those debtors who exert not themselves to the utmost to relieve their sureties. Great care ought to be taken of our outward property. In respect of it we are but God's stewards, and ought to lay it out and bring it in according to his directions. The amazing instinct which God hath given to some animals, and their conduct, most dear, tender, intimate, and beloved by us, and as a preservative from whorish women; 1—5. (2) A particular and moving representation of the great danger of unwary youth being ensnared in whoredom by the impudent and crafty solicitations of lewd women, drawn from a fact, which it seems he had observed; 6—23. (3) A serious warning hence inferred to avoid uncleanness, and every approach to it, as a thing certainly ruinous both in time and eternity; 24—27.

MY son, keep my words, and lay up my commandments with thee.

2 "Keep my commandments, and live; and my law as the apple of thine eye.

3 "Bind them upon thy fingers, write them upon the table of thine heart.

4 "Say unto wisdom, Thou art my sister; and call understanding thy kinswoman:

5 "That they may keep thee from the strange woman, from the stranger which flattereth with her words.

6 ¶ "For at the window of my house I looked through my casement,

7 And beheld among the simple ones, I discerned among † the youths, a young man void of understanding,

8 Passing through the street near her corner; and he went the way to her house,

9 "In the twilight, † in the evening, in the black and dark night:

10 And, behold, there met him a woman with the attire of an harlot; and subtil of heart.

11 "She is loud and stubborn; her feet abide not in her house:

12 "Now is she without, now in the streets, and lieth in wait at every corner.)

13 So "she caught him, and kissed him, and "with an impudent face said unto him, 14 "I have peace-offerings with me; this day have I paid my vows.

15 Therefore came I forth to meet thee, diligently to seek thy face, and I have found thee.

16 I have decked my bed with coverings of tapestry, with carved works, with fine linen of Egypt.

17 I have perfumed my bed with myrrh, aloes, and cinnamon.

18 Come, let us take our fill of love shame the slothful of mankind. Such sluggards are very averse to be roused to their work, spiritual or temporal. If one degree of indolence be denied them, they would gladly enjoy a lesser: but poverty, in a quick, irresistible, and ruinous, manner comes to such at last. With alarming earnestness do sinners practise iniquity, and make every power of their soul, or member of their body, instrumental therein. And many things in heart, in lip, in life, are detested by God, which are overlooked as almost innocent by men. With what ardent love ought we to regard the word of God as our enlightening instructor and regulating law! It is necessary to receive, retain, and improve, it, as a powerful mean to preserve us from fleshly lusts, which war against both body and soul. But terrible and fatal snares are the flattering words and looks of whorish and light women. It is impossible to avoid destruction if once we are entangled by them. And it is shocking that so many indulge themselves in a crime so infamous and destructive.

CHAP. VII.—Ver. 1—5. My dear young friends, let me again press upon your consciences to lay up my advices and instructions in your judgment, heart, and memory; and carefully, tenderly, and readily to observe and practise them. Make yourselves familiar with Jesus Christ, and his spiritual instructions, as the most powerful means of preservation from the ensnaring arts and flatteries of whorish women, which is a privilege of infinite importance. 6—9. For, from my own window, I observed a thoughtless young fop, sauntering under night in the streets, and in a stately manner walking towards a corner which these infamous strumpets used to haunt; 10—20. There, one dressed in a light and whorish manner, and extremely skilled in the arts of enticement,—one extremely talkative, ready to brawl with her husband, given to idle visiting, and gadding about to places of dissipation or concourse,—met him, caught him in her arms and kissed him, and in an impudent manner told him that, being a devout lady, she had that very day been offering thank-offerings to God; and, being to feast upon her share of the flesh thereof, she had solicitously sought him to take a part of it, and had happily found him; and that she had decked and perfumed her bed in the most engaging manner, in which they might riot all night in exquisite pleasures, without any danger, as the silly fellow called her husband was gone a long journey, had a great deal of business to transact, and

CHAP. VIII.

Contains a glorious representation of the excellency and usefulness of true wisdom, and of our duty with regard to it. Part of it, from 1—21, will apply to divine revelation, which is the wisdom of God in a mystery; and to that pure and undefiled religion built upon it, which is indeed excellent, useful, and worthy of all acceptation; and by which God instructs, governs, and blesses, the children of men. But the whole is applicable to Jesus Christ, who is the wisdom of God and the power of God. In this view we have here (1) His solemn call to sinners of mankind to hear and receive his instructions, as things of inestimable value, incontestible equity, unquestionable truth, and marvellously acceptable to such as understand them; 1—11. (2) His engaging recommendation of himself; 1. as the providential manager of all things, who gives men good heads or hearts, superintends the government of societies, and renders those happy who receive him, in his present love to them, and their success in their inquiries after him, and in giving them the wealth of this world, or something better in its stead; and in vouchsafing them his conducting grace here, and his satisfying glory hereafter; 12—21: and 2. as a person distinct from the Father, co-eternal with him, and co-active in the making of the world; as the object of his delight; and as from eternity deeply concerned for the salvation of men; 22—31. (3) His repeated charge to men to hear his words, receive the offers of his grace, and keep his ways, as they regard their own happiness, and desire to escape his fearful wrath; 32—36.

DO TH not 'wisdom cry, and understanding put forth her voice?

2 She standeth in the top of high places, by the way in the places of the paths.

would not return till the full moon. 21—23. Notwithstanding his shewing some aversion at first, she, by her fair pretences and flattering speeches, quickly compelled him to follow her, as willingly, and no less stupidly, than an ox goeth to the slaughter, or a madman to the stocks, never thinking of any thing but pleasure, till the enraged husband sheathe his sword in his bowels, or the judgments of God accomplish his irretrievable ruin! 24—27. Let me therefore beseech you, my dear young men, whom I unfeignedly regard, diligently to observe and practise these warnings which I have repeatedly given you. Never indulge the smallest inclination towards such women; never listen to their enticements; never indulge the smallest fellowship or familiarity with such; never hope to be safe in, or to return from, such courses: for many, even of those noted in valour and wisdom, have been totally ruined in reputation, estate, body, and soul, by such women, and fellowship with them is the certain road to a miserable death, and eternal damnation.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—It is necessary to love, search, and meditate on, God's law day and night; and to make it the constant food of our heart, and standard of our life. Then should we find therein the most sanctifying virtue. Magistrates and ministers should carefully inspect the people committed to their charge! And there is need of frequent and fervent prayers to God for our friends and neighbours, as we know not in what guilt fearful temptations may involve them, if not overcome. The devil quickly finds business for idle and unseasonable saunterers, especially if young. And, when women are once addicted to flaunting, loose, and gaudy, apparel, and to wheedling in love matters, and are extremely talkative, and given to an unsettled and dissipated course, it will require no great pains to make harlots of them. Terribly base and impudent those women become, who have thrown off the restraints of modesty peculiar to their sex. And sad is the case when husbands and wives are glad to be rid of one another's company. It is shameful, wicked, and ruinous, when Satan and his abominable agents or lusts are, in days of youth, preferred to Jesus Christ and his grace. But fearful and speedy destruction, from the crime itself, or from the hand of God or man, awaits the whorish adulterer. Surely then we should be solicitous to improve the falls and miseries of others, as a warning for us to take heed, lest, in the same thoughtless and inconsiderate manner, we hurry ourselves into everlasting ruin.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1—11. And why, to your ruin, should you listen to the flattering enticements of whorish women, when Jesus Christ, the wisdom of God, by himself and his messengers, in the most open and earnest manner, calls you, and every one of mankind, even the most simple and foolish, to the study of true and spiritual wisdom;—to listen to, consider, and believe, the excellent, pure, holy, substantial, faithful, precious, and infinitely useful, oracles of his word: 12—31. And, in order to enforce his call, and recommend his instructions, represents himself as the infinitely wise God, the source of all wisdom and prudence; the infinitely holy One, who detests every thing proud, polluted, or perverse;—and the Almighty God, able to execute all his purposes, and by whose deputed authority all the magistrates on earth govern their subjects;—the infinite lover, and rich rewarder, of all that seek him, particularly in youth;—the inexhaustible portion, and unerring guide, of all those who receive him by faith;—the eternal and only begotten Son of JEHOVAH, appointed to be our Mediator;—the almighty Maker of all things in heaven and earth;—and who, from his infinite and peculiar love to mankind, took a distinguished pleasure in forming the earth as a theatre, whereon he should appear, save, and hold inti-

CHAP. IX.

Represents Jesus Christ and a harlot as contending who shall have the souls of men. (1) Jesus Christ and his true religion, under the name of Wisdom, having erected his covenant and church, and prepared his rich entertainment of gospel dainties by his ministers, solemnly invites sinful men to partake of it, and enter into fellowship with him; 1—6: and having foretold the different success of his gospel invitations; 7—9: and represented the sum of their duty and happiness; 10, 11: he leaves it to men's conscience and choice whether they will be made holy and happy, or left wicked and miserable; 12. (3) The harlot, representing sin, Satan, the world, and Antichrist, with great noise, care, and diligence, invites us to partake of her sensual pleasures, and other entertainments, pretending them to be extremely sweet and charming; 13—17: but the Spirit of God warns us what dreadful and ruinous poison is mingled therewith; 18.

mate fellowship with, the sons and daughters of Adam. 32—36. On account of all which excellencies and kindness, he, in the most earnest and condescending manner, entreats and charges you to hear, receive, and practically observe, his instructions, attend his ordinances, and receive himself in them, as the free gift of God, and as the only mean of true and everlasting happiness;—and warns you, that, if you refuse and hate him, you will infallibly and eternally ruin yourselves.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—How public, earnest, and extensive, are the calls of the gospel! Infinitely excellent is that Jesus Christ and his salvation, therein exhibited and offered, and that religion which is therein prescribed. And happy, in the blessings of time and eternity, are those persons, families, and nations, in which the knowledge of Christ and his truths prevail and reign! They are enriched with the fruits of his mediation, and filled with all the fulness of God. But is it not infinitely amazing that God's eternal Son, the Creator and Preserver of all things, should have, from everlasting, entered into the room of, and fixed his thoughts, his delights, upon the children of men? Surely then he deserves our strictest attention, our earliest and strongest affection. And just and righteous is the sorest punishment which can be inflicted upon those self-ruiners, who refuse him, and neglect and despise the ordinances of his grace. Let me consider this great Apostle and High Priest of my profession; this great ALL and IN ALL. Let my heart seek him early, earnestly, and above all things else. Let me love him, who first loved me, with my whole heart, soul, mind, and strength. Let me rejoice and delight in him as my exceeding joy and all my consolation. Let me carefully attend his ordinances, watching daily at his gates, at the posts of his doors: and, if I find him who is the great God my Saviour, and the eternal life, my pains will be infinitely more than rewarded.

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1—5. And why enter the ruinous house, or covet the ensnaring entertainment of an harlot, when the infinitely wise Jesus Christ, who is made of God unto us wisdom, hath framed, for his fellowship with men, a glorious church on earth and in heaven, fully supported by divine perfections, purposes, oracles, and offices: and hath prepared his own crucified self, his word, ordinances, and eternal felicities, for the nourishment and satisfaction of sinful men; and in the gospel, by his faithful prophets, apostles, and ministers, earnestly invites and beseeches even the most weak, wicked, and besotted, sinners of mankind to come by faith, and freely partake of his nourishing, strengthening, delightful, and satisfactory, fulness and blessings? 6—12. Earnestly he admonishes you to avoid all unnecessary intimacy with wicked persons, as you regard your temporal or eternal happiness; as by it you cannot, even in attempting their reformation, justly expect to profit them, but may be sure of procuring hatred and infamy to yourselves;—and to cultivate familiarity with wise and serious persons, whom you may both profit and be profited by;—and to study true and experimental godliness, as the proper mean to render you truly happy in this world, and in that which is to come;—and solemnly warns you that you yourselves must reap the inexpressibly important fruits of your attention to, or scornful rejection of, his instructions. 13—18. And remember, as before God, that nothing more effectually renders men despisers of Christ and his blessings than fellowship with light and lewd women, or false teachers; who, ignorant of every thing spiritually good, and extremely talkative, artfully and impudently seduce simple persons, who intend no such thing, to imagine that forbidden pleasures are peculiarly delightful. And alas! few of those tempted by them seriously consider that by such pleasures multitudes have already lost their lives, and are entered into the everlasting torments of hell.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—What great things Jesus Christ has done, and still does, for our salvation! O how unwilling is he that we should perish! Gloriously formed, and well supported and established, are his covenant and church. Rich are his gospel provisions—his own flesh and blood, nay, all the fulness of God. And free and unencumbered with legal qualifications are his gospel calls. How absurd, insolent, and foolish, are the scornful refusers thereof! For certain and just is their aggravated and everlasting ruin. And it is impossible to have fellowship with Christ in grace or glory, and yet live in intimacy with wicked men. There is need of the utmost care, both in giving and taking reproofs. Fidelity in reproofs is the surest evidence of genuine friendship. None are too wise to learn, nor too good to amend. And they who rage at rebuke, prove the weakness of their own understanding, as well as their want of grace. But, alas! what manifold temptations, suited to the taste of our corrupt hearts, are presented to us by Satan and his emissaries, to keep or draw us from Jesus Christ! And too many, through ignorance of, and inattention to, the danger, comply therewith. But, however sweet the pleasures of sin be in the mouth, they are bitter in the belly; they issue in endless torment and anguish.

CHAP. X.

Begins the proverbs themselves; which are short but weighty sentences, often two in a verse, contrasted to illustrate each other. They stand like pearls in a row, or on a string, there being seldom any remarkable coherence between the verses visible to us, much less any continued thread of discourse. We shall not therefore attempt to reduce the contents of this and the nineteen following chapters to any particular heads; but shall at the bottom exhibit an index of the subject matter of the several texts. And, as the Proverbs are but practical observations, we shall drop the Reflections, and only give a Paraphrase of the text instead of them.*

THE proverbs of Solomon. ^aA wise son maketh a glad father; but a foolish son is the heaviness of his mother.

²Treasures of wickedness profit nothing: but righteousness delivereth from death.

³The LORD will not suffer the soul of the righteous to famish: but he casteth away ^{*}the substance of the wicked.

⁴He becometh poor that dealeth with a slack hand: but the hand of the diligent maketh rich.

⁵He that gathereth in summer is a wise son: but he that sleepeth in harvest is a son that causeth shame.

⁶Blessings are upon the head of the just: but violence covereth the mouth of the wicked.

⁷The memory of the just is blessed: but the name of the wicked shall rot.

⁸The wise in heart will receive commandments: but [†]a prating fool shall fall.

⁹He that walketh uprightly walketh surely: but he that perverteth his ways shall be known.

¹⁰He that winketh with the eye causeth sorrow: but a prating fool shall fall.

¹¹The mouth of a righteous man is a well of life: but violence covereth the mouth of the wicked.

¹²Hatred stirreth up strifes: but ^{*}love covereth all sins.

¹³In the lips of him that hath understanding wisdom is found: but a rod is for the back of him that is void of understanding.

¹⁴Wise men lay up knowledge: but the mouth of the foolish is near destruction.

¹⁵The rich man's wealth is his strong city: the destruction of the poor is their poverty.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1. It is a great comfort to parents to see their children profiting by their instructions and examples, and growing up in wisdom, piety, and virtue. But it is a grief and burden to them when they are foolish, stubborn, and profligate. 2. Ill gotten riches afford no solid comfort in life, but draw on a wasting, or poisoning curse: but Jesus' righteousness imputed, and a holy, just, and merciful conduct, procure safety and deliverance from the greatest dangers. 3. The Lord, who has all fulness in his hand, will always grant necessary supplies for both soul and body to them who are justified in Christ, and live in a just and merciful manner. But he will deprive the wicked of their ill-gotten possessions by some stroke of his providence, or remove them from it by death. 4. Negligence and sloth, and even fraudulent methods of gain, bring men to poverty; but active diligence tends to enrich men both in temporals and spirituals. 5. To seize upon, and improve, opportunities of obtaining spiritual or temporal things, particularly in the time of youth, is a mark of true wisdom: but he that slothfully neglects them brings misery and shame upon himself and his parents. 6. The justified in Christ are, to their everlasting honour and safety, blessed in him with all the blessings of time and eternity: and outward blessings often attend the just and merciful on earth. But their own iniquity shall violently overwhelm and confound those who wickedly defraud and oppress their neighbours. 7. The pious and virtuous shall, at least after death, be remembered with honour and praise, men blessing God for their good example and useful conversation: but wicked livers shall either be forgotten or remembered with abhorrence. 8. They who are truly wise will thankfully receive and practice laws from God, or good advices from men: but self-conceited persons, who will not learn of others, but love to hear themselves talk, shall bring themselves into contempt, sin, and misery; nay, into hell. 9. He, who in dealing with God and men walks in candour, simplicity, and godly sincerity, is safe under the divine protection in his way to eternal life, and avoids manifold miseries and snares in this world: but he who indulges himself in hypocrisy towards God, and in inconstancy and deceit towards men, shall be detected and made a public reproach. 10. He, who under pretence of kindness betrays his neighbour, and by signs mocks him, or tempts others to injure him, is a common grievance, and shall at last become miserable: but a noisy and perpetual talker ruins himself by his words, and deserves to be beaten for his impertinence. 11. Good discourse always tends to the profit, comfort, and refreshment, of those that receive it; but wicked men, to their own ruin, pour forth virulent and mischievous language; or, if their language be fair, it but conceals the mischief which they intend to effect when opportunity serves. 12. Where there is hatred in the heart, almost every thing, however innocent, will be used to raise quarrels or disturbances: but love overlooks affronts and injuries, pacifies the mind of the injured, and composes contentions, for which too much ground had been given. 13. Where wisdom abounds in the heart, the discourse of the lips will be sensible and edifying; but nothing but sore afflictions here, or the torments of hell hereafter, can bring obstinate fools to any serious reflection. 14. They who know the value of true wisdom labour to enlarge their knowledge, and to keep it up till they have proper opportunities for using it: but fools rashly blab out what tends to their own or others' ruin. 15. Riches make men confident and secure, and even protect them against mani-

16 "The labour of the righteous tendeth to life; the fruit of the wicked to sin.
17 "He is in the way of life that keepeth instruction: but he that refuseth reproof er*reth.
18 "He that hideth hatred with lying lips, and he that uttereth a slander, is a fool.
19 "In the multitude of words there wanteth not sin: but he that refraineth his lips is wise.
20 "The tongue of the just is as choice silver: the heart of the wicked is little worth.
21 "The lips of the righteous feed many: but fools die for want †of wisdom.
22 "The blessing of the LORD, it maketh rich, and he addeth no sorrow with it.
23 "It is a sport to a fool to do mischief: but a man of understanding hath wisdom.
24 "The fear of the wicked, it shall come upon him: but the desire of the righteous shall be granted.
25 "As the whirlwind passeth, so is the wicked no more: but the righteous is an everlasting foundation.
26 "As vinegar to the teeth, and as smoke to the eyes, so is the sluggard to them that send him.
27 "The fear of the LORD †prolongeth days: but the years of the wicked shall be shortened.
28 "The hope of the righteous shall be gladness: but the expectation of the wicked shall perish.
29 "The way of the LORD is strength to the upright: but destruction shall be to the workers of iniquity.

30 "The righteous shall never be removed: but the wicked shall not inhabit the earth.
31 "The mouth of the just bringeth forth wisdom: but the froward tongue shall be cut out.

A "A FALSE* balance is abomination to the LORD: but †a just weight is his delight.
2 "When pride cometh, then cometh shame: but with the lowly is wisdom.
3 "The integrity of the upright shall guide them: but the perverseness of transgressors shall destroy them.
4 "Riches profit not in the day of wrath: but righteousness delivereth from death.
5 "The righteousness of the perfect shall †direct his way: but the wicked shall fall by his own wickedness.
6 "The righteousness of the upright shall deliver them: but transgressors shall be taken in their own naughtiness.
7 "When a wicked man dieth his expectation shall perish: and the hope of unjust men perisheth.
8 "The righteous is delivered out of trouble, and the wicked cometh in his stead.
9 "An hypocrite with his mouth destroyeth his neighbour: but through knowledge shall the just be delivered.

fold injuries in this world; whereas poverty depresses men's spirits, and exposes them to injury and abuse. 16. The industry of the righteous in outward things issues in the comfortable maintenance of himself and others; and his care for his soul issues in life spiritual and eternal: but whatever a wicked man has by inheritance, or by his own acquirement, hardens him in sin, and is abused to gratify his sinful lusts. 17. He is in the way to eternal life, who receives, lays up in his heart, and practises the instructions of God's word; and readily regards advices, and even reproofs, given him by others; but he, who neglects to give reproof, encourages men in their mistakes; and he, who refuses to take and improve instructions and reproofs, obstinately rushes upon his own destruction. 18. He, who conceals his hatred by great professions of friendship before one's face, and he who artfully vents slander behind one's back, is with all his cunning, an impious fool in God's reckoning, and his wickedness shall be publicly exposed. 19. Even in much speaking there are ordinarily to be found words idle or wicked. It is therefore prudent to be sparing in our words, and to consider well, both when and where, and what, and how, we speak. 20, 21. Prudent and pious discourse is pure and substantial; it edifies, instructs, and nourishes the hearers; but the heart of the wicked, being only evil, and that continually, is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked; nothing good can proceed from it; but they persist and perish in the devices of their own foolishness, neither knowing, nor caring to know, the way of life and peace. 22. It is not men's anxious labour and care that make them rich, either in temporal or spiritual things; but the blessing of God upon their lawful endeavours confers riches, and enables to enjoy them comfortably, without pressure of guilt, tormenting fear, or perplexing care. 23. Senseless sinners take pleasure in, and make a jest of, the most horrid impieties they can commit: but they that are wise carefully avoid mischief, and all sporting with it or delighting in it. 24. The miseries which wicked men fear under the awakenings of conscience shall come upon them; and whatever blessings the righteous desire and pray for shall be granted them in due season. 25. However the wicked may bluster for a while, and threaten to overthrow every thing that stands in their way, they quickly and terribly ruin themselves, and rush into misery; but the righteous being built on Christ the Rock of ages, and fixed in piety and virtue, stand fast for ever. No storms can shake their confidence, or deprive them of their durable and immovable felicity. 26. As vinegar sets the teeth on edge, and smoke is vexations to the eyes, so sluggish, negligent, and dilatory, persons vex and provoke them who send or employ them in any important business. 27. A religious observance of God's laws, and preserving of our body in temperance, soberness, and chastity, tends to prolong our life: but wickedness of itself, and by God's righteous judgments on account of it, brings on diseases, and hastens the sinner to his grave and to hell. 28. The hope of the godly, founded on Jesus' promise and blood, brings delight and satisfaction to the soul, and issues in everlasting felicity; but the hope of the wicked shall issue in disappointment and eternal misery. 29. Upright walking in Christ, and the exercising of piety and virtue, increase a person's strength for duty and courage in it: but the workers of iniquity shall be plagued with terrors, and overwhelmed in misery. 30. Nothing so establishes persons or families, as a relation to Christ as their righteousness, and a course of piety, justice, and mercy: but the wicked, however successful they may be for a time, shall never be able to fix themselves in their prosperity, but be rooted out from the enjoyment of it. 31. The godly, out of the good treasure of their heart, bring forth good discourse, which tends to make the hearers wise unto salvation: but he that uses his tongue to abuse, cozen, or raise dissension, or to blaspheme God and spread error, shall, in the end, have it silenced in hell. 32. The righteous know, and accustom themselves to speak, things truly useful and edifying: but the wicked abandon their lips to falsehood, flattery, fraud, and calumny, or such like subtle but detestable arts of doing mischief.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1. All manner of injustice and fraud is extremely hateful and detestable to God, the Governor of the world: but strict equity, in the whole of our commerce one with another, is highly pleasing to him. 2. Haughty conceit of ourselves, and insulting of others, draws along with it the utmost contempt and disgrace; both God and men take pleasure to mortify and expose the proud: but such as, having learned of Christ, live under a deep sense of their own weakness and unworthiness, find favour with men and acceptance with God. 3. When men sincerely practise what God has revealed to them, they may expect his Spirit to direct them in their duty and to their eternal felicity: but the obstinate adherence of sinners to their own lusts and imaginations, and their opposition to Christ and his laws, shall hurry them into certain and everlasting destruction. 4. Riches, heaped up by extortion or covetousness, are of no avail to deliver us from the wrath of God, or even the rage of men, when the time of punishment is come: but righteousness hath a promise of life annexed to it; it prevents those sins which would expose us to God's judgments or man's punishments; it secures against the sting of temporal, and prevents eternal death. 5, 6. Being made righteous in Christ, and sanctified by his grace, and studying a sincere and impartial observance of God's laws, are effectual means to secure direction in duty and deliverance from evil: but the wicked shall perish by those very impious and evil courses by which they hoped to secure or exalt themselves. 7. In death wicked men find all their projects and hopes utterly destroyed. Whatever they thought to accomplish by their riches, their power, or their friends, perishes together with them, while they themselves launch forth into eternal misery. 8. The righteous are frequently in an unexpected manner delivered from their perplexing troubles; and the wicked, who perhaps brought them into them, are plunged into those very miseries themselves. 9. By flatteries, false doctrines, and artful seductions, hypocrites draw their neighbours into sin, and thereby into ruin. But through knowledge of Christ and his word shall the righteous be guarded against their wiles, and preserved from the destruction which they intended. 10. It is matter of general gladness when wise and godly men prosper, and are advanced, because they use their power and wealth for the benefit of all around them; and great is the joy when wicked men, who, as plagues and curses where they dwell, corrupt their manners, and draw down the wrath of God upon them, are cut off. 11. By God's blessing upon the upright, and by their prayers, advices, and kindness, all around them are profited: but the wicked, by their blasphemies, errors, evil counsels, and max-city is exalted: but it is overthrown by the mouth of the wicked.

12 °He that is void of wisdom despiseth his neighbour: but a man of understanding holdeth his peace.

13 *A tale-bearer revealeth secrets: but he that is of a faithful spirit conceal-eth the matter.

14 °Where no counsel is the people fall: but in the multitude of counsellors there is safety.

15 °He that is surety for a stranger shall smart for it: and he that hateth suretyship is sure.

16 °A gracious woman retaineth honour; and strong men retain riches.

17 °The merciful man doeth good to his own soul: but he that is cruel troubleth his own flesh.

18 °The wicked worketh a deceitful work: but to him that soweth righteousness shall be a sure reward.

19 °As righteousness tendeth to life, so he that pursueth evil pursueth it to his own death.

20 °They that are of a froward heart are abomination to the LORD: but such as are upright in their way are his delight.

21 °Though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not be unpunished: but the seed of the righteous shall be delivered.

22 As a jewel of gold in a swine's snout, so is a fair woman who is without discretion.

23 °The desire of the righteous is only good: but the expectation of the wicked is wrath.

24 °There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty.

12. It is common for self-conceited fools to despise their neighbours, to reproach them as weak, or to render them ridiculous; but a prudent man, whatever he thinks, avoids speaking to the reproach of others; as, beside the wickedness of contemning others, none is so mean as to be insensible of it, or incapable of finding means of resentment.

13. They, who make a trade of carrying tales from one to another, never stick at treacherously discovering the secrets which have been intrusted to them; but a faithful friend conceals not only what has been entrusted to him, but every thing else that could tend to his neighbour's prejudice.

14. Where prudent counsel is wanting, nations and private affairs go to wreck: but, where many wise counsellors unite in their deliberations, every precaution will be taken, every danger prevented, and the most proper methods used, to ensure success.

15. He, who stands bound for the debts of another man, especially one whose ability and honesty are unknown to him, is in great danger to be ruined in his estate: and the way to be secure in that point is to avoid and hate all such engagements.

16. Remarkable and increasing grace and virtue in a woman will engage affection and respect, when all other accomplishments fade and decline; and strong men hold fast the wealth which they have acquired.

17. He, who is kind and bountiful to others, secures to himself a gracious reward from God: but he, who is covetous, hard-hearted, and cruel, brings trouble on himself and his relations.

18. Whatever wicked men do to render themselves rich, easy, or honoured, will disappoint their expectation; but they, who exercise themselves in true piety and virtue, shall infallibly obtain the blessed reward of their works in time and eternity.

19. As holiness and virtue promote true happiness here and hereafter, so, the more eagerly a man pursues an evil course, the more is he bent upon his own destruction.

20. Hypocrites, who live in enmity and opposition to God and his law, while they pretend much piety, kindness, equity, and candour, are of all men the most odious to him: but they who, being renewed by his grace, walk before him in truth, equity, simplicity, and godly sincerity, are, and shall for ever be, the objects of his special favour and delight.

21. Though wicked men should to their utmost attempt to strengthen themselves, by leagues and associates, they shall never be capable of protecting themselves from the just punishment of their sin: but the righteous, and often their children, for their sakes, though deserted of all men, shall be delivered by God himself from every thing ruinous.

22. As a golden jewel is very ill placed in the snout of a swine, which is still routing in mires and dunghills, so beauty is ill bestowed upon a woman, who, void of good sense, modesty, and virtue, loves to employ herself in perpetual talkativeness, and wallow in filthy lusts and whorish pleasures.

23. The righteous habitually desire, and shall obtain, solid and substantial blessings to themselves and others: but wicked men wish for mischief on others, and hope to execute their wrath and malice upon them; which in the end will only bring more fearful and lasting ruin upon themselves.

24, 25. They, who from a right principle are remarkably liberal to the poor and to pious institutions, shall find their stock proportionably increased for their real advantage; and, while they refresh and support others with their bounty, God shall reward them with prosperity of soul, in grace or comfort, or even with the enjoyments, of this present world: but the pinching hand of avarice prevents enjoyment, or brings down the curse of God upon our substance.

36. He who, in a time of scarcity, hoards up corn to 25 °The liberal soul shall be made fat: and he that watereth shall be watered also himself.

26 He that withholdeth corn, the people shall curse him: but blessing shall be upon the head of him that selleth it.

27 °He that diligently seeketh good procureth favour: but he that seeketh mischief, it shall come unto him.

28 °He that trusteth in his riches shall fall: but the righteous shall flourish as a branch.

29 °He that troubleth his own house shall inherit the wind: and the fool shall be servant to the wise of heart.

30 °The fruit of the righteous is a tree of life; and he that winneth souls is wise.

31 °Behold, the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth; much more the wicked and the sinner.

CHAP. XII.

WHOSO loveth instruction loveth knowledge: but he that hateth reproof is brutish.

2 °A good man obtaineth favour of the LORD: but a man of wicked devices will he condemn.

3 °A man shall not be established by wickedness: but the root of the righteous shall not be moved.

4 °A virtuous woman is a crown to her husband: but she that maketh ashamed is as rottenness in his bones.

5 °The thoughts of the righteous are right: but the counsels of the wicked are deceit.

6 °The words of the wicked are to lie in wait for blood: but the mouth of the upright shall deliver them.

7 °The wicked are overthrown, and raise the price, shall be hated and cursed by mankind: but good wishes and commendations from men, and blessings from God, shall attend him who then opens his granaries, and sells it at a moderate price.

27. He, who earnestly sets himself to contrive and do good to others, shall obtain favour with God and men; but he who makes mischief his business shall draw upon himself the evil which he designs against his neighbour.

28. He that anxiously grasps for, and trusts in, riches, as his surest support and defence, shall find them a broken reed, to pierce him through with many sorrows, and shall fall to decay as a withered leaf: but the righteous, who are united to Christ by faith, and walk in all holy and just conversation, shall receive, out of his fulness, abundant supplies of quickening and fructifying grace, and shall thrive and prosper in their concerns.

29. He, who, by his passion, prodigality, covetousness, and ambition, troubles his family, may for a time make a great bustle and stir, but it will issue in disappointment, disgrace, and poverty; and the fool, who knows not how to manage, and who lives without thought, shall be reduced to want, and forced to serve, if not sell himself to, a wise neighbour.

30. A good man's graces, prayers, instructions, and examples, are a mean of quickening, comfort, and prosperity, to others around: and he that, by instruction, prayer, or the like, draws men from Satan to the knowledge, faith, and obedience, of Christ, shews forth true and heavenly wisdom.

31. If God will not pass his own favourites, without proper correction for their sins in this world, who can justly expect that the obstinate and contemptuous breakers of his law shall escape the just punishment of their many crimes?

CHAP. XII. Ver. I. He who loves reproofs, advices, and instructions, will become wise and intelligent: but he who declines, hates, and is enraged at, rebukes for his faults, is under the power of his brutish passions; and there is little hope that he will ever know or act like a man.

2. The man who, being united to Christ, is clothed with his righteousness, and sanctified by his grace, and deals kindly and bountifully with others, shall be more and more favoured and blessed of God: but he, whose thoughts are bent on wickedness, shall be condemned to suffer the just punishment of his iniquity.

3. No man, however subtle or powerful, shall be able to establish his own or his family's greatness by wicked methods: but the righteous, being rooted and grounded in the Rock Christ, though shaken by manifold storms of trouble, shall remain unmoveable in a flourishing state.

4. A pious, prudent, active, chaste, and affectionate, wife is a singular ornament and honour to her husband: but one that is graceless, lazy, foolish, prodigal, peevish, boisterous, and wanton, shames him when abroad, and torments him at home; and, like an incurable disease, favours his heart, hastens him to his grave, wastes his substance, and ruins his family.

5. The thoughts and designs of good men are managed with piety, equity, candour, and truth; but the contrivances of the wicked are carried on with fraud, dissimulation, and falsehood.

6. Wicked men, by their consultations with one another, and by their reproach or perjury, study to undo their opposers: but they, who are sincerely good, will labour, by their advice, testimony, recommendation, or request, to deliver such innocent persons from their snares.

7. God himself not only defeats the ruinous projects of the wicked, but totally destroys and extirpates them and their families; whereas he continues others, shall have lasting joy and comfort for their reward. 21. Let the wicked plot as they will, nothing shall befall the righteous but what tends to their spiritual and eternal advantage: but the wicked shall be quite overwhelmed with inward plagues and outward calamities. 22. Lies and liars are remarkably hated and abhorred of God: but they who, in their speeches and whole conduct, act in truth, fidelity, and candour, are beloved, and shall be blessed, by him. 23. A prudent man conceals the knowledge he has, except when called by providence to use it for the benefit of others, and even then makes no boasting ostentation of it: but a fool, through thoughtlessness, rashness, and ambition to be esteemed wise, proclaims his own weakness and ignorance. 24. Diligent and prudent activity in honest callings is the way to obtain riches, honour, and authority; but laziness and villany render men poor and enslaved. 25. Anxious cares about the things of this world, griefs for disappointments and troubles, convictions of sin, and fears of hell, depress the most magnanimous spirit, and make it to pore disconsolate over its wretchedness: but good instruction and advice from friends, and especially the promises of God powerfully applied, revive and make it glad. 26. In this state of union with Christ, justification and adoption, in his inward graces and his exercises of holiness, and in his abundant happiness, a righteous man is more excellent than his neighbour: but the way that the wicked takes to render himself great or happy only deceives and disappoints him, and issues in misery. 27. Lazy wretches cannot endure to prosecute their own schemes for obtaining earthly enjoyments; or what they have deceitfully obtained never affords them any real comfort, but, as it were, slips through their fingers, or rots at their side, or is taken from them; but the wealth or honour, which is obtained by an honest diligence, is extremely valuable and lasting, being blessed of God. 28. In receiving Christ as our wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption, and walking in him, there is a real possession of life spiritual, and a certain prospect of life eternal; nor is there a single act of piety or virtue that tends to make a man miserable.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1. Wise children will reverently receive, obey, and submit to, their parents' instructions, advices, and corrections: but there is no hope of him who laughs and scoffs when he is admonished or chidden for his faults. 2. He, who lays out himself in instructing, advising, and comforting others, or in other edifying discourse, shall be regarded by men and rewarded by God: but evil speakers shall be forced to endure those miseries which they brought upon others. 3. He that carefully bridles his tongue thinks well before he speaks, and takes heed to utter nothing improper or unseasonable, preserves himself from much trouble and danger: but he who is extremely talkative, throwing out every thing that comes into his head, is in the ready way to be ruined, both by God and by man. 4. Nothing, neither riches, nor learning, nor honour, nor happiness, is to be gotten by mere sluggish desires, without diligent endeavours; but they who, in a dependance upon God, industriously use proper means, shall have sufficiency of outward things, and abundant comforts in Christ, both here and hereafter. 5. A righteous man not only carefully avoids, but hates, all manner of falsehood in heart, word, and deed: but a wicked man continues to impose upon others, till his detected falsehoods and villanies render him evidently odious to God and detested by men, as a stinking carcase; and so contemptible, that he dare not show his face for shame. 6. They, and establishes the persons, properties, and families, of the just. 8. Not earthly science, honour, or riches, but spiritual wisdom, and a prudent management of his affairs, by fair and honest means, will render a man highly and lastingly honoured, and commended of God and of all good men: but he who indulges his obstinate corruptions, hates and opposes his duty, and labours by wicked means to accomplish his ends, shall bring himself into present and everlasting contempt.

9. Far happier is he, who, making no pompous shew in the world, lives within the bounds of his income, though it should hardly afford him a single servant, than he who shows away with a great deal of elegance, equipage, and attendants, when he can hardly get necessary subsistence, without running into debt, or some other shameful and miserable shift. 10. Good men have implanted in their hearts a tender concern for the welfare and life of the brute animals, much more for that of their servants and neighbours: but the nature of the wicked is so cruel, that the very kindnesses which they affect to shew are maliciously designed and ruinous.

11. Diligent industry in lawful callings shall, through the blessing of God, afford men a competent portion of temporal things: but idleness and bad company mark a man foolish, and lead him into desperate, impoverishing, and ruinous, courses.

12. Wicked men desire, approve, and practice, deceitful arts for ruining others, and wish to be secure in so doing; but the piety and justice from whence righteous men's actions proceed, bring forth glory to God, maintenance and blessings to themselves, and much benefit and advantage to others around.

13. Wicked men are often brought into trouble by their own rash speeches, treasons, perjuries, lies, and calumnies: but the righteous, by the providence of God, and even by their prudent discourse, avoid and escape from many difficulties, in which otherwise they had been entangled.

14. A man shall receive abundant blessings from God, as the reward of that good which he has done by his pious and profitable discourses or works.

15. Fools are so self-conceited, that they consult no body, but hold right whatever they think or do themselves: but wise men, distrusting their own judgment and abilities, wisely ask and take the advice or instruction of others.

16. Fools, having no command of their passions, are no sooner provoked than rage and fury appear in their countenance, words, and actions: but prudent persons conceal that displeasure which would tend to their disgrace, and overlook the shameful provocation given them, rather than dishonour themselves by resenting it.

17. He who, especially when called to be a witness, boldly and freely speaks the truth, and nothing else, shews himself an honest man, and does justice to his neighbours: but he who conceals truth, forges lies, or attests falsehood, shews himself a deceitful and mischievous villain.

18. Some, by false accusations, calumnies, and bitter reproaches, wound the reputations, spirits, or estates, of their neighbours, and make discords and divisions among them; but good men, by their prudent speeches, will labour to heal men's reputations, compose their disputes, and comfort and edify their souls.

19. Constant adherence to strict truth in his speeches establishes a man's credit; and what he says can never be disproved: but a liar, though he may be at first believed, is soon after found out and confuted; and he is more apt to contradict himself, and blast his reputation for ever.

20. They who plot mischief shall, to their great vexation, be disappointed in their expectations, and even fall into that evil which they intended for others; but they, who by their counsels labour to promote the piety, peace, and happiness of who have Jesus' righteousness imputed to them, and his grace implanted in them, and who study uprightness and equity in their whole conduct, shall be preserved sound in the faith, stedfast in the obedience of the gospel, unmoved by Satan's temptations or the world's frowns or smiles : but the wicked man, and all his wicked contrivances, shall be overthrown by their own iniquity. 7. Some, in their pride and vanity, make a great show of wealth, wisdom, or grace, when they are worth nothing ; while others, by their garb, or their speeches, conceal their abundant riches, knowledge, or grace. 8. Riches are so far from rendering men truly happy, that they tempt others to rob or to accuse them, that their lives may be saved by huge sums of money ; whereas the poor is reckoned so inconsiderable, that no body thinks it worth while to rob, accuse, or even rebuke, him. 9. The holiness, comfort, and prosperity, of the righteous continues in its brightness and glory : but the small appearance of comfort and happiness, which the wicked enjoy in this world, will quickly be extinguished in endless misery. 10. Pride is the principal, and often the sole cause of quarrels and contentions, and of the continuance of them : the opinionated cannot bear contradiction ; the aspiring, a rival ; the self willed, opposition ; but they, who piously consult their God and their bible, and prudently advise with their discreet neighbours, transact things in quietness and peace. 11. Wealth, gotten by fraud, gaming, theft, oppression, or the like, having the curse of God upon it, shall quickly be wasted : but that which is gotten by honest industry and diligence shall continue and increase. 12. The delay of that which a man eagerly expects renders his mind very uneasy ; but, when he enjoys what he long desired and looked for, it is sweet, satisfactory, and reviving. 13. He, who despises God's word, or the advices of his faithful friends, shall quickly be ruined : but he, who reverently submits himself to, and obeys God's commandments, shall be rewarded. 14. The instructions of a good man, and much more the doctrines of God's word, refresh, comfort, and enliven, the soul, and preserve from those pernicious principles, and destructive practices, by which many are ensnared. 15. A prudent, pious, and regular, behaviour is most amiable and acceptable to all men : but the behaviour of lawless and wicked persons, like a rough way, is very ruinous to themselves, and offensive to God and good men. 16. Prudent persons undertake nothing but with due deliberation, and what they understand ; and manage their affairs with knowledge and discretion : but fools discover their weakness, by rashly meddling with matters out of their reach. 17. Unfaithfulness in discharging his trust, or delivering his message, will bring a wicked servant, ambassador, or minister, into shame, condemnation, and misery : but he who acts faithfully procures safety and advantage both to his master and himself. 18. It is an high satisfaction to enjoy what we desire, especially spiritual blessings and comforts ; but foolish sinners hate to forsake their lusts and sinful practices, even as means of receiving the choicest benefits. 19. By gaining his estate in a just and upright manner, and by doing good with it while he lives, and by earnest instruction of, and fervent prayers for, his family, a good man takes the surest course to fix his estate upon them for many generations ; but the sinner leaves a curse entailed upon his wealth : and by the righteous providence of God, it is quickly transferred from his family to one that is truly pious and virtuous. 23. Poor men, by their diligent labour and industry, many times abundantly provide for themselves and family, and even grow rich : while others, who are rich, are reduced to poverty, through their ignorance, rashness, injustice, oppression, deceit, &c. 24. That fond affection, which restrains parents from duly correcting their children when they do amiss, is a real and ruinous hatred, a sinful withholding from them a mean appointed by God for their amendment and happiness ; but parents who truly love their children will study, by early and christian corrections, to prevent their fixing in evil habits or customs. 25. A righteous man never wants satisfaction, because his desires are moderate, and he lives in a temperate use of God's blessings : God gives him a competency, a heart to use it, and contentment in it : but wicked men, insatiable in their desires, and extravagant in the abuse of their plenty, shall be indigent in the midst of abundance, or reduced to the distresses of poverty.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 1. A virtuous wife, by her piety, prudence, good economy, and the like, supports and advances her family in honour, happiness, and wealth : but a wicked imprudent wife, by her pride, prodigality, idleness, carelessness, or otherwise, will quickly reduce a happy family to poverty, disgrace, and ruin. 2. By an universal regard to piety and virtue, men manifest the fear and holy reverence of God implanted in their heart : but, by an obstinate rebellion against his laws, and eager study to gratify their sinful lusts and passions, they discover their profane contempt of his majesty. 3. The insolent, calumniating, and contemptuous, speeches of proud men are very injurious and wounding to others, and often at last prove a scourge to themselves : but the prudent, peaceable, and pleasing, words of wise men neither offending God nor men, secure them in safety. 4. They who would have plenty must be content with the dirt that labour makes ; or, if the tillage of the fields be neglected, famine must follow : but laborious tillage will issue in great plenty. 5. Proud self-conceited scoffers at what is holy and serious are never like to profit by their studies, or to come to the knowledge of divine truth : whereas they, who humbly, and dependently on God apply themselves to search out truth, quickly attain to the knowledge of whatever is necessary and useful. 6. It is proper to flee from the company of such persons as discover the corruption of their heart in the vanity or wickedness of their words. 7. Prudent men chiefly study to know how to act in their own calling and religious course : but wicked men employ their knowledge and wit to deceive others. 8. Insensible of the evil, malignity, and danger, of sin, wicked men harden themselves in it, please themselves with their own and other men's sins, sport themselves in the commission or recollection thereof, and so provoke God to wrath against them : but they, who are afraid of, hate, and avoid, sin, truly love and regard their neighbours, and obtain favour with God and man. 9. No one can know what another inwardly suffers in worldly griefs and vexations, or in troubles of conscience ; neither can they share with him in his inward joys, particularly those of a spiritual nature. 11. The stately houses, wealthy and honoured families, of the wicked, shall in wrath be reduced to ruin and misery, and their hopes of eternal happiness issue in everlasting despair; whereas the poor and unsettled family of the truly pious shall flourish, and become illustrious. 12. There is need strictly and impartially to try courses and customs; for prejudice, self-flattery, affected ignorance, and the like, make many things seem lawful and good which are really sinful and ruinous. 13. Immoderate joys and pleasures are ordinarily mingled with, and issue in, inward vexation and anguish: and the diverting of inward convictions and important duties by carnal mirth will quickly issue in the weepings and wailings of eternal despair. 14. He, who even in heart revolts from God and his ways, shall be fearfully overwhelmed with the punishment of his sin; but a good man, who stedfastly cleaves to the Lord, shall enjoy great comfort in the testimony of a good conscience, and in keeping God's commands. 15. Weak half-witted persons believe every idle story and plausible pretence, and thereby are drawn into evil: but prudent men examine things before they trust to them or practise them. 16. A wise man, when warned of his error or danger, fears to displease God or to provoke his wrath, and immediately starts back from the sin to which he was tempted, or in which he had involved himself: but a fool rages against those that reprove, warn, or threaten, him, and goes on resolutely in sin, fearless of any danger. 17. He who is soon angry involves himself in rash and imprudent words and actions, for which he is to be pitied: but a man who conceals his wrath, and deliberately contrives how to take a cruel revenge, deserves to be hated and abhorred. 18. Inconsiderate sinners hold fast their wickedness, and delight in it, as their portion and inheritance, till they feel the woeful effects of it: but the prudent, to their remarkable honour and influence, increase in spiritual understanding. 19. Even in this world the wicked are often obliged to stoop and submit to the righteous, and implore their favour and relief: and at the last day the debasement of the wicked and exaltation of the righteous shall be complete. 20. If a man fall into poverty, his neighbours, who once professed great friendship, will forsake and disregard him: but, if a man grow rich, many, who before took no notice of him, will pretend great affection to him, and even the greatest will offer him their favour. 21. He who overlooks and contemns his poor neighbour, provokes God to punish and render him miserable: but he who compassionately relieves the poor shall be blessed by God on that account. 22. They who contrive mischief against their innocent neighbours, miss their end, and ruin themselves; but they who study to do men real good shall be graciously and faithfully rewarded by God. 23. Industrious labours in any lawful calling will bring in some gain: but talkativeness and proud boasting tend only to make men beggars. 24. Riches are a singular ornament and advantage to wise men, who know how to use them, because thereby they have the greater opportunities of doing good: but riches only render foolish men's folly the more notorious, because they have thereby the greater opportunities of doing mischief and wickedness. 25. ^aA SOFT answer turneth away wrath: but grievous words stir up anger.

2 ^bThe tongue of the wise useth knowledge aright: but the mouth of fools poureth out foolishness.

3 ^aThe eyes of the LORD are in every place, beholding the evil and the good.

will at all hazards avow the truth, to save the lives or characters of such as are falsely accused: but deceitful men will boldly pour forth lies and calumnies to destroy the innocent. 26. They that fear God may be confident of his protection to themselves and their posterity in times of danger. 27. An holy regard to God, and obedience to his law, will issue in men's solid and eternal comfort, and preserve them from those sinful courses in which many are ensnared to their own destruction. 28. Kings ought to cherish their subjects; for on their number, wealth, and power, their own honour depends; and, if they be wasted by unnecessary wars, or forced by oppression into other countries, it will prove the ruin of the kingdom. 29. He, who under great provocations can maintain a calmness of temper, discovers much wisdom and grace: but he, who is hastily inflamed by reproaches and ill usage, exposes his corruption and folly, and makes it apparent to every one. 30. Nothing more conduces to health and happiness than a mind renewed by God's Spirit, freed from the dominion of sinful lusts, quiet, gentle, and contented: but envy and such like fretful passions, torment men's spirits, waste their bodies, and hasten them towards hell and the grave. 31. He that defrauds or oppresses the poor, or withholds the relief which their circumstances require, forgets, and even practically blasphemes, God, who makes them poor, and engages himself to defend and relieve them: but he who hath any due respect to God will shew pity to the poor, and labour to supply them. 32. In death the wicked is suddenly and irresistibly driven away from all his beloved hopes and enjoyments, in his sinful state; and often in the very act of sin, and always on account of it, into everlasting misery: but the righteous, being united to Christ, clothed with his righteousness, and sanctified by his indwelling Spirit, has, even in trouble and death, well grounded hopes of eternal felicity. 33. Prudent men study to grow in grace, and in the knowledge of Christ, without making unseasonable or ostentatious demonstrations of it: but foolish men expose themselves by their eager desire to vent their minds in every company. 34. Religion and virtue, equity and kindness, through the blessing of God, increase the glory, power, and wealth, of a nation: but rebellion against God, or injuring of mankind, disgraces and ruins societies. 35. A prudent, active, and faithful, minister of state cannot but be dear to a wise king: and one who by his ill management disgraces his government, and brings all things into confusion, cannot but be the object of his wrath.

CHAP. XV.—Ver. 1. Mild, submissive, and yielding answers pacify anger and wrath: but sharp, contemptuous, and impertinent language increases passion, or kindles it up where it was not before. 2. A wise man gives profitable instructions, and understands how to speak in a seasonable and prudent manner: whereas fools by the worthless stuff they utter, and by their indiscreet and confused manner of expressing their thoughts, only manifest their own folly. 3. The infinite knowledge and observance of God extends every where, and to every person or action, thought or disposition, whether good or bad. 4. Wholesome and profitable discourses instruct the ignorant, comfort the grieved, heal breaches, cure contentions among neighbours, and soften the exasperated: but corrupt, proud, passionate, and erroneous, discourse disturbs the peace, and corrupts the temper and manners of both speakers and hearers. 5. Inattention to the instructions, advices, and reproofs, of superiors, manifests, and issues in, the greatest folly: but he who willingly receives rebukes, and carefully observes them, shews himself wise, and prudently consults his own welfare and happiness. 6. A truly pious, just, and merciful man is really very rich; as, however little of this world's wealth he may possess, he has all things working for his real advantage, and God's blessing on what he has, and is contented with it: but vexation and trouble imbitter the revenues of the wicked. They are gotten with anxiety, enjoyed under a curse, employed in the service of sin, and tend to their ruin. 7. Wise men tender good instructions, advices, and reproofs, to all around them: but foolish men having their heart filled with ignorance and lust, impart nothing valuable. 8. All the external devotions, and most liberal almsgivings, of wicked men are so far from recommending them to God's favour, that they are abhorred by him, as but the vile gratifications of their own pride, legality, or other lusts: but the most humble prayers and meanest services of those united to Christ, which are performed in faith and dependence on him, and sincerely aiming at his glory, are exceedingly acceptable to him and issue in much comfort to themselves. 9. The whole designs, contrivances, thoughts, words, and actions, of wicked men are abominable to the Lord; and this renders their religious services corrupt and hated: but he loves such as having Jesus' righteousness imputed to their souls do, in their thoughts, affections, and endeavours, earnestly study to perfect holiness in his fear. 10. Such as dislike faithful reproof for their apostasy from the ways of the Lord shall be severely punished; and at last, if they continue haters of admonition and advice, shall certainly be damned. 11. The state of the dead and damned, and every other thing unknown to us, are perfectly known to God. How exact then must be his knowledge and observance of the dispositions, purposes, and thoughts of men! 12. Mockers of God and religion shun the admonitions of their conscience, and bate such as reprove them; and even avoid the company of wise, religious, or virtuous, persons, lest they should meet with their reproofs or advices. 13. When the conscience is graciously purged and quieted, and the mind comforted, it issues in outward health and cheerfulness: but grief and sorrow, seizing on the heart, disturb, weaken, and dispirit it, and make a man a burden to himself and to all around. 14. Such as are truly wise, and inwardly instructed by the Spirit of God, earnestly study to obtain more solid knowledge: but persons void of true understanding gape after, and relish, nothing but frivolous, vain, and unprofitable, things. 15. All the days of persons discontented under their afflictions are grievous and miserable; but they who have their conscience graciously quieted, their heart joyful in God, and content with their lot, have more true and perpetual comfort and satisfaction than can be enjoyed in the most delicious banquet on earth. 16. A very small share of earthly enjoyments, attended with real grace and true holiness, is better than the largest abundance of wealth, with the disquiet, confusion, and anxious care, which usually attend it. 17. The meanest fare, attended by the mutual love of friends, is far preferable to the most sumptuous entertainment, attended with hatred and contention. 18. Hasty, passionate, and furious persons are apt to quarrel for very trifles, and so disturb the most peaceable company: but those who are humble, meek, and patient, instead of raising strife themselves, will labour to compose it when it has been raised by others. 19. A slothful man is apt to fancy or pretend a great many unconquerable difficulties in the way of his duty: but a good and active person looks on his way as easy and plain, notwithstanding a few trifling hindrances. 20. Nothing so much rejoices the heart of pious parents as to see their children grow up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord: but foolish children requite their mothers' fond indulgence by irreverent carriage towards them; and by despising their commands, instructions, advices, or reproofs, and so making them contemptible. 21. They, who are void of grace, sense, and consideration, take pleasure in doing the most empty, absurd, and wicked, things: but such as are truly knowing and wise, study, for their own pleasure and comfort, as well as for the honour of God, to conduct their thoughts, words, and actions, in a regular, sincere, and holy, manner. 22. Without prudent counsellors, and for want of due deliberation, the most important designs and projects often miscarry: but where by prudent consultation, difficulties are foreseen and provided against, men's purposes succeed to their wish. 23. Ready, pertinent, and seasonable, advice is an honour and comfort to him who gives it, especially when the good success of it is found, and it is very profitable to him who receives it. 24. Holy and gracious persons in the pursuit of everlasting life, set their affections and hopes on things above, have their conversation in heaven, and eye the glory of God in every thing they do, that they may escape sinful pollutions, horrid dangers, and everlasting destruction. 25. God takes pleasure to debase the proud, demolishing their stately houses, overturning their families, and ruining their honours and wealth: but he will preserve poor widows, who have no helper, in their rights, against every insolent or covetous invader. 26. The Lord abhors the thoughts, inclinations, purposes, and contrivances, of wicked men: but the hearts of the godly, being purged by his blood and Spirit, their prayers, and edifying instructions, advices, and reproofs, are pleasant to him and his people. 27. They who hasten to be rich, and with anxious care labour for worldly enjoyments, not only harass all around them, but weary themselves, and plague their families, and bring the curse of God on what they have; but he who hates bribes, and other unlawful methods of gain, shall have a competent portion of the good things of this world, and comfort and prosperity in it. 28. A good man avoids answering before he is asked, and studies to say nothing but what is pure, profitable, suitable, and seasonable: but a wicked man is apt, in a rash and forward manner, to speak what is unsuitable, sinful, and hurtful. 29. The Lord utterly dislikes wicked persons, and refuses to regard their prayers: but he is ever willing and ready to hear the prayers of the godly, offered to him in faith, and is their sure and present help in time of work or warfare. 30. It is a remarkable pleasure to behold the manifold works of God; and the good report of a given and offered Saviour, and of reconciliation to God and eternal salvation, or, even a good report of ourselves or neighbours, affords inward satisfaction and comfort. 31. They, who with pleasure listen to and improve wholesome instructions, tending to promote their spiritual or eternal life, increase in wisdom, and shall be qualified to give good instruction to others. 32. Such as refuse or condemn proper instructions or reproofs, undervalue their own soul, neglect the means of its safety, and, for the sake of some outward and perishing thing, wilfully ruin it: but he who delights to be taught and admonished, increases in solid, soul-comforting, and saving, knowledge, wisdom, and prudence. 33. An holy awe of God, and real regard to his way, disposes us to the study of true wisdom and knowledge, and is a certain mark of it: and humility, and patient submission in a low condition, is the best preparation for honour and preferment.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 1. Every right inclination, thought, or purpose, in the heart, and all right management of our words, are entirely the free gift and work of God. 2. Ignorance and self-conceit make men often to think themselves faultless and holy in their conduct: when the Lord, who searches and judges the intentions and frame of the heart, finds it quite otherwise. 3. Commit whatever works you undertake to the direction and management of God in his providence, and implore his blessing therein, so shall your honest desires be accomplished. 4. God made and manages all creatures for his own service, and for the manifestation of his glorious perfections; yea, even the wicked, to be instruments of his just vengeance, and at last the objects of it, by continuing in their impieties. 5. When men are inwardly proud, on account of their gifts, honours, or wealth, God hates them, and will certainly punish them in their pride. 6. By God's exercise of his mercy and faithfulness in giving his Son, and fulfilling his promises, men's iniquity is expiated, pardoned, and subdued; and even, by their exercise of mercy, equity, and fidelity, the punishment of sin in outward calamities is often prevented. And by the fear of God implanted in the heart, and a continued holy regard to his law, men hate, watch against, and avoid, sin; and so escape the fearful consequences of it. 7. When a man makes it his habitual and earnest endeavour to receive Christ, and walk in him soberly, righteously, and godly, the Lord, as his God reconciled in Christ, inclines even those that were his foes to become his friends. 8. A small estate honestly gotten, and cheerfully enjoyed, is preferable to vast incomes heaped up by oppression, and kept without hospitality. 9. A man's mind fixes its end, contrives the means, and perhaps reckons upon the success: but the Lord determines the event, and orders every motion and step taken towards it. 10. The edicts, commands, and decisions, of kings ought always to be directed by the unerring law of God; and their decisions ought to be so just and exact, that no man may be wronged thereby. 11. The Lord requires that, even in our private dealings, every thing, even the smallest, should be managed with the most scrupulous integrity and equity. 12. Kings, being in the most exalted station, ought to be distinguished patterns of piety and virtue, and to countenance it in others, as the only security of their throne. 13. Kings ought highly to value and love sincere and faithful advisers, who truly inform them of what tends to their own and their kingdoms' welfare. 14. The wrath of a king is almost as terrifying as a message of death, and, especially in despotic governments, often issues in death to its object: but virtuous and prudent courtiers will pacify it, and make a reconciliation. 15. The favour and gracious smiles of a prince are extremely reviving and comfortable, and fruitful of expected happiness, especially to such as he had been formerly incensed against. 16. But real religion, and a solid understanding to discern between good and evil, are preferable to all the wealth that kings can bestow or industry procure. 17. It is the constant aim and endeavour of upright men to decline every thing that is evil, and to follow that which is good: and, by heedful care of their thoughts, words, and actions, their souls and bodies are, through the grace and providence of God, preserved from destruction. 18. Pride and haughtiness are the ordinary forerunners of debasement and misery, and the means of bringing it on men. 19. It is better, in imitation of Christ and his dear saints, to submit to the meanest condition, and patiently to bear injuries, than to partake of victories, spoil, and wealth, along with the proud. 20. They, who understand business thoroughly, and manage it prudently and discreetly, bid fair to have good success: but it is only by trusting in God that true and everlasting happiness can be obtained. 21. They, whose heart is well furnished with experimental knowledge of God's word, take the proper method to obtain an high reputation for wisdom and prudence: and, if they can with eloquence and clearness communicate their instructions, it will greatly tend to the edification of others. 22. Spiritual knowledge and grace are the beginning and earnest of eternal life, are comfortable to him who enjoys them, and useful to others: but the learning of fools is frivolous and vain: and even their instructions do but render men foolish. 23, 24. The enlightened mind of a wise man instructs him to speak judiciously and pertinently, gives weight of evidence to what he says, and renders it pleasant to the hearer, as a honeycomb is to the mouth, and nourishing and strengthening as marrow is to the bones. 25. Many are highly pleased with their own ways, even when they are such as tend to their ruin, spiritual, temporal, and eternal. 26. He that, prompted by his wants, labours in worldly employments, procures his own preservation in life: whereas he, who labours in plaguing others, will find even every evil word turn to his own hurt. 27. Wicked men with great pains contrive and labour to do mischief, as if trea-

2 A wise servant shall have rule over a son that causeth shame, and shall have 10^j † A reproof entereth more into a wise man than an hundred stripes into a fool.

11^m An evil man seeketh only rebellions could be gained by it: and their lying, slanderous, and insolent, speeches are very injurious, painful, and destructive. 28. Persons of a perverse, passionate, and contentious, spirit, raise dissensions among those who are inclined to live at peace; and they, who secretly defame, backbite, detract, and whisper about false stories, make breaches between the kindest neighbours and dearest relations. 29, 30. Such as are eager to do mischief, or live by violence and rapine, not content to do wrong themselves, entice others to become their companions, and then lead them into the most pernicious courses. With profound study they contrive the ruin of others; and then, by their advice, or giving of the sign, it is furiously effected. 33. Events to us are fortuitous as the lot which is cast into the lap of a garment, or into a hollow vessel: but to God all things are known, and all decreed; and nothing, no not the drawing of the lot, happens but according to his eternal counsels, and by the particular direction of his providence.

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 1. The meanest fare, enjoyed in peace with God and our neighbour, and with quietness in our own mind, is better than the most sumptuous cheer, attended with brawling, contention, and strife. 2. A pious and prudent servant ought to be preferred to a foolish and wicked child, and deserves a share of the inheritance in a family. 3. As gold and silver are tried and purified in the fire, so the Lord, who searches the hearts of all men, proves and refines his own people from their sinful dross in the furnace of affliction.—
4. It is an honour to parents to have a numerous posterity walking in holiness and virtue; and it is the honour of children to have pious and prudent ancestors. 8. Presents and bribes appear so lovely and tempting, that few can refuse them, or decline gratifying the desire of the giver. 9. Overlooking of injuries, and mutual forbearance, is the best way to preserve and increase friendship and love: but repeating old faults breaks the strictest bonds of friendship, and makes an irreconcilable separation. 11. Some men are so wilful and refractory, that, shaking off all reverence to God and their superiors, they are wholly and irreclaimably bent on mischief; they must therefore be cut off by some exemplary punishment. 12. It is less dangerous to meet a bear in the lion; therefore a cruel messenger shall be sent against him.

12ⁿ Let a bear robbed of her whelps meet a man, rather than a fool in his folly.
13^o Whoso *rewardeth evil for good, evil shall not depart from his house.
14^p The beginning of strife is as when one letteth out water: therefore leave off contention before it be meddled with.
15^q He that justifieth the wicked, and he that condemneth the just, even they both are abomination to the LORD.
16^r Wherefore is there a price in the hand of a fool to get wisdom, seeing he hath no heart to it?
17^s A friend loveth at all times, and a brother is born for adversity.
18^t A man void of || understanding strieth hands, and becometh surety in the presence of his friend.
19^u He loveth transgression that loveth strife: and he that exalteth his gate seeketh destruction.
20^v *He that hath a froward heart findeth no good: and he that hath a perverse tongue falleth into mischief.
21^w He that begetteth a fool doth it to his sorrow: and the father of a fool hath no joy.
22^x A merry heart doth good †like a medicine: but a broken spirit drieth the bones.
23^y A wicked man taketh a gift out of the bosom to pervert the ways of judgment.
24^z Wisdom is before him that hath understanding: but the eyes of a fool are in the ends of the earth.
25^a A foolish son is a grief to his father, and bitterness to her that bare him.
26^b Also to punish the just is not good, nor to strike princes for equity.
27^c He that hath knowledge spareth his words: and a man of understanding is of †an excellent spirit.
28^d Even a fool, when he holdeth his peace, is counted wise: and he that shut-height of her rage than a furious fool in the pursuit of his unruly passions and desires. 14. When men begin a quarrel, it gradually becomes more and more violent and extensive till it is with difficulty made up: it is best therefore to check and stifle all contentions in the beginning. 16. In his mysterious providence, God gives to many foolish persons natural abilities, worldly substance, and opportunities of learning wisdom: and yet gives them no sense or inclination to desire it. 17. A true friend continues constant in his affection and usefulness, however our circumstances alter: and a brother, who deserves the name, is especially kind and helpful in a time of adversity. 18. He is extremely foolish whose kindness hurries him into rash suretyship for the debts of others, especially when they are suspected of knavery. 19. He certainly loves wickedness who accustoms himself to brawling and contention: and he, who carries himself proudly, scornfully, and contemptuously, towards others, lives above his estate, and builds sumptuous houses, hurries himself into ruin; and breakers of the public peace open wide the floodgates to all impiety. 20. A man of wicked devices, which he resolves to accomplish by any means, shall find himself deceived in his expectations of good: and a false, deceitful, and self-inconsistent, tongue will prove the ruin of its owner. 22. Nothing more conduces to health than solid quietness of conscience, and a moderate cheerfulness of spirit: but excessive sadness and grief waste the body, and dry it up to a mere skeleton. 23.

Many wicked persons, who would refuse an open bribe, will willingly enough take bribes or presents secretly, in order to influence them to give counsel or judgment contrary to law and equity. 24. A pious and prudent man has his mind fixed upon the unerring oracles of God, and has his sense and wisdom at hand to guide and govern him; but a foolish one has his thoughts always wandering and roving about impertinencies; and is never in any fixed or serious temper.
—27. The more wise and knowing a man is, he is the less apt to be talkative, speaking only what is fit and necessary; and his wisdom renders his mind and temper humble, calm, temperate, and dispassionate. 28. So great a virtue it is to be duly silent, that, if even a foolish person restrain his lips from rash and impertinent talk, he is for the time reckoned a wise and intelligent person.

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 1. While self-conceited persons seek to distinguish themselves by their high pretences to wisdom, and inconstant ones seek, but never find, satisfaction, they, who have a true desire of knowledge, disengage themselves from all avocations, in order to study true wisdom. 2. A vain man studies knowledge, or even religion, for no other end but to make a shew with it. 3. Wherever wicked men come, they bring their contempt of God, and reproaching of religion along with them, which will at last issue in contempt and misery to themselves. 4. A wise man's words, as deep waters, flow calmly, and contain the deep mysteries of God: and his heart, being full of wisdom, is ever sending forth streams of instructive, refreshing, quickening, and fructifying influences to all around him. 5. It is exceeding great wickedness to pervert justice, and, through favour or interest, to connive at and acquit the wicked, or to give the cause against a righteous man through prejudice or partiality. 6, 7. Fools, by meddling in other men's quarrels, or by speeches irritating others against them, procure mischief, and even lasting and eternal ruin, to themselves. 8. The slanders and reproaches of tale-bearers, however covered over with pretences of sorrow, and however greedily they are received by the hearers, like mortal and incurable wounds, pierce to and rankle the very heart. 9. Idleness and prodigality are nearly allied, and both issue in the ruin of the persons guilty of them. Negligence about our soul is as fatal as open and avowed ungodliness. 10. Jesus Christ, and all the perfections, promises, and providences, of God in him, are an impregnable defence and satisfaction to all such as by faith flee to him: no enemy nor danger can ever hurt them. 11. It is only in his own conceit that the rich man's wealth appears a mean of remarkable safety either here or hereafter. 12. Pride in prosperity, forgetfulness of God, and despising of others, are certain means and forerunners of destruction: and humility, meekness, and patience, in a low condition, are the best preparation for honour and preferment. 13. He who, to show his quick parts, or through a forwardness of temper, answers to a matter before he hears it fully and understands it, shames himself, and manifests his folly. 14. A manly spirit, especially if encouraged and supported by the influences of the Holy Ghost, will bear up under manifold and sore calamities of an external kind: but, if the spirit be wounded with melancholy dejection, and a sense of God's wrath, how insupportable is the case, till Jesus, by his blood and grace, give relief! 15. Prudent persons, by diligent meditation, and by attentive listening to instruction, labour to increase more and more in wisdom. 16. There are few men so mean, base, or wicked, but large gifts and presents will procure them release from prison, nay, bring them into favour with great men, or even to the honour of waiting upon princes. 17. They, who are first in representing their case,

²¹ ^v Death and life are in the power ordinarily make it to appear right, and even prepossess the judge in their favour; but, by diligent search into their allegations, their neighbours often find innumerable mistakes in their representations.

18. In some cases, where the parties contending are very powerful to maintain their pretensions, and the reasons strong on both sides, the referring of the determination to God by the lot is the proper method to put each into quiet possession of that which falls to his share.

19. No contentions are so sharp and obstinate as those between near relations and long-continued friends. It is easier to take strong cities, or to bow or break the strongest iron bars, than to make a reconciliation.

20. Great care ought to be taken about our words; for, according as they are wholesome, good, and edifying, or are bad and unsavoury, shall be our temporal or eternal reward for them.

21. Much evil or much good necessarily issues from the right or wrong use of our tongues: and as men love or accustom themselves to good or bad discourse shall be their reward or punishment; nay, ordinarily they who love to talk much shall suffer by it.

22. To be provided with a pious, prudent, and active, wife is a great blessing, and a singular instance of God's favour.

23. Not boldness, but modest entreaties and doleful supplications, become those who are poor and miserable: but rich men are too apt to be so elated with their outward circumstances as to return haughty and harsh answers.

24. Such as have friends must study to behave towards them in a friendly manner, in doing them all good offices possible: and sometimes friends are found that will be more constant and faithful in helping us in a day of affliction than our nearest relations.

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 1. A poor, honest, and upright, man is much more happy and honourable, than a rich wicked man that makes no conscience either of speaking or acting in a wise and gracious manner.

2. When a man is ignorant, not knowing what to follow or what to avoid, he cannot become holy or happy. And he, who in a rash and unadvised manner pursues his purpose, cannot fail to commit many sinful blunders.

3. When a man's ignorance and wickedness have made him to miscarry, he often blames the providence of God, and frets and murmurs against him.

4. When men grow rich they are sure to have many courtiers for their favour, and professing themselves their hearty friends; but when they become poor, and need friends, even those who were formerly kind turn their backs on them.

5. False witnesses, and private calumniators, shall at last, however slowly, meet with the due punishment of their wickedness.

6, 7. Multitudes will court the favour of the great and liberal, who can enrich or advance them; but every body is apt to desert and condemn the poor, who need and beg their assistance.

8. He that receives Christ learns the true knowledge of God; and he, who strictly practices the direction of his word, shews a real regard to his own soul, and shall obtain the spiritual and eternal blessings which he needs.—10. Not plenty, prosperity, or pleasure, but rather stripes, are fit for fools: and much less is it proper for slaves to be able wantonly to domineer over princes, and men of great wealth or honour.

11. It is an evidence of great wisdom to be slow to anger: and it is a great honour kindly to pass over injuries, and return good for evil.

12. The frowns and wrath of a king are very terrible to his subjects, and make them apprehensive of ruin; but the tokens of his favour greatly refresh and invigorate their spirits.

13. An ignorant, headstrong, and impious, son, is a plague and grief to his parents; and a contentious wife is a gradual ruin to her family, so perpetually vexing her husband that he can scarcely live with her.

14. Persons may have houses and riches left them by parents; but a prudent wife is not obtained, even by diligent care, without the peculiar direction and blessing of the Lord.

15. Sloth and idleness sink the mind into a dull stupidity and unconcern, and thereby reduce men to extreme beggary and want.

16. He, who carefully keeps the commandments of God as the rule of his life, secures the welfare of his own soul: but he that lives at random, led only by his own brutish inclinations, shall be miserable in time and in eternity.

17. He, who compassionately relieves the necessities of the poor, really enriches himself; as what he gives is but lent to the Lord, and shall be repaid, with large interest and increase of blessings, upon him and his posterity.

18. Children ought to be faithfully corrected before they are fixed in evil habits and customs: nor ought their cryings or entreaties to make parents abate the necessary severity towards them.

19. Men given to passion and fury bring themselves into great mischiefs: and, if we extricate them out of one danger, they will quickly involve themselves in another.

20. To listen to instruction, and kindly receive reproofs, or even corrections, is the proper way to attain much solid and lasting wisdom and experience.

21. Many are the purposes and contrivances of men, and they often lay them with great care: but it is only the counsel of the Lord which can infallibly bring to pass whatsoever it pleases.

22. A desire to do good to others is a real kindness to them, though it be not in our power to effect it. And a poor man, who would fain do us good, is better than one who promises much and does little.

23. True godliness, and a religious care to please the Lord in all things, increase a spiritual life, and issue in life eternal. They afford the most satisfying comfort in God's favour, produce the most agreeable contentment with our lot, and are an excellent preservative both from sin and from suffering.

24. Sluggards are so much given to laziness and idle sauntering, that they can hardly be persuaded to take their meat, or do the most necessary and easy things.

25. Incorrigible sinners, and particularly scoffers at religion, and despisers of reproof, ought to be severely punished, as a warning to such as are inconsiderate: but such as are wise and prudent will need no more but a gentle reproof to make them learn their duty, and practise accordingly.

26. Children, who by their debaucheries waste their fathers' substance, and deal unkindly with their mother, disgrace their parents, and at last render themselves infamous and miserable.

27. Great care ought to be taken to avoid listening to false doctrine, sinful advice, or even idle and frothy language, as it tends to make us wander from the true doctrines of Christ, and practice of holiness.

28. An impious witness, whose conscience is so hardened that he can swear to any thing, laughs at all law and justice, and even at the threatened judgment of God upon perjured persons; and the mouth of the wicked utters the most false, sinful, and mischievous, speeches with greediness.

29. But terrible judgments shall certainly be inflicted upon those that scoff at conscience and religion; and indelible marks of God's displeasure shall be inflicted on those who slight good instructions.

CHAP. XX. Ver. 1. Immoderate drinking of wine or other intoxicating liquors exposes men to the jest and detestation of others; it makes themselves abusive and scurrilous, mocking even at sacred things, and renders them like fools, sots, or madmen, furious, tumultuous, and quarrelsome: while it seems to exhilarate the spirits, it deceitfully drowns both reason and conscience, and tends to the ruin of both soul and body.

2. The just wrath of a king is terrible; and they that offend him, by exasperating language or behaviour, expose themselves to temporal and eternal ruin.

3. It is honourable to avoid contention to the utmost, and to get out of it as quickly as possible, by confessing our own faults, and forgiving those of our neighbours: but foolish and wicked persons are always ready to begin or maintain quarrels.

4. Such as, through indolence and self-indulgence, neglect their business in its proper season, may expect beggary and misery; while they who are diligent enjoy abundant felicity.

5. Some men, through their reservedness of temper, and others through deep design, conceal their intentions: but persons of great sagacity will discover them, or even by their artful insinuations, make themselves to declare them.

6. Most men will boast how friendly, humane, charitable, and generous, they are: but it is hard to find one answerable in deeds to his trust, his relation, his promises or pretences.

7. Justified and gracious persons by their practice manifest the sincerity of their heart and profession; and their children are blessed of God and regarded by men on their account.

8. A king, who makes it his business to execute judgment and justice faithfully, effectually suppresses crimes and impieties by his strict inspection of affairs.

9. No man on earth is perfectly free from sin in heart or life, nor can he make himself so.

buy with larger weights or measures, and sell with lesser ones, and all other injustice, is extremely detestable to God. 11. Men's continued practice is the surest mark of their disposition, and by that the future conversation of young persons may be guessed at; and yet they, even children, often strangely conceal their vices.

12. All our natural faculties and senses, and the right use of them, are from God, and therefore ought to be employed for his glory. 13. Immoderate sleep, or other slothfulness, wastes our time, and draws on poverty and want; but watchful care, and diligent labours, are the means of obtaining every thing necessary.

14. Some, while they buy goods, will dishonestly and falsely cry them down, and yet afterwards boast of their good bargain and cheating the seller.

15. Wise and gracious speeches, proceeding from a wise and understanding heart, are more valuable than all the gold, pearls, or precious things on earth.

16. Never trust him without a proper pledge who rashly becomes surety for every body, strangers and harlots not excepted; for he will quickly be reduced to beggary.

17. Gains, honours, and pleasures, acquired by unrighteous courses, may at first be extremely agreeable to men; but they will at last produce anguish of conscience, pangs of repentance, or torments of despair.

18. Deliberation with ourselves, and consulting with others who are prudent, is the way to obtain success in our undertakings, especially in matters of importance and danger.

19. It is always necessary to suspect flatterers, and to turn a deaf ear to tale-bearers, who, by treacherously revealing the secrets which others have intrusted to them, labour to insinuate themselves into our confidence, and then betray us.

20. Slighters, revilers, abusers, and wishers of mischief, to parents, bring fearful and lasting ruin on themselves and posterity, however they may prosper for a time.

21. Many by unrighteous courses quickly become rich; but the foundation being laid in rapine, extortion, or fraud, it shall quickly waste away, or prove a curse to such as enjoy it.

22. Never revenge injuries received; but commit thy cause to God, who judges righteously; wait patiently in the use of lawful means for the fulfilment of his promises, and he will vindicate and deliver thee in his own time.

23. Injustice, even in the smallest things, is so extremely abominable to God, that it cannot be too much hated or avoided.

24. Men's thoughts, words, and actions, are all directed by God to his own ends: and none can certainly know before hand what will be the issue of them.

25. A sacrilegious converting of what pertains to God to our own private use, and studying how to be loosed from the obligations of solemn vows, terribly ensnare men's souls, and bring certain ruin upon them.

26. Pious and prudent magistrates exert themselves to discourage and terrify the wicked, and punish them with proper severity.

26 ^a A wise king scattereth the wicked, and bringeth the wheel over them.27 ^a The spirit of man is the ^a candle of the LORD, searching all the inward parts of the belly.28 ^a Mercy and truth preserve the king; and his throne is upholden by mercy.29 ^a The glory of young men is their strength; and ^a the beauty of old men is the grey head.30 The blueness of a wound ^a cleanseth away evil; ^a so do stripes the inward parts of the belly.

CHAP. XXI.

THE ^a king's heart is in the hand of the LORD, as the rivers of water: he turneth it whithersoever he will.2 ^a Every way of a man is right in his own eyes: ^a but the LORD pondereth the hearts.3 ^a To do justice and judgment is more acceptable to the LORD than sacrifice.4 ^a ^a An high look, and a proud heart, and ^a the ploughing of the wicked, is sin.5 ^a The thoughts of the diligent tend only to plenteousness; but of every one that is hasty only to want.6 ^a The getting of treasures by a lying tongue is a vanity tossed to and fro of them that seek death.7 ^a The robbery of the wicked shall ^a destroy them, because they refuse to do judgment.8 ^a The way of man is froward and strange: ^a but as for the pure, his work is right.9 ^a It is better to dwell in a corner of the house-top, than with ^a a brawling woman in ^a a wide house.10 ^a The soul of the wicked desireth^a Heb. saw them, or dwell with them.

soul and conscience, especially when renewed by the Spirit of God, act as his deputies; discovering, judging, accusing, or approving, whatever passes within us according as it is contrary or conformable to God's revealed will.

28. Bounty and clemency, joined with justice and faithfulness to their word, are principal means of securing the government of princes, and entailing their kingdom on their posterity.

29. Strength, vigour, and courage, render young men respected; but gravity, wisdom, and experience, are the peculiar ornaments of the aged.

30. Severe corrections are necessary to restrain or reclaim some stubborn and obstinate tempers, and to purge out those corrupt affections which are lodged in the heart.

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 1. The wills, inclinations, and purposes of kings and others are entirely under the direction and government of God; and he can turn them whithersoever he pleases, as easily as the gardener or husbandman can turn his canals of waters.

2. Men, through their self-love, often fancy their own purposes and works to be extremely right, while the Lord, who perfectly knows their hearts, observes them to be very defective or sinful.

3. Uprightness of heart, and holiness and virtue of life, are more pleasing to God than the most pompous devotions, or the most liberal benefactions or alms.

4. Not only the insolence, pride, and ambition, of wicked men, are criminal before God, but all their natural, civil, and moral, actions, with all their worldly greatness and prosperity, lead to sin; and all they do is sinful in its principle, manner, and end.

5. Prudent contrivances and laborious industry are the proper means of plenty and affluence: but hasty resolutions, precipitant measures, and unjust methods, involve men in trouble and loss.

6. The getting of wealth, by lying, flattery, calumny, or perjury, is a beguiling and unprofitable course, however much used by such as walk in ways leading to destruction; and the wealth thus obtained is as unsubstantial and transient as heaps of chaff or clouds of smoke before the wind.

7. The injuries which wicked men do to others in rendering their families poor or desolate, shall, in most ruinous punishments, be returned upon their own heads, because they are wilfully bent upon their unjust dealings.

8. The whole temper and course of a wicked man are contrary to the law and nature of God, and odious to him; but they, whose consciences are washed in Jesus' blood, and their hearts renewed by his grace, walk in good works, acceptable to God and profitable to men.

9. Better is it to live poorly and solitary in the open air, exposed to all the injuries of the weather, or to be thrust into some little corner, than have a spacious house and numerous family, governed by a contentious wife, whose perpetual scolding and brawling upon the smallest occasion is more intolerable than thunder, lightning, or blustering winds. 10. A wicked man's heart desires to be ever doing mischief, and to have others falling into it: nor will he spare good or bad, friend or foe, if, by reproof or otherwise, they stand in the way of his covetousness, ambition, or other lusts.

11. When obstinate scoffers at the laws of God and men are punished in providence, or by the magistrates, others, particularly such as they have seduced, will bethink themselves what they are doing: and wise men will improve instructions and admonitions to render themselves wiser and better.

12. While righteous magistrates search the houses of the wicked for ill-gotten goods, and in order that they may be duly punished, and deprived of power to do further mischief, godly men, in order to deter them from like courses, consider the judgment and ruin which God brings on the wicked for their sins.

13. They, who refuse to help the poor in distress, shall be reduced to misery themselves, and have none to pity or help them. 14. Presents, especially if secretly and prudently given, have a powerful influence to appease angry and wrathful men.

15. The execution of justice, and the practice of holiness and virtue, are a pleasure to the righteous: but are a terror and burden to the wicked, whom God and the magistrates shall concur to destroy.

16. He that will not live according to the directions of God's word, but follows the conduct of his own lusts and passions, shall, after all his extravagancies, be for ever fixed in hell.

17. Voluptuous persons destroy their own pleasures, by wasting their estates; and they, who are given to costly and delicious feeding, can never thrive.

18. Wicked men often fall into the very miseries which they had prepared for the godly; and, in times of common calamity, are often severely punished that the righteous may be delivered.

19. True wisdom enables men to procure what is necessary for their families, and to enjoy it with satisfaction: but foolish persons lavishly waste what they neither know how to get or how to live without.

20. True wisdom enables men to procure what is necessary for their families, and to enjoy it with satisfaction: but foolish persons lavishly waste what they neither know how to get or how to live without.

21. They, who make it their business to receive and improve Jesus Christ and his righteousness and grace in a life of holiness and virtue, shall find every new-covenant blessing in time and eternity.

22. Wise men, by their prudence, kindness, and perseverance, can effect the most difficult enterprises, and do more than others who have much more strength.

23. Restraint of the tongue, from impure, false, profane, rash, injurious, language, greatly preserves men from troubles, embarrassments, and miseries.

24. Pride, insolence, and outrageous words, only render men infamous and contemptible.

25. 26. The slothful man is killed by an insatiable desire after that which he has not and will not labour for: but pious and diligent persons have enough for themselves, and also wherewith to relieve others. 27. All the appearances of devotion and piety about unrenewed persons being hypocritical, proceeding from a wicked principle, done in a wicked manner, and to a wicked end, are abominable to God.

28. The testimony, character, and soul, of a false witness shall quickly be ruined: but he, that speaks nothing but what he knows to be true, is fixed and invariable in his attestations.

29. Impenitent sinners refuse to blush at their abominations, and obstinately resolve to go on in them; but sincere saints carefully conduct their thoughts, words and actions, by the rule of God's word.

30. No projects, however, wisely laid or prudently conducted, can defeat or alter the purposes, or counteract the providence, of God.

31. Neither horses, chariots, or powerful armies, can obtain victories, or even protect their owners: but all safety and salvation are of, and effected by, the Lord himself.

CHAP. XXI. Ver. I. A good character, qualifying men to be useful for God in their generation, and the noted respect and friendship of those among whom we live, are more honourable and comfortable than all the riches of the world.

2. The rich by their wealth, and the poor by their labour, are mutual supports of each other, and ought to live together in harmony and kindness, as the same Lord made them both, and appointed them their respective conditions.

3. Prudent men foresee calamities or temptations when approaching, and use proper means for securing themselves; but foolish and inconsiderate persons go on securely in their sins, and are ruined.

4. True humility and real godliness are the certain way to honour and happiness in this world and in that which is to come.

5. Wicked men meet with much trouble and danger in their sinful ways: but he that takes proper care of his soul shall be preserved therefrom, and enjoy manifold blessings.

6. Let children be carefully instructed in the truths, and accustomed to the ways, of God as early and earnestly as possible, and they will retain the impression, and practise the same, as long as they live.

7. Rich men domineer over the poor; and they who borrow are obliged to depend on the will and pleasure of the lender.

8. He, whose common practice is to do mischief, shall be paid in his own coin with misery and trouble; and at length his power of wronging others shall be taken from him.

9. They, who compassionately observe the wants of the poor, and cheerfully relieve them, shall be largely rewarded of God.

10. The removal of graceless persons, who scorn all good counsels, from a society, is an excellent mean to compose the con-

Heb. obscure men.

12 The eyes of the LORD preserve knowledge; and he overthroweth the words of the transgressor.

13 The slothful man saith, There is a lion without. I shall be slain in the streets.

14 The mouth of strange women is a deep pit: he that is abhorred of the LORD shall fall therein.

15 Foolishness is bound in the heart of a child, but the rod of correction shall drive it far from him.

16 He that oppresseth the poor to increase his riches, and he that giveth to the rich, shall surely come to want.

17 Bow down thine ear, and hear the words of the wise, and apply thine heart unto my knowledge.

18 For it is a pleasant thing if thou keep them within thee: they shall withal be fitted in thy lips.

19 That thy trust may be in the LORD, I have made known to thee this day, even to thee.

20 Have not I written to thee excellent things in counsel and knowledge, 21 That I might make thee know the certainty of the words of truth; that thou mightest answer the words of truth to them that send unto thee?

22 Rob not the poor, because he is poor; neither oppress the afflicted in the gate:

23 For the LORD will plead their cause, and spoil the soul of those that spoiled them.

24 Make no friendship with an angry man; and with a furious man thou shalt not go;

25 Lest thou learn his ways, and get a snare to thy soul.

26 Be not thou one of them that strike hands, or of them that are sureties for debts.

27 If thou hast nothing to pay, why should he take away thy bed from under thee?

28 Remove not the ancient landmark, which thy fathers have set.

29 Seest thou a man diligent in his business? he shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before mean men.

tentions therein, and to prevent strifes and mutual reproaches for the future. 11. He that loves and practises sincerity and plain-heartedness will recommend himself even to princes, by the piety, pleasantness, and candour of his discourse. 12. God, in his providence, carefully preserves his own oracles and ordinances among men, and provides for, preserves, and honours, those who are thereby made wise unto salvation: but he blasts all the counsels and designs of the wicked and perfidious. 13. Slothful persons imagine mighty hindrances in the way of their duty where there are none, or at least very few. 14. Nothing is so dangerous, so eternally dangerous, as the ensnaring flatteries of whorish women, and the enslaving influence of fleshly lust. If a man be ensnared by them, nothing but infinite mercy and power can prevent his utter and everlasting destruction. And seldom are any, who have not provoked the Lord by former wickedness, permitted to fall into these snares. 15. False opinions and bad inclinations adhere so closely to the minds of children, that not only instructions and reproofs, but even seasonable and duly severe chastisements, must remove their obstinate folly. 16. He that by violence or fraud oppresses the poor to enrich himself, or gives to the rich what he took from the poor, or what he should give to relieve their wants, shall himself be reduced to want and beggary. 17. Attend diligently, and consider seriously, the counsels and precepts of wise men, and particularly those given in this book. 18. For it will afford thee great satisfaction heartily to embrace, thoroughly to digest, and faithfully to preserve, them in thy mind: and by these means thou wilt be qualified to instruct others in them. 29. Men who are quick and dextrous, but prudent in dispatching whatever business is committed to them, are in a fair way to be preferred to some honourable employment in the service of their prince.

CHAP. XXIII.

WHEN thou sittest to eat with a ruler, consider diligently what is before thee:

2 And put a knife to thy throat if thou be a man given to appetite.

3 Be not desirous of his dainties; for they are deceitful meat.

4 Labour not to be rich: cease from thine own wisdom.

5 Wilt thou set thine eyes upon that which is not? for riches certainly make themselves wings; they fly away as an eagle toward heaven.

6 Eat thou not the bread of him that hath an evil eye, neither desire thou his dainty meats:

7 For as he thinketh in his heart, so is he: Eat and drink, saith he to thee; but his heart is not with thee.

8 The morsel which thou hast eaten shalt thou vomit up, and lose thy sweet words.

9 Speak not in the ears of a fool; for he will despise the wisdom of thy words.

10 Remove not the old landmark; and enter not into the fields of the fatherless:

11 For their Redeemer is mighty; he shall plead their cause with thee.

12 Apply thine heart unto instruction, and thine ears to the words of knowledge.

13 Withhold not correction from the child: for, if thou beatest him with the rod, he shall not die.

14 Thou shalt beat him with the rod, and shalt deliver his soul from hell.

15 My son, if thine heart be wise, my heart shall rejoice, even mine.

16 Yea, my reins shall rejoice when thy lips speak right things.

17 Let not thine heart envy sinners: but be thou in the fear of the LORD all the day long.

18 For surely there is an end; and thine expectation shall not be cut off.

19 Hear thou, my son, and be wise, and guide thine heart in the way.

20 Be not among wine-bibbers; among riotous eaters of flesh:

behaviour, considering what and how you eat, what and how you speak, and to whom. 2. And avoid, as you would avoid death, every approach to intemperance and folly in language, as well as excess in eating and drinking; and so much the more if thou art given to such weakness. 3. Never shew a fondness for delicate provision; for it often betrays men into excess, or into some indecent unwarrantable behaviour. 4. Never labour immoderately with heart or hand to obtain riches: and never depend on thy own prudent management, but on God himself, for the success of thy undertakings. 5. Never set thy mind or affections upon riches, nor pursue with eagerness what perhaps thou canst never attain; for, if thou dost, they may suddenly and irrecoverably be taken from thee, and become witnesses against thee before God, with respect to thy guilt in pursuing or abusing them. 6. Never receive an obligation from a sordid, covetous, and churlish, wretch; and never let the best cheer tempt thee to accept of his invitation to a feast: 7. For he is to be judged of by the disposition of his heart, not by his fair words. And, while he flatters and urges thee to eat, he has no real kindness for thee, nor in the least wishes thee to make use of his provision. 8. When thou seest his sordid carriage, it will make thee repent thy tasting of his dainty meats, or paying any regard to his kind but deceitful compliments. 9. The wisest counsels and reproofs, addressed to fools and scorners, will be but contemned and trampled under their feet. 10, 11. Never encroach upon the property of the fatherless, or others who have no help in man; for the Almighty God will take their part, redress their grievances, and revenge the injuries done to them. 12—16. If parents carefully instruct and correct, and children seriously regard and receive their instruction, and submit to their correction, it will greatly promote the happiness and comfort of both. 17, 18. Never envy the prosperity of sinners; but study to live in favour and in humble fellowship with God. Thus shall thy troubles quickly have an end, and the expected blessings of eternity be enjoyed by thee, while the prosperity of sinners shall be turned into everlasting misery. 19—21. Carefully study true wisdom, and let thine heart be exercised in faith and holiness. Avoid all 23 ^aBuy the truth, and sell it not; also wisdom, and instruction, and understanding.

24 ^bThe father of the righteous shall greatly rejoice: and he that begetteth a wise child shall have joy of him.

25 Thy father and thy mother shall be glad, and she that bare thee shall rejoice.

26 My son, give me thine heart, and let thine eyes observe my ways.

27 ^aFor a whore is a deep ditch; and a strange woman is a narrow pit.

28 ^aShe also lieth in wait † as for a prey, and increaseth the transgressors among men.

29 ^aWho hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babbling? who hath wounds without cause? who hath redness of eyes?

30 They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek mixed wine.

31 ^bLook not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his colour in the cup, when it moveth itself aright.

32 ^aAt the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like † an adder.

33 ^kThine eyes shall behold strange women, and thine heart shall utter perverse things.

34 Yea, thou shalt be as he that lieth down in the midst of the sea, or as he that lieth upon the top of a mast.

35 They have stricken me, shalt thou say, and I was not sick; they have beaten me, and ^mI felt it not: when shall I awake? ⁿI will seek it yet again.

CHAP. XXIV.

BE not thou ^aenvious against evil men, neither desire to be with them:

2 ^bFor their heart studieth destruction, and their lips talk of mischief.

3 ^cThrough wisdom is an house builded, and by understanding it is established:

4 And by knowledge shall the chambers be filled with all precious and pleasant riches.

5 ^dA wise man ^eis strong; yea, a man of knowledge † increaseth strength.

6 ^eFor by wise counsel thou shalt make thy war: and in multitude of counsels there is safety.

7 ^fWisdom is too high for a fool: he openeth not his mouth in the gate.

8 ^gHe that deviseth to do evil shall be called a mischievous person.

9 ^hThe thought of foolishness is sin: and the scorner is an abomination to men.

10 ⁱIf thou faint in the day of adversity, thy strength is † small.

11 ^kIf thou forbear to deliver them that are drawn unto death, and those that are ready to be slain;

12 If thou sayest, Behold, we knew it not; doth not he that † pondereth the heart consider it? and he ^mthat keepeth thy soul, doth not he know it? and shall not he render to every man ⁿaccording to his works?

13 My son, eat thou honey, because it is good; and the honeycomb, which is sweet † to thy taste:

14 ^pSo shall the knowledge of wisdom be unto thy soul: when thou hast found it, ^qthen there shall be a reward, and thy expectation shall not be cut off.

15 ^rLay not wait, O wicked man, against the dwelling of the righteous; spoil not his resting place:

16 ^sFor a just man falleth seven times, and riseth up again: but the wicked shall fall into mischief.

17 ^tRejoice not when thine enemy falleth, and let not thine heart be glad when he stumbleth:

18 Lest the LORD see it, and ^uit displease him, and he turn away his wrath from him.

19 ^{}Fret not thyself because of evil men, neither be thou envious at the wicked:

20 ^vFor there shall be no reward to the evil man; ^wthe † candle of the wicked shall be put out.

intimacy with intemperate persons; for they and their slothful brethren will quickly reduce themselves to outward, and even eternal misery. 22—25. Pay the utmost regard to the instructions, reproofs, and good example, of parents: spare no pains or cost to know, embrace, and hold fast, the truths of God; to find out and walk in the true way of salvation, and to grow in the knowledge of Christ, and never part with it upon any account. Thus shalt thou be a remarkable blessing and comfort to thy parents. 26—28. Receive my counsels with thy whole heart, that it may be filled with, and fixed on, a God in Christ; and carefully observe and follow my directions and example. Thus shalt thou be delivered from whorish women, by whose enticements multitudes are seduced into manifold wickedness and irrecoverable ruin. 29—35. Carefully avoid all drunkenness, and every occasion of or temptation to it; as it occasions bloody quarrels, inflames fleshly lusts, and animates to whoredom: it fills the mouth with obscene, rude, profane, or senseless, discourse: it renders the head stupid and giddy: it hardens men in wickedness; and, in fine, issues in misery, both here and hereafter.

CHAP. XXIV. Ver. 1. Never envy the prosperity of wicked men, nor desire any intimacy or connection with them. 2. For they contrive and labour to ruin others that themselves may become rich and great; and, by lies, calumnies, and the like, they labour to undo them; but such conduct will at last bring destruction upon their own head. 3—6. True godliness, attended with prudence and diligence, is the proper method to procure estates, raise families, get wealth, strength, or victory. 7. Solid knowledge, and serious and sensible discourse, are above the reach of foolish, inconsiderate, persons; nor can they judge or advise to any purpose in public concerns. 8. The more art and contrivance there is in doing evil, the more malignity is there in it; and the doer ought to be held as ignominious and detestable. 9. The inclination to, and contrivance of, evil is sin: but he that makes a sport of sin, and contemns reproofs for it, ought to be abhorred by every person. 10. To give up all for lost, and be discouraged from duty, in the time of distress, is a great evidence of weakness in knowledge, wisdom, courage, and grace. 11, 12. If pretending that thou didst not know their case, or how to relieve them, thou neglectest to exert thyself for the deliverance of persons, who, by hatred, envy, or false accusations, are in danger of losing their life, remember that God, who knows all the secrets of thy heart, who preserves thy soul in life, and observes all the motions of it, will severely punish thee, and give thee up to similar distress. 13, 14. As the most delightful satisfaction and nourishment are found in eating of honey, especially that pure part of it which drops from the comb, so shall solid and spiritual wisdom, and knowledge be pleasant and profitable to thy soul, issuing in abundant, present; and eternal, happiness, answerable to, and even far exceeding, thy most enlarged expectations. 15, 16. To attempt by craft or violence to ruin the righteous, even under their affliction, is as vain as it is malicious: for, though they may frequently fall into sin or trouble for a time, the Lord again raises them up; but wicked men are finally left in their sins, and plunged into irretrievable ruin. 17, 18. Never rejoice, no not in heart, when any private enemy of thine falls into sin or trouble, lest the Lord be thereby provoked to deliver him, and plunge thee into the miserable condition from which he is recovered. 19, 20. Never envy the prosperity of wicked men, nor be enticed to follow their impieties on account of it; for, whatever may be their appearance, they can have no real happiness here, nor any thing but eternal misery hereafter: and often their blaze of outward prosperity is quickly extinguished, and either they or their seed reduced to wretchedness even in this life. 21, 22. Always reverence, worship, and obey God denly; and who knoweth the ruin of them both?

23 ^cThese things also belong to the wise. ^dIt is not good to have respect of persons in judgment.

24 ^eHe that saith unto the wicked, Thou art righteous; him shall the people curse; nations shall abhor him:

25 ^fBut to them that rebuke him shall be delight, and || a good blessing shall come upon them.

26 ^gEvery man shall kiss his lips *that giveth a right answer.

27 ^hPrepare thy work without, and make it fit for thyself in the field; and afterwards build thine house.

28 ⁱBe not a witness against thy neighbour without cause; and deceive not with thy lips.

29 ^kSay not, I will do so to him as he hath done to me: I will render to the man according to his work.

30 ^lI went by the field of the slothful, and by the vineyard of the man void of understanding;

31 ^mAnd, lo, it was all grown over with thorns, and nettles had covered the face thereof, and the stone wall thereof was broken down.

32 Then I saw, and †considered it well: I looked upon it, ⁿand received instruction.

33 ^oYet a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep:

34 ^pSo shall thy poverty come as one that travelleth; and thy want as ‡an armed man.

CHAP. XXV.

THESE are also ^aproverbs of Solomon, which the men of ^bHezekiah king of Judah copied out.

2 ^cIt is the glory of God to conceal a thing: ^dbut the honour of kings is to search out a matter.

3 ^eThe heaven for height, and the earth for depth, and the heart of kings ^fis unsearchable.

4 ^gTake away the dross from the silver, and there shall come forth a vessel for the finer.

as thy own God in Christ: and be humbly obedient to magistrates, as his deputies on earth. Never have any thing to do with those who appear fond of novelties, either in religion or in civil government; for unexpected and inconceivably dreadful calamities shall unavoidably and violently seize upon such, and upon their associates. 23. If thou wouldest be and appear wise, abhor it, as a thing extremely sinful and ruinous, to regard persons in judgment, on account of any thing else but the merits of their cause. 24. Whoever, contrary to evidence, pronounces a wicked man innocent, or a bad cause to be good, exposes himself to the curses and detestation of men, and the fearful vengeance of God. 25. But they who labour earnestly to check vice, by the just punishment of evil-doers shall have satisfaction in their own mind, and shall be remarkably blessed of God, and prayed for and commended by men. 26. Every person will highly honour and dearly love him who speaks the plain, naked, edifying, and seasonable, truth, whether as a judge, a witness, or private person. 27. Never undertake or begin any weighty affair without deliberate thought and sufficient preparation. 28. Never rashly or groundlessly affirm or insinuate any thing to the hurt of thy neighbour's character: and never entice any one to believe or say ill of him. 29. Never, either in heart, word, or deed, revenge the injuries done to thee. 30—34. And, from the misery and want which others have brought upon themselves, by their negligence, sloth, or mis-spending of time, learn earnestly to avoid these things, as ruinous to thy outward estate as well as to the spiritual and eternal happiness of thy soul.

CHAP. XXV. Ver. 2. It is the glory of God that his counsels are unfathomable, and his works, even of creation and providence, so mysterious, that the wisest on earth cannot comprehend their nature, reason, or ends: but it is the honour of kings diligently to search the scriptures, thoroughly to examine intricate causes, and dive into plots and conspiracies, or fully to display the reasons of their actions. 3. But vulgar minds can no more judge of the secret reasons of statesmen than they can perfectly search and measure the heavens and earth. 4, 5. As silver, when purified from its dross, may be framed into whatever vessels the founder pleases, so kingdoms may be established in the most virtuous and happy forms when wicked persons are removed from the counsels and com-

5 ^hTake away the wicked from before the king, and his throne shall be established in righteousness.

6 ⁱPut not forth thyself in the presence of the king, and stand not in the place of great men:

7 ^kFor better it is that it be said unto thee, Come up hither, than that thou shouldest be put lower in the presence of the prince whom thine eyes have seen.

8 ^lGo not forth hastily to strive, lest thou know not what to do in the end thereof, when thy neighbour hath put thee to shame.

9 ^mDebate thy cause with thy neighbour himself; and †discover not a secret to another;

10 Lest he that heareth it put thee to shame, and ⁿthine infamy turn not away.

11 ^oA word ‡fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver.

12 ^pAs an earring of gold, and an ornament of fine gold, so is a wise reprover upon an obedient ear.

13 ^qAs the cold of snow in the time of harvest, so is a faithful messenger to them that send him; for he refresheth the soul of his masters.

14 ^rWhoso boasteth himself || of a false gift is like clouds and wind without rain.

15 ^sBy long forbearing is a prince persuaded, and a soft tongue breaketh the bone.

16 ^tHast thou found honey? ^ueat so much as is sufficient for thee, lest thou be filled therewith, and vomit it.

17 ^vWithdraw thy foot from thy neighbour's house, lest he be †weary of thee, and so hate thee.

18 ^wA man that beareth false witness against his neighbour is a maul, and a sword, and a sharp arrow.

19 ^xConfidence in an unfaithful man, in time of trouble, is like a broken tooth, and a foot out of joint.

20 ^yAs he that taketh away a garment in cold weather, and as vinegar upon nitre, ^zso is he that singeth songs to an heavy heart.

pany of kings. 6, 7. Never ambitiously affect, or thrust thyself into, courts, or any places or stations that belong not to thee; for it will be more honourable and satisfying to be invited to them, than to be disgracefully thrust from the honours which thou hast arrogated to thyself, and that in the presence of the prince unto whom thou hast approached too near. 8—10. Never enter into any contention till thou hast well considered the goodness and weight of thy cause, and how to manage it, lest, in the issue, thou be plunged into perplexity and covered with shame. And, if it be possible, make up matters, privately, even where thy cause is good. And never let anger or hatred provoke thee to discover thy neighbour's secrets in order to disgrace him, lest such as hear of it not only reproach thee for thy perfidiousness, but even retort upon thee such shameful conduct, which will render thee infamous through life. 11, 12. A wise instruction, advice, reproof, or word of comfort, seasonably and properly given, is comely, valuable, and ornamental: and scarcely can any thing be more ornamental in life than a ready and humble hearkening and submitting to wise and seasonable reproof. 13. Cold drink or air in harvest is not more grateful and refreshing to the reapers than good servants or ambassadors are to their masters, by their speedy dispatch of the important business committed to them, and faithful report of their success. 14. It is extremely empty and deceiving to boast of graces, virtues, or abilities, which we have not, or to promise what we cannot or care not to perform. 15. By patient submission and expectation princes are most readily pacified and persuaded: and humble, soft, and affectionate, language bows the most stiff and hardened tempers, and overcomes even stubborn resolutions to the contrary. 16. Created comforts and pleasures are very agreeable if used in due moderation; but otherwise they lose their relish, and plunge us into guilt and trouble. 17. To maintain a friendly intercourse with our neighbours is dutiful and pleasant; but too many, too long or unseasonable, visits render us disagreeable and disliked. 18. Slander and a bearing false-witness are most dangerous and murderous means of destroying our neighbour. 19. Confidence in an unfaithful person in the time of trouble will, to our great anguish and grief, entirely disappoint us of help or relief. 20. As taking away clothes in winter increases our sense of cold, and vinegar irritates nitre, so unseasonable mirth renders a sad heart still more sorrowful.

21, 22. In time of need always render good for evil; and kindly bestow necessary supplies on such as have injured thee: thus shalt thou soften their rage, slay their hatred, and gain their affections; and the Lord shall reward thee with blessings, while he fearfully punishes them if they continue obstinate. 23. As the north wind in many countries dispels clouds and prevents rain, so frowns and rebukes check reproachful slandering and lying. 24. It is better to live cooped up in a corner, exposed to all the injuries of the weather, than in a large family and stately palace with a contentious, brawling, and scolding, wife. 25. Good and certain news from a far country, where our friends and fortunes are, is expected with impatience, heard with delight, and believed and thought on with refreshing pleasure; but especially the gospel, which brings from God the blessed tidings of pardon, peace, grace, and salvation. 26. When righteous men are decoyed into scandalous sins, or are degraded from their influence and authority, and oppressed and persecuted, it is as hurtful to a church or nation as if the public fountains were corrupted and poisoned. 27. To hunt after worldly applause and honours, however sweet they be to corrupt nature, is extremely disgraceful and dangerous. 28. And to be furious and passionate renders us useless and miserable.

CHAP. XXVI. Ver. 1. Dignity and authority are very ill placed in the hands of foolish and wicked men, who know not how to use them, but will do mischief to themselves and others by them. 2. Causeless curses and imprecations can hurt the innocent no more than the birds that fly over their heads. 3. Obstinate, stupid, and refractory, sinners, like beasts, must, by sharp punishments, be restrained from evil, and excited to good. 4. Answer not an ignorant impertinent fool in his own brawling and reproachful manner, so as to imitate his impertinence. 5. Answer a proud conceited fool with such strength and evidence of reason as may render him sensible of his folly, and check his pride. 6. He, who employs fools or rakes in any important business, deprives himself of the advantage he might have expected, and brings much inconvenience and mischief upon himself. 7. As dancing or walking by a lame man would but manifest his lameness, so the pretences of fools to wisdom do but render them the more ridiculous. 8. Honour bestowed upon fools is very unstable and useless, if not mischievous. 9. Grave, holy, and wise, sayings, upbraid fools for their impertinence and wickedness, however insensible they may be of the sharpest rebukes. 10. God, and even wise princes, punish sins of ignorance and wilful wickedness in a wise, just, and suitable, manner. 11. Foolish sinners quickly, and often shamelessly, return to the very sins for which they have been sharply punished, and of which they have before repented, as grievous and hurtful. 12. There is more hope of the amendment of a sottish man than of one who is so wise and virtuous in his own conceit, that he thinks himself above instruction. 13. They who have no mind to labour, never want pretences for their idleness: and their sluggish fancy represents to them the most improbable and insuperable difficulties. 14. It is almost a toil for such to turn themselves on their bed; and, though they seem busy, they do nothing to the purpose. Though they move in the formal round of external duties, they are never a whit nearer to heaven. 15. Pretending cold, or inability, they can scarcely apply to any work; and it is almost a burden for them to take their meat. 16. But, though they take no pains to acquire knowledge, they look upon themselves as perfect miracles in wisdom, and treat with absolute contempt every argument that can be used to convince them of their mistakes and danger. 17. It is extremely dangerous to engage in other men's quarrels and disputes, which do not belong to us. 18, 19. To wrong our neighbours, by either word or deed, and then pretend that it was in jest, discovers us to be stupidly insolent and diabolically mad. 20. A proper discouragement of tale-bearers, whisperers, and slanderers, is an effectual mean to prevent contentions, or even to extinguish such as are begun. 21. It is also necessary to avoid contentious persons, who by their provoking language kindle up or inflame quarrels, even as one inflamed coal or piece of wood kindles another. 22. The wounds given to men's characters, business, and spirits, by calumnies slyly and secretly spread, are extremely painful and hurtful, and sometimes will scarcely admit of a cure. 23. Malicious and angry language corresponds very well with an envious and wicked heart; and notwithstanding their fine shew, scarcely any thing is more detestable than affectionate words when used to cover hatred and enmity of heart; nor will the dissimulation pass long undetected. 24—26. Nothing is more common in the world than dissembled professions of regard and affection; and yet nothing more base, and in the end more hurtful and ignominious to the user. 27. They who labour to destroy their neighbours, whether by fraud or violence, involve themselves in the very mischiefs which they had intended for others. 28. Liars and slanderers chiefly hate those whom they have slandered, fearing that they may avenge themselves; and also those who confute their slanders. And flatterers ruin men, by drawing them into proud, rash, and pernicious, courses.

20, 27.CHAP. XXVII. Ver. 1. Never boast what thou wilt be or do in any future period; for thou knowest not what changes Providence may make in a very short time.2. Never commend thy own excellencies or works; but leave that to others, who cannot be suspected of partiality. 3, 4. The anger, cruelty, and rage of foolish men, are very intolerable, crushing, and hard to be appeased:
but an envious desire of revenge is still more dangerous, as it lies hid, increases daily, and is more and more exasperated, till it find opportunity to vent itself in the intended mischief.5. To tell men plainly of their faults, and rebuke them freely, when need requires, is a more valuable piece of friendship than the strongest inward affection.6. Just and seasonable reproofs, however severe, ought to be cheerfully received when they proceed from true love and faithful regard: but the most tender and abundant expressions of kindness from an enemy ought to be suspected as false and treacherous.7. Rich men are apt to be unsatisfied with, or even to nauseate, the most delicious enjoyments: but poverty disposes men to a ready and thankful reception of the smallest blessings, though mixed with care and labour.8. When men, by levity or discontent, change their country, trade, or office, in which providence had placed them, they ordinarily expose themselves to manifold dangers and inconveniences, but rarely mend their condition.9. The kind conversation and prudent counsels of affectionate friends are extremely refreshing and comfortable. 10. Nay, such friends are more to be depended on in a time of distress than our nearest relations.11. My son, improve these instructions, to make thee truly wise and good; which will at once comfort my heart, and enable me to refute such as charge me with want of due care about my children.12. Prudent men foresee the approach of calamities, and take proper methods to avoid them; but inconsiderate persons, deceived by others, securely rush forward till they are ruined.13. Never trust, without a sufficient pledge, a man that is so foolish and rash as to be surety for persons whom he knows not, and even for harlots.14. Extravagant and flattering commendations of a friend or benefactor are rather a disparagement than an honour, as it is a shame to have connections with such silly sycophants.15. A contentious and brawling woman is a continual plague, and a destructive ruin to her husband, family, and estate. 16. For it is quite impossible to conceal her infamous bawling humour, or to make her hold her tongue.

17. By mutual conversation friends quicken the wit, enliven the affection, strengthen the judgment, and animate the activity, of one another. 18. Such servants as faithfully defend their master's person and reputation, and labour to preserve and promote his wealth, ought to be rewarded by him, and shall be honoured of God and men.19. There is a surprising likeness in the tempers and dispositions of men, both among saints and sinners:

and most are inclined to carry themselves towards others as they do towards them. And they who are remarkably sagacious can penetrate far into the inclinations and designs of others. 20. It is impossible to satisfy the corrupt desires of men: the more they are indulged, the more they crave: and nothing but the fulness of God can satisfy the desires of an immortal soul.21. Nothing more effectually tries a man than high commendations. If he be light, vain, frothy, and easily puffed up by them, it discovers his emptiness: but if under them he be humble, modest, and sensible of his own defects, it manifests him truly valuable.22. Some are so hardened and stupified in their sinful courses, that no reproofs or corrections can make them a whit better.23-27. Masters should look after the management of their worldly affairs themselves, and not leave all to servants: for, without due care and diligence, the richest estates will soon come to nought: whereas, by a proper care of the hay, grass, herbs, and flocks, which providence bestows, they may enjoy a most comfortable livelihood for themselves and families.CHAP. XXVIII. Ver. 1. Guilt makes men cowards; but conscious integrity makes men courageous, and to proceed with undaunted resolution in the most hazardous undertakings. 2. To punish the wickedness of nations, God permits them to fall into factions, or murder their sovereigns: but a prince of remarkable piety and prudence is extremely useful for settling or preserving a state.3. A needy man placed in power, and squeezing from the poor that little which they have, is a most ruinous scourge to a nation. 4. Apostates from the ways of God are the most forward in encouraging men in wickedness and commending them for it: but they who resolutely observe God's law do what they can to reform or punish them.5. Unregenerate men have no solid or experimental knowledge of what is right or wrong: but they who study God's word, and depend on his instructions, understand whatever is necessary to salvation.

6. A poor man, who acts honestly and uprightly in all he does, is far happier, and more useful and commendable, than a rich pretender to virtue, who obstinately and craftily practises vice. 7. He is an honour to his parents, as well as to himself, who studies the law of God, and observes the rules of piety and sobriety there prescribed: but he that associates himself with rakes, drunkards, and gluttons, and spends his time and money in sensual pleasures, is a shame and vexation to them. 8. God often translates the wealth gotten by covetousness and oppression from the gatherers into the hands of such as are merciful and benevolent. 9. The very prayers, and other religious services, of them who obstinately live in their sins are, in God's view, an abominable and hypocritical prostitution of his ordinances, since it appears, as if they thus intended to make him a partner in their wickedness. 10. They, who by their persuasion, example, or cunning contrivances, seduce upright men into sinful and dangerous practices, shall themselves irrecoverably fall into that very mischief which they intended for others: but they who live in simplicity and godly sincerity shall enjoy the blessings of grace here, and of glory hereafter. 11. Rich men, being courted and complimented by every one, are apt to imagine themselves extremely wise: but sensible and religious persons, however poor, quickly discern their emptiness and ignorance. 12. It is an honour and happiness for a nation when pious and prudent men are advanced to places of power and trust: but, when the wicked are exalted; the persons, lives, and estates, especially of good men, are in danger, and they are obliged to conceal them. 13. He that conceals, extenuates, or defends, his sins, exposes himself to severe punishments: but he, who through faith in Christ, confesses and forsakes them, shall be graciously blessed by God, and honoured by men. 14. Happy is he who lives under the constant awe of God's perfections, and under a jealousy of his own evil heart and a fear to do evil: but he that obstinately and presumptuously goes on in his sinful courses shall irrecoverably and eternally perish. 15. How cruel and terrible a plague is a tyrannical ruler! His subjects, unable to resist, are harassed by oppression, and terrified with fears of still greater evils. 17. Murderers shall never be able to escape the vengeance of God: but shall hurry themselves into sudden and irretrievable destruction, without any one to help or pity them. 18. Real godliness, strict honesty and integrity, are the sure road to safety, honour, and happiness: but fraudulent sinners, obstinate in their wickedness, shall quickly involve themselves in the depths of misery. 19, 20. in their dealings, shall have abundant blessings from God and honours from men: but they who hasten to be rich render themselves execrable by their base and fraudulent methods. 21. When judges have accustomed themselves to respect persons in judgment, the most insignificant bribe will make them to disregard both law and equity, and favour an unrighteous cause. 22. He that hastens to be rich envies every body who has more than himself, covets whatever he sees, and grudges to part with the most necessary expense or alms; and never seriously thinks how quickly God may take him from his wealth, or, by his curse, blast it to him, and leave him in deep poverty, or remove it to others. 23. They, who, in an honest and friendly manner, reprove a man for his faults, will afterwards have much more of his favour and regard than they who flatter him in his sins. 24. They who snatch all that they can from their parents are as bad as common robbers, and are in a fair way to associate themselves with such. 25. A man of a proud, insolent, and ambitious, spirit, involves himself in perpetual quarrels, and has no satisfaction in what he enjoys; nay, many times wastes his estate in contentions: but he, who, trusting in the Lord to redress his grievances, patiently bears injuries, lives comfortably and happy. 26. Nothing is more foolish than to rely wholly on our own wisdom and ability, or to trust in our own heart, which is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked: but he, who walks according to the counsels of wise men and the directions of God, shall escape, or be delivered out of, manifold dangers and troubles. 27. He, who kindly and cheerfully relieves such as are in want, shall thereby increase his own estate; but he that avoids taking notice of their miseries draws upon himself the curse of God and of men. 28. When wicked men are increased in number, and advanced in authority, good men are obliged to hide themselves from their tyranny and persecution: but, when God casts down the wicked, the righteous take courage, and openly show themselves; and their numbers are increased under pious and prudent governors.

to a snare: But wise men turn away wrath.

9 ^mIf a wise man contendeth with a foolish man, whether he rage or laugh, there is no rest.10 ⁿ*The blood-thirsty hate the upright: but the just seek his soul.11 ^aA fool uttereth all his mind: but a wise man keepeth it in till afterwards.12 ^pIf a ruler hearken to lies, all his servants are wicked.13 ^qThe poor and the deceitful man meet together: the LORD lighteneth both their eyes.14 ^rThe king that faithfully judgeth the poor, his throne shall be established for ever.15 ^sThe rod and reproof give wisdom: but a child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame.16 ^tWhen the wicked are multiplied transgression increaseth: but the righteous shall see their fall.17 ^uCorrect thy son, and he shall give thee rest; yea, he shall give delight unto thy soul.18 ^vWhere there is no vision, the people perish: but he that keepeth the law, happy is he.19 ^wA servant will not be corrected by words: for, though he understand, he will not answer.20 ^xSeest thou a man that is hasty in his words? there is more hope of a fool than of him.

21 He that delicately bringeth up his servant from a child shall have him become his son at the length.

22 ^yAn angry man stirreth up strife, and a furious man aboundeth in transgression.23 ^zA man's pride shall bring him low: but honour shall uphold the humble in spirit.24 ^aWhoso is partner with a thief hateth his own soul: he heareth cursing, and bewrayeth it not.25 ^bThe fear of man bringeth a snare: but whoso putteth his trust in the LORD shall be safe.26 ^cMany seek the ruler's favour; but every man's judgment cometh from the LORD.27 ^dAn unjust man is an abomination to the just: and he that is upright in the way is abomination to the wicked.

ruinous disorder: but pious and prudent rulers, by their prayers and piety, avert the deserved vengeance of God, and, by their wise conduct, divert the fury of men.

9. It is to no purpose to spend reasonings or reproofs upon incorrigible fools; for, in whatever manner they appear to take them, they will still persist in their folly and wickedness.

10. Blood-thirsty men direct their murderous malice especially against godly magistrates, or other valuable persons: but such as are truly virtuous labour to defend and promote the welfare of such.

11. Fools inconsiderately speak out whatever comes into their head; but wise men think well before they speak, and only utter what they know, and as the opportunity requires.

12. If a ruler hearken to lies, flatteries, or false accusations, his whole court will quickly become so wicked, that it will be hard to find an honest man in office.

13. Poor men who want estates, and rich men who get or increase their estates by fraud, are connected together in this world and the Lord, without distinction, allows to both his light of nature, or revelation, and blessings of providence, as is good in his sight.

14. Kings, who faithfully administer justice to their subjects, and set themselves to protect and help the poor, take the most proper course to gain their subjects' affection, and to continue their kingdom to many generations.

15. Careful instructions and reproofs, and prudent corrections, are of great use to render children wise, prudent, and pious: but children left to follow their own inclinations, prove a disgrace and plague to parents, particularly to their indulgent mothers.

16. When wicked men are increased in number, and advanced in dignity, presumptuous wickedness abounds more and more: but the righteous ought not to be discouraged, as they shall quickly see their downfall.

CHAP. XXX.

Before Christ
cir. 975.

The two following chapters are an appendix to Solomon's Proverbs. Whatever the speakers were, their speeches being expressly called PROPHECIES, prove them to be inspired of God. Here is (1) Agur's confession of faith, concerning his own ignorance, and the nature, persons, work, and word, of God. But whether ITHIAL and UCAL be names of his friends to whom he spake, or of Jesus Christ, is uncertain; 1—6. (2) His prayer for sufficient grace and a moderate share of worldly enjoyments, as wealth and poverty have both their respective temptations attending them; 7—9. (3) His necessary cautions against rash accusing of servants; 10: or giving way to passion and hasty resentments; 32, 33. (4) His representation of four sorts of men as wicked, viz. abusers of parents, self-conceited hypocrites, haughty scorers, and cruel oppressors; 17, 11—14. Four things insatiable; the grave, hell or state of the dead, the barren womb, the earth, and fire; 15, 16. Four things mysterious; the way of eagles, ships, serpents, and enticers to uncleanness; 18—20. Four things very troublesome; servants turned rulers, fools grown rich and fat, cross-tempered wives, and handmaids become heirs to their mistress; 21—23. Four things small but wise; ants, conies, locusts, spiders; 24—28. Four things comely in motion; lions, greyhounds or horses, he-goats, and powerful kings; 29—31.

THE words of Agur the son of Jakeh, even the prophecy: the man spake unto Ithiel, even unto Ithiel and Ucal,

2 ^bSurely I am more brutish than any man, and have not the understanding of a man.

3 ^cI neither learned wisdom, nor have the knowledge of the holy.

4 ^dWho hath ascended up into heaven, or descended? who hath gathered the wind in his fists? who hath bound the waters in a garment? who hath established all the ends of the earth? what is his name, and what is his son's name, if thou canst tell?

5 ^eEvery word of God is pure: he is a shield unto them that put their trust in him.

6 ^fAdd thou not unto his words, lest he reprove thee, and thou be found a liar.

7 ^gTwo things have I required of thee; deny me them not before I die:

8 ^hRemove far from me vanity and lies: give me neither poverty nor riches: feed me with food convenient for me;

9 ⁱLest I be full, and deny thee, and say, Who is the LORD? or lest I be poor, and steal, and take the name of my God in vain.

10 ^j*Accuse not a servant unto his master, lest he curse thee, and thou be found guilty.

11 ^kThere is a generation that curseth their father, and doth not bless their mother.

12 ^lThere is a generation that are pure in their own eyes, and yet is not washed from their filthiness.

brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, bid fair to be an help and comfort to their parents. 18. Where men want the oracles of God, and ordinances of the gospel, they cannot but live wickedly on earth, and be miserable in eternity: but great is the present and future happiness of such as, renewed by his grace, strictly observe his laws. 19. No persuasions, reproofs, or threatenings, will avail with some refractory and slavish-minded servants; nothing but blows will make them regard what is said, or attend to their duty. 20. It is more easy to instruct and reform the most weak and ignorant, than to rectify what is amiss in a rash, heady, and self-conceited, manager of his affairs. 21. If servants, who continue long in a family, be too much indulged or favoured, they are apt to behave with as much boldness and freedom as if they were children: or even to domineer over them, and labour to disinherit them. 22. Passionate persons are apt to quarrel and contend about trifles, and to fall into a multitude of sins, in word and deed, both against God and men. 23. Proud, saucy, and ambitious, behaviour, renders men contemned, hated, and miserable: but meekness and humility procure useful and lasting honours. 24. Partnership with thieves or fraudulent persons endangers both soul and body, and is apt to involve men in perjury. 25. An immoderate fear of men ensnares us into much guilt and mischief: but he that puts his whole confidence in God shall be preserved from them. 26. Multitudes court the favour of princes and other great men; but it is God alone who determines the lots of men here and hereafter. 27. There is a stated antipathy between the righteous and wicked; their natures, tempers, counsels, and ends, being the very reverse of each other.

13 There is a generation, O how ^alofty are their eyes! and their eyelids are lifted up.

14 There is a generation, whose teeth are as swords, and their jaw-teeth as knives, to devour the poor from off the earth, and the needy from among men.

15 ¶ The horse leech hath two daughters, crying, Give, give. There are three things that are never satisfied, yea, four things say not, † It is enough :

16 ^aThe grave; and the barren womb; the earth that is not filled with water; and the fire that saith not, It is enough.

17 ¶ ^aThe eye that mocketh at his father, and despiseth to obey his mother, the ravens of † the valley shall pick it out, and the young eagles shall eat it.

18 ¶ There be three things which are too wonderful for me, yea, four, which I know not :

19 ^aThe way of an eagle in the air; the way of a serpent upon a rock; ^athe way of a ship in the || midst of the sea; and ^athe way of a man with a maid.

20 ^bSuch is the way of an adulterous woman; she eateth, and wipeth her mouth, and saith, I have done no wickedness.

21 For three things the earth is disquieted, and for four which it cannot bear :

22 ^cFor a servant when he reigneth; and a fool when he is filled with meat;

23 ^dFor an odious woman when she is married; and an handmaid ^ethat is heir to her mistress.

24 ¶ There be four things which are ^flittle upon the earth, but they are ^gexceeding wise :

25 ^hThe ants are a people not strong, yet they prepare their meat in the summer;

26 ⁱThe conies are but a feeble folk, yet make they their houses in the rocks;

27 ^jThe locusts have no king, yet go they forth all of them † by bands;

28 ^kThe spider taketh hold with her hands, and is in kings' palaces.

29 ¶ There be three things which go well, yea, four are comely in going :

30 A ^llion, which is strongest among beasts, and turneth not away for any;

31 A † || greyhound; an he goat also; and a king, ^magainst whom there is no rising up.

32 ¶ ⁿIf thou hast done foolishly in lifting up thyself, or if thou hast thought evil, ^olay thine hand upon thy mouth.

33 Surely the churning of milk bringeth forth butter, and the wringing of the nose bringeth forth blood: ^pso the forcing of wrath bringeth forth strife.

CHAP. XXXI.

Whether this Lemuel was Solomon himself, or some neighbouring prince whose mother was a pious Israelite, I know not. We have here (1) His mother's earnest admonitions to avoid whoredom and drunkenness, which so much disqualify kings for their work; and to employ his wealth for the comfort, and his power for the protection, of the poor and needy; 1—9. (2) Her representation of a truly virtuous wife, proper to be sought for by him. She must be chaste and dutiful to her husband; diligent and active in her place and station; a prudent manager, making every thing turn out to the best advantage; a careful director of her family; charitable to the poor; discreet in her discourse; and one who eminently fears God; that so she may be an honour and comfort to herself, and a blessing to her relations; 10—31.

THE words of king Lemuel, the ^aprophecy that his ^bmother taught him.

2 ^cWhat, my son? and what, the son of my womb, and what, the son of my vows?

3 ^dGive not thy strength unto women, nor thy ways to that which destroyeth kings.

4 ^eIt is not for kings, O * Lemuel, it is not for kings to drink wine; nor for princes strong drink :

5 ^fLest they drink, and forget the law, and † pervert the judgment ‡ of any of the afflicted.

6 ¶ ^gGive strong drink unto him that is ready to perish, and wine unto those that be || of heavy hearts.

7 Let him drink, and forget his poverty, and remember his misery no more.

8 ^hOpen thy mouth for the dumb in the cause of all * such as are appointed to destruction.

9 Open thy mouth, ⁱjudge righteously, and plead the cause of the poor and needy.

10 ¶ ^kWho can find a virtuous woman? for her price is far above rubies.

11 ^lThe heart of her husband doth safely trust in her; so that he shall have no need of spoil.

12 ^mShe will do him good, and not evil, all the days of her life.

13 ⁿShe seeketh wool, and flax, and worketh willingly with her hands.

14 ^oShe is like the merchants' ships; she bringeth her food from afar.

15 ^pShe riseth also while it is yet night, and giveth meat to her household, and a portion to her maidens.

16 ^qShe considereth a field and † buyeth it: with the fruit of her hands she planteth a vineyard.

17 ^rShe girdeth her loins with strength, and strengtheneth her arms.

18 † She perceiveth that her merchandise is good: ^sher candle goeth not out by night.

19 ^tShe layeth her hands to the spindle, and her hands hold the distaff.

20 ^uShe stretcheth out her hand to the poor: yea, || she reacheth forth her hands to the needy.

21 She is not afraid of the snow for her household: for all her household are clothed with * scarlet.

22 ^vShe maketh herself coverings of tapestry; her clothing is silk and purple.

23 Her husband is known ^yin the gates, when he sitteth among the elders of the land.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXX.—Let me thus always think meanly of myself, and highly of my God and Saviour, and of his works and word; and be a good savour of Christ to all around me. Earnestly should I covet further degrees of holiness, but be regardless as to the comforts and enjoyments of this life, and content with such things as I have. Let me never be a busy-body in other men's matters, but heedfully watch against the temptations incident to my own condition. Let me never be an idle spectator of what is around me; but, whatever evil I observe, let me avoid, hate, and mourn, over it: and, whatever good I observe, even in animals, let me in a Christian manner imitate the same. If I have proudly involved myself in sin, humbly should I repent of it, and always avoid contention before it be meddled with. Nothing is to be got by pride, passion, or ill language, but bloodshed and damage.

them aright. But it is absurd and ruinous when wealth, beauty, or parentage, are preferred to real virtue and religion in the choice of wives or husbands. What a scandal to human nature is it when wives become the plague, the reproach, of families! or when such as are virtuous and prudent are abused by husbands, unfaithful, drunken, imperious, cruel, outrageous, or churlish!—But infinite is the mercy that God by his grace has formed from among sinful men a church of true believers, which, as the spouse of his Son, are made to answer this amiable and glorious description.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXI.—What blessings might mothers be to families, churches, and nations, would they but carefully educate their children! And it is unnatural and irreligious when they do otherwise. When princes are given to whoredom and drunkenness, and regardless of the poor, or of the exact administration of justice, they are but a plague to the nation which they govern.—With great care and circumspection ought all, especially such as bear rule in church or state, to make choice of their yokefellows in marriage. And it is a great blessing to themselves, and all their connections, if providence direct

ECCLESIASTES

Is Solomon's penitential discourse, (composed a little before his death;) in which he recants, and laments the follies of apostasy from God, and of his attempting to satisfy himself with anything sensual or sinful. His fall was an alarming proof of the weakness and corruption of human nature; and his recovery an encouraging instance of the infinite power, mercy, and grace, of God. To warn others, Solomon here (1) Represents the vanity and vexation which adhere to all created enjoyments; particularly to those in which men ordinarily look for happiness; as human learning and policy, sensual delights, honour, power, and riches, or an empty profession of religion; chap. i—vi. (2) Prescribes remedies against that vanity and vexation which attend those things; viz. sitting loose to them; enjoying them moderately, but never expecting much from them; acquiescing in the will of God concerning us in every event; remembering God in the days of our youth; and continuing all our life in his fear and service, with an eye to the future judgment; chap. vii—xii. But in both parts the demonstrations of the vanity of things, and the prescriptions of remedies, are somewhat mixed.

CHAP. I.

After the inscription or title of the book, we have here (1) The vanity of all created things strongly asserted; 2, 3. (2) The general proofs of this, drawn from 1. The shortness of human life, and the multitudes of births and burials; 4. 2. From the perpetual changes and revolutions of creatures; as the sun, wind, water; 5, 6, 7. 3. From the great toil which man has in getting them, and the small pleasure in keeping them; 8. 4. From the repeated returns of the same things; 9, 10, 5. From their being so quickly forgotten; 11. (3) Human learning and knowledge are particularly tried, and found to be vanity, because of the labour necessary in acquiring them; the little good that can be done with them, and the little satisfaction, nay, much sorrow, attending them; 12—18.

THE words of ^a the preacher, the son of David, king of Jerusalem.

2 ^b Vanity of vanities, saith the preacher, vanity of vanities; all is vanity.

3 ^c What profit hath a man of all his labour which he taketh under the sun?

4 ¶ ^d One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh: ^e but the earth abideth for ever.

5 ^f The sun also ariseth, and the sun goeth down, and ^g hasteth to his place where he arose.

6 ^h The wind goeth toward the south, and turneth about unto the north; it whirleth about continually, and the wind returneth again according to his circuits.

7 ⁱ All the rivers run into the sea, yet the sea is not full: unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they † return again.

8 ^j All things are full of labour; man cannot utter it: the eye is not satisfied with seeing, nor the ear filled with hearing.

9 ¶ ^k The thing that hath been, it is that which shall be; and that which is done is that which shall be done: and there is no new thing under the sun.

10 Is there any thing whereof it may be said, See, this is new? ^l it hath been already of old time, which was before us.

11 ^m There is no remembrance of former things; neither shall there be any remembrance of things that are to come with those that shall come after.

12 ¶ ⁿ I the preacher was king over Israel in Jerusalem:

13 ^o And I gave my heart to seek and search out by wisdom concerning all things that are done under heaven: ^p this sore travail hath God given to the sons of man † to be exercised therewith.

14 ^q I have seen all the works that are done under the sun; and, behold, all is vanity and vexation of spirit.

17 * And I give my heart to know wisdom, and to know madness and folly: I perceived that this also is vexation of spirit.

18 ^y For in much wisdom is much grief: and he that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow.

CHAP. II.

In further demonstrating the vanity of all things, Solomon, here

(1) Shews, from his own experience, that there is no true happiness nor satisfaction to be had in carnal mirth, pleasure, nor any other sensual delights; he had tried them and found them vexing; 1—11. (2) Re-considers human wisdom, and finds it to be excellent and useful; but to be so clogged that it can render no one happy; but fools fare as well in this life as the wise, and are often as much remembered after death; besides which it renders a man weary of life; 12—17. (3) Examines whether worldly business and wealth can render men happy: but finds that business was intolerably toilsome, and that the wealth gained by it was sure to be quickly lost, or left to one knows not whom; 17—23: and therefore concludes that there is no real comfort in wealth, except so far as we use it moderately, and sit loose to it; 24—26.

I SAID in mine heart, Go to now, ^b I will prove thee with mirth, therefore enjoy pleasure: and, behold, this also is vanity.

2 ^c I said of laughter, It is mad: and of mirth, What doth it?

3 ^d I sought in mine heart *to give myself unto wine, yet ^eacquainting mine heart with wisdom; and to lay hold on folly, till I might see what was that good for the sons of men, which they should do under the heaven ^fall the days of their life.

4 ^f I made me great works; ^g I builded me houses; ^h I planted me vineyards:

5 ⁱ I made me gardens and orchards, and I planted trees in them of all kind of fruits:

6 ^k I made me pools of water, to water therewith the wood that bringeth forth trees:

7 ^l I got me servants and maidens, and had ^mservants born in my house; ⁿalso I had great possessions of great and small cattle above all that were in Jerusalem before me:

8 ^o I gathered me also silver and gold, and the peculiar treasure of kings and of the provinces: ^p I gat me men singers and women singers, and the delights of the sons of men, as ^qmusical instruments, and that of all sorts.

9 ^r So I was great, and increased more than all that were before me in Jerusalem; also my wisdom remained with me.

10 ^s And whatsoever mine eyes desired I kept not from them; I withheld not my heart from any joy; for my heart rejoiced in all my labour: and this was my portion of all my labour.

11 ^t Then I looked on all the works that my hands had wrought, and on the labour that I had laboured to do: and, behold, all was vanity and vexation of spirit, and there was no profit under the sun.

12 ¶ And ^u I turned myself to behold wisdom, and madness, and folly: for what can the man do that cometh after the king? ^v even that which hath been already done.

13 Then I saw ^wthat *wisdom excelleth folly as far as light excelleth darkness.

14 ^x The wise man's eyes are in his head; but the fool walketh in darkness: and I myself perceived also ^ythat one event happeneth to them all.

15 Then I said in my heart, As it happeneth to the fool, so it ^zhappeneth even to me; and ^{aa}why was I then more wise? Then I said in my heart that this also is vanity.

16 ^{ab} For there is no remembrance of the wise more than of the fool for ever; seeing that which now is in the days to come shall all be forgotten. And how dieth the wise man? as the fool.

17 ^{ac} Therefore I hated life; because the work that is wrought under the sun is grievous unto me: ^{ad} for all is vanity and vexation of spirit.

18 ¶ Yea, I hated ^{ae}all my labour which I had ^{af}taken under the sun: because ^{ag} I should leave it unto the man that shall be after me.

19 And who knoweth ^{ah}whether he shall be a wise man or a fool? yet shall he have rule over all my labour wherein I have laboured, and wherein I have shewed myself wise under the sun. This is also ^{ai}vanity.

20 Therefore I went about ^{aj}to cause my heart to despair of all the labour which I took under the sun.

21 ^{ak} For there is a man whose labour ^{al}is in wisdom, and in knowledge, and in equity; yet to a man that hath not laboured therein shall he ^{am}leave it for his portion. This also is vanity and a great evil.

22 ^{an} For what hath man of all his labour, and of the vexation of his heart, wherein he hath laboured under the sun?

23 ^{ao} For all his days are sorrows, and his travail grief; yea, his heart taketh not rest in the night. This is also vanity.

24 ¶ ^{ap} There is nothing better for a man than that he should eat and drink, and that he ^{aq}should make his soul enjoy good in his labour. This also I saw, that ^{ar}it was from the hand of God.

25 ^{as} For who can eat, or who else can hasten hereunto, more than I?

26 ^{at} For God giveth to a man that is good ^{au}in his sight wisdom, and knowledge, and joy: but to the sinner he giveth travail, to gather and to heap up, that ^{av}he may give to him that is good before God. This also is vanity and vexation of spirit.

as thy God. If, by all my labours for human knowledge, I can neither satisfy my mind, rectify my nature or lot, nor amend the world, let me study to know Christ and him crucified: thus shall I be changed into the same image, from glory to glory. And let this knowledge, which is eternal life, be the chief object of my pursuit.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—Numerous are the contrivances of men to find that in creatures which they should seek, and can only find, in God himself,

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—How feelingly a true penitent, from his own experience, preaches that vanity and vexation which attend created enjoyments! All things indeed in nature concur to manifest this humbling truth, though it is very hard to convince most men of it. for, notwithstanding the perpetual flux, returns, and oblivion, with which created things are marked, we are too apt to be resting on them. Neither our own observation nor experience, nor the dictates of the Spirit of God, are credited by us. Take heed, my soul, never more to esteem or desire them as God; never more depend on, or delight in, them

CHAP. III.

To manifest the vanity of studies, pleasures, and business, Solomon further observes (1) How mutable and changing all human affairs are by the purpose and providence of God; 1—10. (2) How unchangeable and unsearchable the purposes of God concerning them are; 11—15. (3) How little power and honour avail, as they often make men to live like devils in injustice and oppression, and like brutes in stupidity and thoughtless unconcern about a future state; and the greatest differ little from beasts in their apparent fate; 16—21: and therefore again concludes that the only proper method is to improve our power, and every thing else, as means of moderate comfort to ourselves, and not to oppress others; 22.

TO every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven:

2 ^bA time ^{*}to be born, and a time to die; ^ca time to plant, and a time to pluck up that which is planted;

3 ^dA time to kill, and a time to heal; ^ea time to break down, and a time to build up;

4 ^fA time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn, and a time to dance;

5 ^gA time to cast away stones, and a time to gather stones together; ^ha time to embrace, and a time [†]to refrain from embracing;

6 A time to [‡]get, and a time to lose; a time to keep, and ⁱa time to cast away;

7 ^kA time to rend, and a time to sew; ^la time to keep silence, and a time to speak:

8 ^mA time to love, and a time to hate; a time of war, and a time of peace.

9 ⁿWhat profit hath he that worketh in that wherein he laboureth?

10 ^oI have seen the travail which God hath given to the sons of men to be exercised in it.

11 ^pHe hath made every thing beautiful in his time: ^qalso he hath set the world in their heart, so that ^rno man can find out the work that God maketh from the beginning to the end.

12 ^sI know that there is no good in them, but for ^ta man to rejoice and to do good in his life.

13 And ^ualso that every man should eat and drink, and enjoy the good of all his labour, it is the gift of God.

14 I know that whatsoever God doth ^vit shall be for ever: ^wnothing can be put to it, nor any thing taken from it: and God doth ^ythat men should fear before him.

15 ^zThat which hath been is now: and that which is to be hath already been; and God requireth ||that which is past.

16 ¶ And, moreover, ^aI saw under the sun the place of judgment, that wickedness was there; and the place of righteousness, that iniquity was there.

17 I said in mine heart, ^bGod shall judge the righteous and the wicked: for there is ^ca time there for every purpose and for every work.

18 ¶ I said in mine heart concerning the estate of the sons of men, ^dthat God might manifest them, and that they might see that they themselves are ^ebeasts.

19 For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath; so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast: for all is vanity.

20 ^fAll go unto one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again.

21 ¶ Who knoweth the spirit ^gof man that ^hgoeth upward, and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?

22 ¶ Wherefore I perceive that there is nothing better than that a man should rejoice in his own works; for that is his portion: for ^kwho shall bring him to see what shall be after him?

CHAP. IV.

Having shewn the hurt which power, exercised in oppression, does to the oppressors, Solomon here (1) Shews how miserable it makes the oppressed; 1—3. (2) That useful inventions cannot make a man happy, as they expose him to envy; 4. (3) Nor idleness; 5, 6. (4) Nor covetousness, which torments a man's mind; 7, 8: and hinders social comforts; 9—12. (5) Nor royal dignity, which, through the folly of princes and fickleness of the people, is very unstable; 13—16.

SO ^aI returned, and considered all the oppressions that are done under the sun: and, behold, the tears of such as were oppressed, and they had no comforter; and on the ^{*}side of their oppressors there was power, but they had no comforter.

2 ^bWherefore I praised the dead who are already dead more than the living who are yet alive.

3 ^cYea, better is he than both they, who hath not yet been, who hath not seen the evil work that is done under the sun.

4 ¶ Again, ^dI considered all travail, and [†]every right work, ^ethat [‡]for this a man is envied of his neighbour. This [†]is also vanity and vexation of spirit.

in which all things shall be rectified, by clearing the innocent, rewarding the righteous, and condemning the wicked. 18—21. Affected with these views, I wished that God would make men, particularly those who haughtily oppress others, to consider how mean and brutish they are, and to ponder the nature of that immortal soul which chiefly distinguishes them from beasts, whose life entirely vanishes in death.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—We live in a world of changes; but all of them fixed by the unchangeable purpose of God. It is absurd then to choose it for our portion, or to take up our rest in it. Readily should we believe that whatever God has given us is best for us, accommodate ourselves to it, and wait with patience for the full unravelling of what seems intricate and perplexed. Yea to be entirely satisfied with God's providential disposals is highly necessary, as they neither can, nor need be altered. And let us study to answer his end in his providences, which is to make us truly religious. Amidst all the changes which we either feel or fear, let us believe and acknowledge the inviolable steadiness of his government. Let us constantly live in the faith of his future judgment of the world, that no oppression may sink our spirits, and no power nor honour render us proud, mischievous, or impious. Let us always maintain a deep sense of our own meanness, stupidity, and unruliness before God; and study to use whatever God gives us for our own comfort, and for the real benefit of others.

But how vain and vexing are their diversified, their unnumbered, their utmost attempts! Till our souls return to God in Christ, as our ALL and IN ALL, they will be always like birds wandering from their nests. Thrice happy are they whom God gives grace to take all things from him; to enjoy him in all things, and all things in him; and to use all things for his glory, and as means of attaching their heart to him and his ways.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. III. Ver. 1—11. However disjointed, useless, and afflictive, the events of providence may appear to us, God has connected them together in the most amazing beauty and harmony, and orders the season of each as tends most to advance his glory and the good of his people. And, whatever worldly wisdom men may have, they will never be capable of comprehending the astonishing extent of the mysteries which God exhibits to their view in his works of creation and providence. 12, 13. It is therefore best in itself, and a benefit from God, to use worldly enjoyments moderately, and to improve them for the advantage of others. 14. God, in his purpose and providence, so fixes men's lot that none can make it otherwise; and therefore we ought not to quarrel with, but kindly submit to, his pleasure. 15. In every age God, by new returns of things, governs the world with great uniformity of appearances. 16, 17. The very power which he has bestowed upon men, as a remedy for grievances, is often used to oppress and injure the innocent; and therefore there must be a future general judgment by God himself, ness, than both the hands full with travail and vexation of spirit.7 ¶ Then I returned, and I saw vanity under the sun.8 There is one alone, and there is not a second; yea, he hath neither child nor brother: yet is there no end of all his labour; neither is his eye satisfied with riches; neither saith he, For whom do I labour and bereave my soul of good?

This is also vanity, yea, it is a sore travail.9 ¶ Two are better than one; because they have a good reward for their labour:10 ¶ For, if they fall, the one will lift up his fellow: but woe to him that is alone when he falleth; for he hath not another to help him up.11 Again, if two lie together, then they have heat: but how can one be warm alone?12 And, if one prevail against him, two shall withstand him; and a threefold cord is not quickly broken.13 ¶ Better is a poor and a wise child than an old and foolish king who will no more be admonished.14 ¶ For out of prison he cometh to reign; whereas also he that is born in his kingdom becometh poor.15 I considered all the living who walk under the sun with the second child that shall stand up in his stead.16 ¶ There is no end of all the people, even of all that have been before them:
they also that come after shall not rejoice in him. Surely this also is vanity and vexation of spirit.

CHAP. V.

While Solomon inculcates the earnest and regular worship of God, as an antidote against the vexation which he had observed to attend learning, pleasure, wealth, honour, power, or business, he (1) Warns us to beware of vanity in hearing God's word, offering sacrifices; 1: prayers; 2, 3: pretending to divine dreams; 3, 7: and in making or fulfilling solemn vows; 3—6; and, to prevent it, inculcates a deep reverential awe of God; 7: and that we take no offence at religion, because of the present sufferings of the godly, as God observes, and will quickly redress, them; 8. (2) He demonstrates the vanity of abundant wealth, in regard that 1. The fruits of the earth are the proper support of man's natural life; 9: 2. Silver, gold, and other riches, are unsatisfying, unprofitable, disquieting, often hurtful and ruinous, and always perishing; and must be left behind us when we die: and occasion much uneasiness, if we have not a heart to use them while we live; 10—17: and therefore again recommends a moderate use of outward things, while we are looking to, and living upon, God the giver, as the best way to answer the end of our having them; 18—20.

KEEP *a*thy foot when thou goest to the house of God; and be more ready to hear b than to give the sacrifice of fools; for they consider not that they do evil.

2 ¶ Be not rash with thy mouth, and let not thine heart be hasty to utter any thing before God: for God is in heaven, and thou upon earth: therefore let thy words d be few.

3 For a dream cometh through the multitude of business; and e a fool's voice is known by the multitude of words.

4 ¶ When thou vowest a vow unto God, defer not to pay it; for he hath no pleasure in fools: pay that which thou hast vowed.

5 ¶ Better is it that thou shouldst not vow, than that thou shouldst vow and not pay.

6 ¶ Suffer not thy mouth to cause thy flesh to sin; neither say thou before the angel, that it was an error: wherefore should God be angry at thy voice, and k destroy the work of thine hands?

7 ¶ For in the multitude of dreams and many words there are also divers vanities:
m but fear thou God.

8 ¶ If thou seest the oppression of the poor, and violent perverting of judgment and justice in a province, marvel not at the matter: for he that is higher than the highest regardeth; and there be higher than they.

9 ¶ Moreover, the profit of the earth is for all: the king himself is served by the field.

10 ¶ He that loveth silver shall not be satisfied with silver; nor he that loveth abundance with increase: this is also vanity.

11 ¶ When goods increase, they are increased that eat them: and what good is there to the owners thereof, saving the beholding of them with their eyes?

12 ¶ The sleep of a labouring man is sweet, whether he eat little or much: but the abundance of the rich will not suffer him to sleep.

13 ¶ There is a sore evil which I have seen under the sun, namely, riches kept for the owners thereof to their hurt.

14 ¶ But those riches perish by evil travail: and he begetteth a son, and there is nothing in his hand.

15 ¶ As he came forth of his mother's womb, naked shall he return to go as he came, and shall take nothing of his labour, which he may carry away in his hand.

16 And this also is a sore evil, that in all points as he came so shall he go: and a what profit hath he that hath laboured for the wind?

17 ¶ All his days also he eateth in darkness, and he hath much sorrow and wrath with his sickness.

18 ¶ Behold that which I have seen:
e † it is good and comely for one to eat and to drink, and to enjoy the good of all his labour that he taketh under the sun || all the days of his life, which God giveth him; for it is d his portion.

19 ¶ Every man also to whom God hath given riches and wealth, and hath given him power to eat thereof, and to take his portion, and to rejoice in his labour; † this is the gift of God.

20 ¶ For he shall not much remember the days of his life; because † God an-swereth him in the joy of his heart.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Into what an hell hath sin turned our earth! Men are often proud of transforming themselves into devils, for tormenting their brethren. Often, through want of help and comfort, a man's life is made worse than death or non-existence. And desperately wicked are men when even right and useful works do but rouse their envy. But great is the mercy that God, with whom every right work is accepted, will be our final judge. Let me then be diligent in business, and work the work of God while it is called to-day. Sloth of any kind tends to make men poor and miserable. But unhappy are they who are selfish and covetous; and who, without any temptation, deny themselves the comforts of life, and make themselves slaves to business. It is absurd to covet all to themselves, when friendship and social connections are much more calculated to their help, comfort, and improvement. Kings are often but a plague to themselves and their restless people; and tottering honours are rather burdens than advantages.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Fearfully are men subjected to vanity: it

CHAP. VI.

Still demonstrating the vanity and hurtfulness of worldly riches, when men place their hopes of happiness in them, he (1) States an account of what worldlings may have; viz. 1. Great riches and honour; 2. A long life to enjoy them; 3, 6. 3. A large family to inherit them; 3. (2) He describes the marks of vanity which may attend them; viz. 1. They may have no heart to use them; but strangers, servants, or robbers, may devour them; 2, 3. 2. After a life made miserable by their churlishness, they may not so much as have a decent burial allowed them, and so be disgraced more than still-born infants; 3—6. 3. Riches relate only to the body, and cannot satisfy the mind; 7, 8. 4. They occasion much vexatious desire after more; 9. 5. They render their proprietors no less sinful nor mortal than others: 10. (3) From all that he had said of the vanity of knowledge, honour, business, power, or wealth, he infers that nothing earthly can make us truly happy; that we know not what created enjoyments we should wish for; and that our expectations of them are very short and uncertain; 11, 12.

THERE is an evil which I have seen under the sun, and it is common among men:

2 ^bA man to whom God hath given riches, wealth, and honour, so that he wanteth nothing for his soul of all that he desireth, yet God giveth him not power to eat thereof, but a stranger eateth it: ^cthis is vanity, and it is an evil disease.

3 ^dIf a man beget an hundred children, and live many years, so that ^ethe days of his years be many, and his soul be not filled with good, and ^falso that he have no burial, I say that ^gan untimely birth is better than he.

4 ^hFor he cometh in with vanity, and departeth in darkness, and his name shall be covered with darkness.

5 Moreover, he hath not seen the sun, nor known ⁱany thing: this hath more rest than the other.

6 Yea, though he live a thousand years twice told, yet ^khath he seen no good: ^ldo not all go to one place?

7 ^mAll the labour of man is for his mouth, and yet the ⁿ*appetite is not filled.

8 ^oFor what hath the wise more than the fool? what hath the poor that ^pknoweth to walk before the living?

9 ^qBetter is the sight of the eyes ^rthan the wandering of the desire: ^sthis is also vanity and vexation of spirit.

10 ^tThat which hath been is named already, and it is known ^uthat it is man: ^vneither may he contend with him that is mightier than he.

11 Seeing there be ^wmany things that increase vanity, what is man the better?

12 For ^xwho knoweth what is good for man in ^ythis life, ^zall the days of his vain life which he spendeth as ^aa shadow? ^bfor who can tell a man what shall be after him under the sun?

CHAP. VII.

Having exhibited a variety of evidences and instances of the vanity and vexation which attend earthly enjoyments, Solomon here

(1) Prescribes some remedies against that vanity and vexation, and the hurt thereof; viz. 1. A tender regard to our reputation; 1: 2. A fixed seriousness of temper in view of death; 1—4: 3. A readiness to receive Christian reproof; 5, 6: 4. Calmness of spirit under injuries and troubles; 7—10: 5. Prudence in managing our affairs; 11, 12: 6. An earnest observation of God's work, and submission to his will; 13—15: 7. Careful shunning of all extremes; 16—18: 8. Mild tenderness towards such as offend us. (2) He laments that, notwithstanding all his wisdom, whorish women had fearfully seduced him from God and his duty; 23—29.

A GOOD name is better than precious ointment; and ^bthe day of death than the day of one's birth.

2 ^cIt is better to go to the house of mourning than to go to the house of feasting: for that is the end of all men; and the living will lay it to his heart.

3 ^dSorrow is better than laughter: for by the sadness of the countenance the heart is made better.

4 ^eThe heart of the wise is in the house of mourning; ^fbut the heart of fools is in the house of mirth.

5 ^gIt is better to hear the rebuke of the wise than for a man to hear the song of fools.

6 For, ^has the ⁱ*crackling of thorns under a pot, so is the laughter of the fool: this also is vanity.

7 ^jSurely ^koppression maketh a wise man mad; ^land a gift destroyeth the heart.

8 ^mBetter is the end of a thing than the beginning thereof: ⁿand ^othe patient in spirit is better than the proud in spirit.

9 ^pBe not hasty in thy spirit to be angry: for anger resteth in the bosom of fools.

10 ^qSay not thou, What is the cause that the former days were better than these? for thou dost not inquire ^rwisely concerning this.

11 ^sWisdom is good ^twith an inheritance: and ^uby it there is profit to them that see the sun.

12 ^vFor wisdom is a ^wdefence, ^xand money is a defence: but the excellency of manifold miseries: and it will be the utmost wickedness and madness to complain of our lot, or strive with God to get it rectified.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—Men's riches are often a remarkable curse to them, and render them really more unhappy than the poorest. It is wretched to have wealth, and yet no heart to use it for our necessary accommodations in life. And empty are all earthly enjoyments, which can afford no satisfaction to a soul. How unhappy do some men make themselves by the insatiable nature of their own lusts! And yet it is very hard to draw them from a sinful attachment to earthly things, or to persuade them to use them aright; and especially to bring them to receive the almighty Saviour, and his unsearchable riches, for their everlasting treasure and portion.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1. A good reputation is of more advantage for rendering us useful and happy than all the riches, pleasures, and honours, of this world: and the day of death, which frees men from the miseries of this world, is preferable to the day of birth, which introduces into a life in which the enjoyments do not sufficiently balance the evils of it. 2—6. It is far safer, and more profitable, to attend occasions of mourning and faithful reproof, which conduce to make men thoughtful of death and eternity, and render them wise unto salvation, than of revelling, mirth, and folly, which seduce men into heedless dissipation. 7. Grievous oppression will provoke even wise men to unseemly rage and behaviour; and bribes received will corrupt the judgment and pervert the affections of the best. 8. We ought more to regard how a thing turns out at last than what promising appearances it has at first. 10. In bewailing the evils of our times, we ought carefully to avoid all murmuring at the dispensations of Providence, as if they were not equal. 11. When rich men are truly wise, they may do much good to others with their wealth in this world: 12. For both enters not only into all their outward possessions, but even into their worship! Great need have we to take heed to our hearts, to our lips, and to our whole behaviour, in our religious performances, that they may not become means of dishonouring God and destroying ourselves. But, alas, often are they performed in a foolish and inconsiderate manner, our minds being no more serious in them than in an idle dream! and vows are often rashly made, and no less readily broken, in the view of Jesus and his angels and ministers. Very necessary is the constant faith and deep impression of God's greatness and omniscience, and the future judgment, to make us serious and circumspect in our worship, and for enabling us to behold, or bear up under, oppression and persecution. God makes the highest to live on the same simple things as the poorest. There is very little to profit or please, and much more to hurt and vex, in riches, than we commonly think. The rich man's servant often enjoys more benefit by his wealth than the rich man himself, while he suffers none of the vexation! Nay, the covetous miser gets no comfort in his wealth, and it is swept away, so that his children never come to the possession of it. Much happier is he who receives whatever he has as God's free gift, and uses it to his glory. Little is he concerned at the evils which befall him in life when God favours him with solid comfort.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 7, 8. Whatever wealth men gain by their labour is only available for meat, drink, or the like; but can never satisfy their soul, or even their avarice. And, in respect of sensual gratification, fools may be happy as the wisest; and even a poor man, who has common sense and prudence, may, by his industry, render himself and family as happy as the richest. 9, 10. A comfortable enjoyment of that which we have, is far preferable to an insatiable desire and restless pursuit after that which we have not.—And, let our condition be what it will on earth, we shall still remain poor frail creatures, subject to knowledge is, that wisdom giveth life to them that have it.

13 Consider the work of God: for who can make that straight which he hath made crooked?

14 In the day of prosperity be joyful, but in the day of adversity consider: God also hath set the one over against the other, to the end that man should find nothing after him.

15 All things have I seen in the days of my vanity: there is a just man that perisheth in his righteousness, and there is a wicked man that longeth his life in his wickedness.

16 Be not righteous over much; neither make thyself over wise: why shouldest thou destroy thyself?

17 Be not over much wicked, neither be thou foolish: why shouldest thou die before thy time?

18 It is good that thou shouldest take hold of this; yea, also from this withdraw not thine hand: for he that feareth God shall come forth of them all.

19 Wisdom strengtheneth the wise more than ten mighty men which are in the city.

20 For there is not a just man upon earth, that doth good and sinneth not.

21 Also take no heed unto all words that are spoken, lest thou hear thy servant curse thee:

22 For oftentimes also thine own heart knoweth that thou thyself likewise hast cursed others.

23 All this have I proved by wisdom: I said, I will be wise; but it was far from me.

24 That which is far off, and exceeding deep, who can find it out?

25 I applied mine heart to know, and to search, and to seek out wisdom, and the reason of things, and to know the wickedness of folly, even of foolishness and madness:

26 And I find more bitter than death the woman whose heart is snares and nets.

wisdom and wealth may be laid out for our protection and safety; but it is true piety and prudence that promote spiritual comfort and eternal happiness. 13, 14. To prevent murmuring, we ought carefully to observe how wise, just, and powerful, God's operations are, and consider ourselves incapable of changing, even the most afflictive events of Providence, to our liking. In the time of prosperity we should therefore acknowledge God's goodness, and enjoy the benefit of it; and in the day of adversity we ought to consider the nature, author, and end, of our afflictions, so as to make a good use of them; for God has disposed them in such variety, that none might be able to foresee future events in his particular lot. 15. I have often observed the most pious men sorely afflicted, and apparently miserable, in this world; and the most wicked long enjoy an outward prosperity. 16—18. It is therefore necessary that men should avoid all needless scrupulosity and rash zeal, not warranted by God's word, lest it bring them into unnecessary troubles; and especially should we avoid with the utmost care presumptuous sinning, lest, however he bear with others, it should provoke God quickly to cut us off, and send us to hell in our wickedness. It is of great use to receive heartily, and practise carefully, this advice; for it is the true fearer of God, who, by a circumspect regard to his law, shall escape both the extremes and their evil consequences. 19, 20. True piety and prudence tend more to direct, help, and protect, men than all human help: even though the best are liable to manifold failings. 24. Human wisdom may judge of things present and obvious, but not of things future and mysterious. 25. I attempted a most careful and comprehensive search into God's providences, and men's counsels, conduct and sinfulness; 26. And with grief and shame, I find that nothing more effectually entices and fixes men in guilt and ruin than a whorish woman. It is only by the remarkable mercy of God, and the most earnest and watchful piety, that one can either avoid or escape from her temptations; and often God permits those, who have otherwise offended him, to be ruined by her influence. 27, 28. Here and there a truly honest man may be found among my courtiers: but a modest, plain-hearted, humble, and sincere, woman have I not found among all my thousand wives and concubines.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—A truly good character is very valuable: and ought to be sought for and maintained with the greatest care. Happy is and her hands as bands: whoso pleaseth God shall escape from her; but the sinner shall be taken by her.

27 Behold, this have I found, saith the preacher, counting one by one, to find out the account:

28 Which yet my soul seeketh, but I find not: one man among a thousand have I found, but a woman among all those have I not found.

29 Lo, this only have I found, that God hath made man upright, but they have sought out many inventions.

CHAP. VIII.

After a general commendation of wisdom, that is so necessary as an antidote against the temptations and vexations arising from the vanity of worldly enjoyments; 1: he prescribes some particular branches of this wisdom; as (1) A conscientious subjection to the civil government under which God has placed us; 2—5. (2) To prepare for sudden evils, especially a sudden death; 6—8. (3) To beware of stumbling at the present impunity or prosperity of the wicked, or the adversity of the righteous, as God will at last give each their due reward; 9—14. (4) To use the gifts of God's providence with due cheerfulness; 15. (5) Never to pry curiously into the depths of providence, but humbly to adore and acquiesce therein; 16, 17.

WHO is as the wise man? and who knoweth the interpretation of a thing? a man's wisdom maketh his face to shine, and the boldness of his face shall be changed.

2 ¶ I counsel thee to keep the king's commandment, and that in regard of the oath of God.

3 Be not hasty to go out of his sight: stand not in an evil thing; for he doth whatsoever pleaseth him.

4 Where the word of a king is, there is power: and who may say unto him, What dost thou?

5 Whoso keepeth the commandment shall feel no evil thing: and a wise man's heart discerneth both time and judgment.

6 Because to every purpose there is time and judgment, therefore the misery of man is great upon him.

7 For he knoweth not that which shall be: for who can tell him when it shall be?

8 ¶ There is no man that hath power over the spirit to retain the spirit; nei-

the death of those who die in the Lord! Let us then live much in the serious consideration of our last end. Christian reproofs are highly requisite to make or keep us grave and serious amidst so much folly and so many flashes of vain mirth as take place in the world. The very worst of things effectually work for the good of the saints. And an humble and patient resignation to the will of God makes us easy under the most grievous adversity and oppression. Christian wisdom and prudence tend greatly to our direction, safety, happiness and strength.—They teach us to view God's hand in all that befalls us; to accommodate ourselves to every providence as it comes; and neither to be offended with the prosperity of the wicked, nor the adversity of the godly, in this life; to guard against all extremes; and under a deep sense of our own faults, to carry ourselves mildly towards others who are overtaken in a fault. How short-sighted are the wisest of mortals with respect to the most important objects! But great is the mercy if they are brought to see their own leading follies and crimes, and by the sight thereof, are led to repentance, to a deep sense of the riches of God's grace, and to search out the sinfulness of their heart and nature, till they apprehend themselves utterly vile before God.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 1. How few are truly wise, and can rightly take up or expound the words or works of God! And yet it is wisdom that renders a man truly honourable, mild, and majestic. 2. The laws of a king ought to be obeyed, not only from fear of the penalty, but from regard to God, whose deputy he is, and to the oath of allegiance sworn to him by the name and in the presence of God, as witness and guardian of it. 3. We must behave ourselves submissively; and never, through passion or discontent, withdraw from his service, or cast off our allegiance; for his power being so great, it is very dangerous to contend with him. 4. A king has power to enforce his commands; and none can oppose him without apparent danger. 5. He, who prudently complies with the king's pleasure in lawful things, shall avoid the trouble and danger which he would otherwise incur. And it will require wisdom to direct in what time and manner we may deal with him to the best advantage. 6. For, through inattention to the proper time, and to proper direction in managing matters, men bring much trouble upon themselves: 7. For they are generally ignorant what things are to happen, and of the time in which what they expect will come to pass. 8. None, neither by force nor entreaty, nor by wickedness, ther hath he power in the day of death :

and there is no discharge in that war ;
neither shall wickedness deliver those that are given to it.

9 ^pAll this have I seen, and applied my heart unto every work that is done under the sun : there is a time wherein one man ruleth over another ^qto his own hurt.

10 ^rAnd so I saw the wicked buried, who had come and gone from ^sthe place of the holy, and ^tthey were forgotten in the city where they had so done : this is also vanity.

11 ^uBecause sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil.

12 ^vThough a sinner do evil an hundred times, and his days be prolonged, yet surely I know that ^xit shall be well with them that fear God, who fear before him :

13 But it shall not be well with the wicked, neither shall he prolong his days, which ^yare as a shadow ; because he feareth not before God.

14 There is a vanity which is done upon the earth ; that ^zthere be just men unto whom it happeneth according to the work of the wicked ; again, there be wicked men to whom it happeneth according to the work of the righteous : I said that this also is vanity.

15 ^aThen I commended mirth, because a man hath no better thing under the sun, than to eat, and to drink, and to be merry : for that shall abide with him of his labour the days of his life, which God giveth him under the sun.

16 ^bWhen I applied mine heart to know wisdom, and to see the business that is done upon the earth ; (for ^calso there is that neither day nor night seeth sleep with his eyes) ;

17 Then I beheld all the work of God, ^dthat a man cannot find out the work that is done under the sun : because, though a man labour to seek it out, yet he shall not find it ; yea further, though a wise man think to know it, yet shall he not be able to find it.

CHAP. IX.

For a further proof of the vanity of worldly things, Solomon here exhibits four observations which he had made. (1) That, in the mysterious providence of God, good and bad men fare much alike in this world ; 1, 2, 3. (2) That death puts a final period to all our employments and enjoyments in it ; 4, 5, 6 : and therefore it is our wisdom soberly and thankfully to use the comforts of life, and diligently to attend to the business of it while it lasts ; 7—10. (3) That God's providence often crosses the most fair and hopeful probabilities of success, and makes great calamities to surprise us before we are aware ; 11, 12. (4) That, even are capable of preventing the removal of their soul from this world in God's appointed time, and by his appointed means. 9. I have observed that rulers, by their management, often bring guilt and ruin upon themselves. 10. I have observed wicked rulers, notwithstanding the greatest funeral pomp, quickly forgotten in the very city in which they had often in God's name administered judgment. So vain and perishing are all the pomp and power of the greatest. 11. Because God in mercy sometimes delays to punish open transgressors of his law, hardened sinners, in a most presumptuous manner, abandon themselves to all manner of mischief and wickedness. 12. But, though the sinner's days of reprieve, or even of prosperity, should be prolonged for a time, yet it is only they who truly fear God, and walk in his ways, that will be happy at last. 13. Wicked despisers of God shall not enjoy the true comforts of life, and shall be quickly hurried into misery here or hereafter. 14. It is, however, afflicting that some eminent saints are reproached, persecuted, and distressed, in this world, while some ringleaders in wickedness meet with kind usage and remarkable prosperity. 15. This makes it evident that nothing is more proper than soberly and thankfully to enjoy what God in his providence bestows upon us in this world, as all the reward that we can gain by our labour. 16, 17. It is where wisdom renders men extremely useful, it often procures them little respect ; which he illustrates in the case of a poor man who by his wisdom delivered a city from ruin, and yet was afterwards disregarded ; 13—18.

Before Christ

FOR ^aall this ^{*}I considered in my heart even to declare all this, ^bthat the righteous, and the wise, and their works, are in the hand of God : ^cno man knoweth either love or hatred by all that is before them.

2 All things come alike to all : there is one event to the righteous and to the wicked ; to the good and to the clean, and to the unclean ; to him that sacrificeth, and to him that sacrificeth not : as is the good, so is the sinner ; and he that swareth as he that feareth an oath.

3 ^dThere is an evil among all things. that are done under the sun, that there is one event unto all : ^eyea, also the heart of the sons of men is full of evil, and madness is in their heart while they live, ^fand after that they go to the dead.

4 ^gFor to him that is joined to all the living there is hope : ^hfor a living dog is better than a dead lion.

5 ⁱFor the living know that they shall die : ^kbut the dead know not any thing, ^lneither have they any more a reward,
^mfor the memory of them is forgotten.

6 ⁿAlso their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished ; neither have they any more a portion for ever in any thing that is done under the sun.

7 ^oGo thy way, eat thy bread with joy, and drink thy wine with a merry heart ; for God now accepteth thy works.

8 ^pLet thy garments be always white ;
and let thy head lack no ointment.

9 ^q+ Live joyfully with the wife whom thou lovest all the days of the ^rlife of thy vanity, which he hath given thee under the sun, all the days of thy vanity : ^sfor that is thy portion in this life, and in thy labour which thou takest under the sun.

10 ^tWhatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might ; ^ufor there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest.

11 ^vI returned, and saw under the sun ^wthat the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, neither yet bread to the wise, nor yet riches to men of understanding, nor yet favour to men of skill ; ^xbut time and chance happeneth to them all.

12 ^yFor man also knoweth not his time : as the fishes that are taken in an evil net, and as the birds that are caught best to refrain from curious inquiries into the seasons, ends, and meaning, of God's dispensations ; for, after the most diligent, curious, and persevering search, I find they will still remain unsearchable to men.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—What excellency in himself—usefulness among neighbours—honour among friends—and courage among enemies—the true knowledge and fear of God give to a man ! But it is foolish and sinful to disregard the laws of our rulers ; to be forward in finding fault with their administrations ; to persist in faults pointed out to us ; or to neglect proper methods of obtaining redress of our grievances. Subjection to magistrates is highly necessary, not only for conscience sake, but even for avoiding their wrath and securing our own comfort. Certain and irresistible in themselves, though uncertain in their circumstances, are troubles and death to sinful men. But when we see wicked men prosper while the godly are oppressed, there is need of patience, and of looking by faith to the unseen, the eternal, issue of things : and, in the mean while, to make the best use we can of what we meet with, and leave it to the Lord to comprehend and manage his own mysterious works.

in the snare; so are the sons of men

13 ¶ This wisdom have I seen also under the sun, and it seemed great unto
me:

14 ^dThere was a little city, and few men within it: and there came a great king against it, and besieged it and built great bulwarks against it:

15 Now there was found in it a poor wise man; and he by his wisdom delivered the city; yet no man remembered that same poor man.

16 Then said I, Wisdom is better than strength: nevertheless, the poor man's wisdom is despised, and his words are not heard.

17 ^eThe words of wise men are heard in quiet more than the cry of him that ruleth among fools.

18 ^bWisdom is better than weapons of war: but one sinner destroyeth much good.

CHAP. X.

Having frequently recommended wisdom, and decried folly, Solomon here prescribes proper rules for exercising the one and avoiding the other. To men in general, particularly private persons, he recommends (1) Carefully to preserve their reputation, by a prudent and skilful management of their affairs; 1, 2, 3. (2) Humbly to submit to rulers, if they have offended them; 4. (3) To live peaceably, never connecting themselves with such as are factious and turbulent, which would hasten their own ruin; 8—10. (4) To govern their tongues well, as rash speaking is foolish and hurtful; 11—15: and particularly to avoid speaking evil of rulers; 20. (5) To be diligent in business, and by frugality to provide well for their families; 18, 19. To rulers he recommends, (1) To advance none to places of power and trust but such as are duly qualified; 5—7. (2) To behave themselves discreetly, to be generous, not churlish; temperate, not luxurious; 16.

DEAD ^aflies cause the ointment of the apothecary to send forth a stinking savour: ^aso doth a little folly him that is in reputation for wisdom and honour.

2 ^bA wise man's heart is at his right hand, but a fool's heart at his left.

3 Yea also, when he that is a fool walketh by the way, his wisdom faileth him, and he saith to every one that he is a fool.

4 If the spirit of the ruler rise up against thee, leave not thy place; for yielding pacifieth great offences.

5 There is an evil which I have seen under the sun, as an error which proceedeth from the ruler:

6 ^cFolly is set in great dignity, and the rich sit in low place.

7 I have seen servants upon horses, and princes walking as servants, upon
the earth.

8 ^kHe that diggeth a pit shall fall into it; and whoso breaketh an hedge a serpent shall bite him.

9 Whoso removeth stones shall be hurt therewith; and he that cleaveth wood shall be endangered thereby.

10 If the iron be blunt, and he do not whet the edge, then must he put to more strength: but wisdom is profitable to direct.

11 Surely ^mthe serpent will bite without enchantment; and ^aa babbler is no better.

12 ⁿThe words of a wise man's mouth are gracious; but the lips of a fool will swallow up himself.

13 The beginning of the words of his mouth is foolishness; and the end of his talk is mischievous madness.

14 ^pA fool also is full of words: a man cannot tell what shall be; and what shall be after him, who can tell him?

15 The labour of the foolish wearieth every one of them, because he knoweth not how to go to the city.

16 ¶ Wo to thee, O land, when thy king is a child, and thy princes eat in the morning!

17 Blessed art thou, O land, when thy king is the son of nobles, and thy princes eat in due season, for strength, and not for drunkenness!

18 ¶ By much slothfulness the building decayeth: and through idleness of the hands the house droppeth through.

19 ¶ A feast is made for laughter, and wine maketh merry: but money answereth all things.

20 ¶ Curse not the king, no not in thy thought; and curse not the rich in thy bed chamber: for a bird of the air shall carry the voice, and that which hath wings shall tell the matter.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—It is a great mercy for the saints that they and all their works are in the hand and under the influence of God, their reconciling Father. Yet how often does he use them with as much severity in this world as if they were the most profligate sinners! Great is the mercy that there is an eternity at hand, when Providence so little distinguishes the righteous here in their condition, either in life or in death. Remarkable are the advantages which men have in this life for bettering their states, tempers, or hopes. But quickly death puts an end to them all; to all opportunities of preparing for eternity; and to all our intimacies, enjoyments, or affections, in this world. What need then have we soberly to relish the comforts of this life, relative to our spirits, our food, our raiment, and our relations! Quickly should we work out our salvation with fear and trembling, while we have opportunity; as we know not how soon our soul may be required of us. Carefully should we acknowledge God, and depend on him for direction in all our paths, as, without his assistance, we can obtain nothing good, but must fall into misery and ruin. Yet how stupid are most men, who neither regard wisdom itself, nor those who thereby do them the greatest services! It is necessary that we should always act from regard to the authority of God, and from a principle of love, as men may perhaps disregard the best works that we can do for them. But much more useful are wise discourses than all the noisy harangues which fools admire. And even one impenitent and presumptuous sinner is often a great plague to a family, a church, or nation.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1.—A little imprudence or wickedness much hurts the character of one who has been reckoned uncommonly wise. 2. A wise man's understanding, and inward abilities, are always in readiness to direct him in his work: but a fool is unready in all he does, and knows not how to manage his affairs. 3. Nay, even in the most ordinary business his weakness appears, and he plainly discovers his folly to every one. 4. If the magistrate take offence at thee, never desert thy station or employment, or withdraw thy subjection: but, by submissive and patient carriage, endeavour to pacify him. 5—7. Very often, to the great hurt of the subjects, magistrates employ, as their deputies and agents, persons of a weak or mercenary spirit, while persons of ability and true dignity are overlooked and contemned. 8. Both prince and people have need to beware of innovations; for he that endeavours to ensnare and ruin another shall thereby perish himself; and he that passes his due bounds to wrong others brings unexpected mischief upon himself. 9. He that rashly attempts things too high and hard for him shall be hurt by it; and he that deals with men of stubborn tempers endangers himself. 10. If a man do not use proper means for his work, it will cost him so much more labour and pains. Wisdom is therefore necessary and profitable to direct in the choice and use of means. 11. As unenchanted serpents are disposed to bite, so rash and talkative persons are sure to do mischief with their words, unless they be wisely prevented. 12. Wise men's words being pious, friendly and profitable, procure them favour: but foolish, slanderous, and sinful speeches suddenly and irrecoverably ruin a man. 13. A fool at first talks in an useless and impertinent manner; and at length he grows insolent and abusive, sticking at nothing wicked or malicious. 14. A fool pours forth his incoherent babblings, and pretends to know every thing secret or future; and no one can tell what he will say next, or what mischief his foolish speeches may produce. 15. Fools find their work tedious and wearisome, because they want sense and prudence to manage the most ordinary business, even where the rules are ever so plain. 16. It is a great misery to a nation when their magistrates are ignorant, wilful and unexperienced, and minding their sensual pleasures when they should be employed about the business of their office. 17. But happy is that nation whose magistrates are of truly excellent dispositions and endowments, and who use the enjoyments of life, not to satisfy inordinate lust, but to fit them for their business. 18. Through sloth and indolence, estates, families, and nations, are gradually reduced to wretchedness and ruin. 19. Even feasting affords but a very slight and transient pleasure; but a plentiful estate procures every outward advantage: we should therefore beware of spending it in luxury. 20. It is neither lawful nor safe to condemn, reproach, or wish evil to, magistrates, however secretly, as it may be very quickly and surprisingly discovered to them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—Men of character have need to be careful, lest they should inadvertently ruin it. Many are extremely ill qualified for the

CHAP. XI.

To avoid the vanity and vexation of worldly things, and obtain true happiness, Solomon had already recommended a serious and circumspect regard to God and religion; a patient resignation to the dispensations of providence, without anxiously prying into them; a proper use of what God bestows in this life; diligent meditation on, and preparation for, death; the exercise of deep repentance for sin; a due regard to magistrates, as God's deputies over us; diligent study and practice of wisdom and prudence in our whole conversation; together with a careful abstinence from fleshly lusts; he here (1) Warmly exhorts to an abundant and liberal distribution to the poor, as a mean of refining our worldly enjoyments and making them turn to a good account; 1—6. (2) He seriously, though sometimes ironically, admonishes all, particularly young persons, to meditate on, and prepare for, death and judgment; 7—10.

CAST thy bread *upon the waters; ^bfor thou shalt find it after many days.

2 °Give a portion to seven, and also to eight; ^dfor thou knowest not what evil shall be upon the earth.

3 °If the clouds be full of rain, they empty themselves upon the earth; and if the tree fall toward the south, or toward the north, in the place where the tree falleth there it shall be.

4 °He that observeth the wind shall not sow; and he that regardeth the clouds shall not reap.

5 °As thou knowest not what is the way of the spirit, nor how the bones do grow in the womb of her that is with child; ^beven so thou knowest not the works of God who maketh all.

6 °In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand: ^bfor thou knowest not whether [†]shall prosper, either this or that, or whether they both shall be alike good.

7 ¶ Truly the light is sweet, and a pleasant thing it is for the eyes to behold the sun:

8 °But if a man live many years, and rejoice in them all; ^ayet let him remember the days of darkness, for they shall be many. All that cometh is vanity.

9 ¶ Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth; and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth: and walk in the ways of thine heart, and in the sight of thine eyes: ^pbut know thou, that for all these things God will bring thee into judgment.

business they take in hand; and imprudently expose their own folly and wickedness. But it is very dangerous when either rulers or subjects leave their proper stations, and attempt violent changes of the public settlement. Vain and imprudent talking is often attended with the most hurtful consequences. It is necessary then to have our words always with grace, seasoned with salt. An imprudent management of their business frequently robs men of both the comfort and the benefit thereof. But it is a great mercy for nations when rulers and subjects do all diligently and prudently attend to their proper work, and act according to their station, neither doing nor speaking evil, but provoking one another to love and to good works.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1, 2. Cheerfully lay out thyself to bestow the necessities of life upon the poor, who are entirely unable to requite thee: and so God shall plentifully reward thee for it in this life, or in that which is to come. And, however great the number of needy objects be, bestow that which is necessary upon them all, according to thine utmost ability; for the opportunity of liberality may soon be lost to thee, and an evil time may quickly come, in which thou wilt infinitely need God to be the supplier of thy own wants. 3, 4. He bestows plenty upon men, in order that with it they may do good to others. And, however undeserving the objects be on whom they religiously bestow their charity, they shall not lose their reward.—They that withhold it till every objection be answered, will never bestow it. 5, 6. As thou knowest not how the human soul is created or united to the body, or operates in and on it, nay, nor even how the child is formed in the womb, even so thou knowest not how God may deal with thee or thy estate; and therefore neglect no opportunity of doing or receiving good: and, without any curious prying into futurity, leave it entirely to God to recompense thee. 7, 8. Life, and its comforts, are desirable: but, let men enjoy created comforts as long as they may, the lasting period of troubles, death, and eternity, will infallibly succeed, and manifest the emptiness and insufficiency of all outward enjoyments. 9, 10. Whatever temptations young persons may have to indulge their own foolish and wicked inclinations and fancies, let them remember, with the deepest concern, that God will, in his awful judgment, call them to account for every part of their conduct. Let them then take care to prevent those perplexities and miseries which sinful indulgence will at last bring upon them: for all the empty and short-lived pleasures of youth can never in the least balance the dangers of inexpressible and everlasting misery.

10 °Therefore remove [†]sorrow from thy heart, and put away evil from thy flesh: ^afor childhood and youth are vanity.

CHAP. XII.

Here the penitent preacher concludes in the most affecting manner, (1) Solemnly exhorting men to begin their religious concern very early, as the calamities of old age will render them unfit, and death will make a very important change on both soul and body; 1—7. (2) Solemnly re-asserting the important and humbling truth which he had been proving—that all is vanity; 8. (3) Seriously recommending what he had written in this and other books to men's deepest consideration; 9—12. (4) Summing up the whole of our duty, and charging us to attend to it, in the view of God's future judgment; 13, 14.

REMEMBER ^anow thy ^bCreator in the days of thy youth, while ^cthe evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them;

2 While the sun, or the light, or the moon, or the stars, be not darkened, nor the ^{*}clouds return after the rain:

3 In the day when the keepers of the ^dhouse shall tremble, and the strong men shall bow themselves, and [†]the grinders cease because they are few, ^eand those that look out of the windows be darkened.

4 And ^fthe doors shall be shut in the streets, when the sound of the grinding is low, and he shall rise up at the voice of the bird, ^gand all the daughters of music shall be brought low;

5 Also when they shall be afraid of that which is high, and fears shall be in the way, and ^hthe almond tree shall flourish, and the grasshopper shall be a burden, and desire shall fail: because man goeth to ⁱhis long home, and the mourners go about the streets:

6 Or ever the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern.

7 °Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was; and the spirit shall return unto God ^hwho gave it.

8 ¶ Vanity of vanities, saith the preacher; all is vanity.

9 And, ^amoreover, because the preacher was wise, he still taught the people knowledge; yea, he gave good heed, and

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—What a plain, profitable, and important, duty is that of giving to the poor! Nothing is a more certain mean of making men rich. No objections, drawn from our right to what we have, from the narrowness of our circumstances, from the discouragements which we have already met with in it, or from our not knowing how it can be made up to us, ought to make us neglect so much as one opportunity of charity. But, above all, it is most sinful and foolish for either old or young to indulge their lusts, and live unconcerned about Jesus Christ and his salvation, when heavy troubles, an important death, an awful judgment, and an endless eternity, are before them, and they know not how near!

CHAP. XII. Ver. 1. Now in youth seriously think of, believe in, and serve the Divine Persons, who made, preserve, and redeem men, before the disquieting and disqualifying infirmities of old age come upon you. 2. Before the comforts of life, which render it agreeable, be withdrawn, and the powers of your mind and senses of your body be rendered almost useless, and the calamities of old age arise successively one after another: 3. When your head, arms, and hands, shall shake, through weakness or palsy; your once strong shoulders stoop, and your legs and thighs bow under their weight; your teeth be generally lost, and your eyes sunk in their sockets and become dim; 4. Before your lips be but a little open to eat or talk, because of the loss or looseness of teeth; before you be incapable to walk in the streets; your rest broken, and every little noise awaken you; your lungs fail, your voice become inharmonious and harsh, and your ears dull, and regardless of music; 5. Before you, unable to climb, become afraid to mount or move on high, nay, are afraid of falling in the common way; before your hair become white; the least noise or weight become burdensome, and the lightest food load your stomach; and there be no inclination to, or delight in, former pleasures, because you draw nigh to the grave and the other world, when your friends shall lament their loss, and the hired mourners publicly pour forth their pretended sorrows; 6. Remember your Creator, before the union between your soul and body be loosed, or the pith of your back and nerves be weakened: the vessel, in which your brain and animal spirits are contained, be rendered unfit for use; your veins and arteries, which convey the blood and vital spirits be rendered unfit to convey them any more from the right or left ventricles of your heart; 7. And your body be laid in the grave, to moulder into dust, and your soul appear to be judged unnumbered infirmities and troubles of old age, and the fears and pangs of death, in the full assurance that Jesus loved them and gave himself for them! But, alas! how difficult it is to persuade us of the emptiness of all created things! This truth needs to be inculcated a thousand times over. Nor will that avail, unless the Holy Ghost inscribe it on our heart. It is necessary then that all preachers should be sent and qualified by Christ and his Spirit; and that, by every possible mean, they should labour to fix the truths of God in the consciences, understandings, affections, and memories, of their hearers. And let us, in our religious course, attend chiefly to the principal points; and always act under the awe, and in the faith and hope, of the last judgment.

THE

SONG OF SOLOMON

Could not be a nuptial hymn composed in honour of any of his wives; for it was not composed till after the tower of Lebanon was built; chap. vii. 4; and so not till about twenty years after his marriage with Pharaoh's daughter. Many of the emblems used in it; as, to be made a keeper of the vineyard, to have an head like Carmel, a nose like the tower of Lebanon, eyes like fish-pools, teeth like a flock of sheep, and to be terrible as an army with banners, &c. if applied to a fine lady, are absurd to the last degree: but, if the whole be understood of the union and fellowship between Christ and his people, it will appear most exalted, instructive, and animating. The name of God is not found in it, more than in Esther; nor could the continued allegory of the book well admit of it. But the agreement of its matter and language with other passages of scripture; as Is. liv. 5; and lxii. 4, 5; Hos. ii. 19, 29; Matt. xxv. 1—10; ix. 15; and iii. 29; Rom. vii. 4; 2 Cor. xi. 2; Eph. v. 32; Rev. xix. 7; and xxi. 2, 9; and especially with Ps. xlv.; its majestic style; its efficacy on the consciences of men for promoting their spiritual comfort and holiness; the sincerity of the bride in acknowledging her faults; and, in fine, the general reception of it by the Jewish and Christian churches; sufficiently prove it inspired of God. To such as read it with a carnal and wanton mind, it will be the savour of death unto death: but to such as, acquainted with fellowship with Christ, peruse it with a spiritual and heavenly frame, it will prove a savour of life unto life, a counterpart of their gracious experience. It is a dialogue; in which the speakers are Jesus Christ, the blessed Bridegroom of souls; the church, which is his body and bride, and every particular saint in it; and the daughters of Jerusalem or Zion, who are either nominal professors of the true religion, or, at best, young and weak converts. The scope of it is to represent Christ and his people's mutual esteem of, desire after, and delight in, one another. And, as the bride denotes either the church in general, or a particular believer, the members, &c. attributed to her must have different significations assigned them, according as the one or the other is understood.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. I. Ver. 2. Blessed Jesus, upon whom I have been meditating, by thy word and Spirit give me intimate fellowship with thee in thy ordinances, and full assurances of thy friendship; for the manifestations of thy redeeming love are more pleasant, reviving, and strengthening, to my soul, than any created enjoyments. 3. Such is the pleasant and powerful influence of thy mediatorial excellencies, offices, relations, and fulness of spirit and grace, that sincere and holy souls cannot but love thee with their whole heart. 4. my own inward corruptions, enraged at my connection with Christ, and my cleaving to him, have oppressed me with the basest drudgery, and entangled me in carnal cares and secular affairs, which have hindered me from, or retarded me in, the due improvement of my own office, opportunities, gifts, and graces. 7. But, O all-compassionate Redeemer, whom I love with my whole heart, and above every thing else, discover to me, by thy word and Spirit, which is thy true church, and which are those assemblies wherein thou art remarkably present, and to whom thou afforest spiritual support and consolation amidst all their scorching persecutions and troubles: for why should I, whom thou hast redeemed, and who have sincerely devoted my whole self to thee, be left to associate myself with empty professors, false teachers, and inward idols, who, notwithstanding their pretences of friendship, are thy enemies and rivals on earth!

CHRIST. Ver. 8. O ye excellent ones of the earth, beautified with my salvation, righteousness, and grace, and whose church state is adorned with my ordinances, if your knowledge of duty be still indistinct, inquire after, observe, and follow, the example of the saints in former and present ages; and let weak believers and young converts, with their weak or languishing graces, carefully attend my public ordinances dispensed by my faithful pastors. 9. And be encouraged in my love, for notwithstanding the weakness which you feel, and the self-deformity which you discover, I, your Redeemer and Husband, have and will render you comely and active, and will give you sufficient strength and courage to withstand and conquer your spiritual enemies, and to glorify me by your holy conversation. 10. Whilst your church state is beautifully adorned, by divine oracles, ordinances, gifts, and graces, professors, and ministers, your particular conversation before the world appears beautifully marked with a variety of precious and holy qualities; and your faith, by which you are united to my person as your Head, is precious and glorious in itself, and is productive of every good word and work. 11. And I, my Father, and the blessed Spirit, will for ever continue and increase, and at last perfect these your spiritual ornaments.

BELIEVERS. 12. O that we may enjoy these effectual and ornamenting operations of thy grace! For, whilst thou, Jesus, dost converse familiarly with us in thine ordinances, how pleasant are thy promises and truths to our heart, and how vigorous and active, and acceptable to thee, are our implanted graces! 13. And, even during the night of trouble or time, how delightfully art thou, our beloved husband, found in the public and private ordinances of thy grace, and art entertained by the most cordial embraces of our faith and love! 14. O what an inexpressibly delightful and precious system of excellencies, fountain of graces, source of blessings, repository of promises, treasure of pardoning, healing, comforting, nourishing, quickening, and refreshing influence, art thou to our heart!

CHRIST. 15. How comely and glorious is my church, as endowed with ordinances, and reformed, by my word, and Spirit; and how adorned with intelligent, sincere, peaceful, peace-proclaiming, and faithful pastors, who search into gospel truths, and watch over, direct, and go before, every individual member of it. And how certainly, and eminently comely, is every believing soul clothed with my righteousness and endowed with my grace! How quick and discerning their spiritual understanding! How chaste, sincere, and single, their affections, without the least glance of spiritual whoredom!

BELIEVERS. 16. But, blessed and divine Husband, what is all my derived comeliness in respect of thine, in thy person, offices, relations, and grace; How delightful are all these to my heart! How pleasantly effectual is thy covenant,

CHAP. II.

Here, we have (1) Jesus Christ commending himself and his people; 1, 2. (2) Believers; 1. Remembering what satisfaction they had experienced in fellowship with him; 3, 4. 2. Delighting themselves in present tokens of his favour, and taking care that nothing should interrupt them; 5—7. 3. Triumphant in his approaches towards them in his incarnation, spiritual fellowship, and second coming; 8, 9. 4. Joyfully repeating his gracious invitations to familiar fellowship with him, and his charge to remove every hindrance of it; 10—15. 5. Boldly asserting their and his mutual relation, nearness to, and delight in, one another; 16. 6. Longing for his coming in the flesh, the Spirit, and in glory; 17.

and the ordinances of thy gospel, for the conversion and consolation of souls, and for rendering them fruitful in good works! 17. And, strong, durable, and lasting, is thy church, in which I am honoured to dwell, and consists of such parts and members as shall never decay; and permanent are all her oracles, ordinances, and offices.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—How precious and pleasant Christ is to believing souls! Ardently do they pant after further communications of his grace; sensible that they can do nothing of themselves, but Jesus must do all in them and for them. He takes the sweetest delight in speedily answering their prayers and satisfying their souls with his loving-kindness; though often, amidst his kind visits, their outward state is such as looks-on are apt to stumble at. With what pain and grief do lively saints lament the want of frequent and intimate fellowship with him and his people in the ordinances! But he is ready to direct and comfort them in this condition. He has done, and will do, for them the most amazing things, in furnishing them with his righteousness, his grace, and his glory. All their life, their strength, their grace, their comfort, their happiness, comes from him. His heart is full of high esteem and unbounded affection for them. And, through familiar fellowship with him, they receive and enjoy his comforting, sanctifying, and preserving influence.

CHAP. II. CHRIST. Ver. 1. I am indeed glorious in my person as God-man, and in my mediatorial relations, estates, and works; and am infinitely comely, refreshing, and medicinal, to every believing soul. 2. And, partaking of my comeliness, righteousness, and grace, thou, my church, art incomparably more excellent and useful than all the societies; and ye, my people, than all the persons on earth.

BELIEVERS. 3. But infinitely more my beloved Jesus excels angels and men in every thing gracious, glorious, and operative. Often have I, under the covert of his righteousness, love, power, and providence, fearless of danger from heaven, earth, or hell, believingly viewed, admired, and applied to my soul, his person; offices, and relations, with all the pardon, peace, acceptance, adoption, sanctification, comfort, and endless glory, which flow therefrom! 4. Powerfully has he admitted me to partake of his fulness, in the most ravishing manner in his word and ordinances. And the manifestations of his love have effectually protected me from enemies, and encouraged and animated me to my spiritual work and warfare. 5. Ye ministers and fellow professors, often have I needed your sympathy, direction, and comfort, under my sad perplexity and desertion. But oh, if you could now help me to bear up under these ravishing discoveries and communications of Jesus' love! O for further and unspeakably more enlarged enjoyment of him, to strengthen me for supporting under, and improving, what I have! 6. But why do I ask your assistance? While I enjoy the safe, the delightful, and intimate, embraces of an incarnate God, and have the secrets of his covenant imparted to my soul, his promise, power, and grace, marvellously uphold, delight, and invigorate, my heart. 7. I therefore charge you, my fellow professors, by every thing kind, pleasant, or delightful, that ye disturb not my fellowship with him, nor do, nor cause me to do, any thing which may provoke him to withdraw this sensible visit of his love. 8. Lo! though he had withdrawn, yet I now hear his voice, in the ministry of his word and motions of his Spirit. Behold, he comes removing and triumphing over every hindrance of my fellowship with him! 9. Behold, in the most lively, lovely, and affectionate manner, he comes forward in the influences of his grace, and unto an

CHAP. III.

Here (1) The church recounts the pains she took to regain the sensible presence of her Redeemer, her care to improve it, and to prevent his withdrawal ; 1—5. (2) The daughters of Jerusalem, moved by her repeated charges, admire her glory and heavenly conversation ; 6. (3) She points and invites them to Jesus Christ, in his person, covenant, and glory, as infinitely more worthy of their consideration, wonder, and acceptance ; 7—11.

BY ° night on my bed I sought ° him whom my soul loveth : I sought him, but I found him not.
2 ° I will rise now, and go about the actual assumption of our nature ! Behold he, the substance of all our ceremonies, manifests his glorious and gracious excellencies through them, and vouchsafes some obscure and transient glimpses of himself in every ordinance ! 10. In what a heart-melting manner he said to my soul, Rouse up thyself from thy partial deadness, sloth, and security, and disentangle thyself more fully from the snares of the world and thy own lusts. Exercise thy faith in the most active, bold, and assured, degree, in partaking of the most delightful fellowship with me : 11. For all impediments, arising from the wrath of God, the guilt or dominion of sin, or from terrible troubles, are now removed.

12—14. Now are come the days of power, and times of love, in which the dispensations of the gospel are attended with almighty influence, and multitudes are, to their everlasting joy and comfort, converted to me, and rendered fruitful in good works. Arise, therefore, my poor, meek, chaste, but often, persecuted, bride ; let no despondency, no sense of thy unworthiness, deter thee from approaching my presence in prayer and other holy duties ; for both thy person and services are accepted by me, and are inexpressibly amiable in my sight.
15. And, while ecclesiastical rulers take pains, both by doctrine and discipline, to free my church from false teachers, even those who have but begun to vent their errors and irregularities, as they greatly mar her purity, peace, order, and beauty, and are especially apt to mislead weak believers, let every one be careful to search out, and mortify his own inward lusts, as these, if indulged, exceedingly mar the work of grace in their hearts. 16. This kind inviter is my glorious Husband and Mediator, given of God to, and accepted by, me ; and I am his, by the Father's donation, his own purchase and conquest, and by my surrender of myself to him. And O the infinite delight he takes in his people, and to converse with them in his ordinances ! 17. Till the gospel day, in its pleasant light and powerful influence, break, and the shadows of Jewish ceremonies flee away ; nay, till the day of perfect glory dawn, and all the shadows of desertion, temptation, and trouble, are fled ; do thou, blessed Jesus, often surprise me with the discoveries of thy glory and communications of thy grace, notwithstanding whatever hindrances, guilt, and wickedness, are found with me.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—O the unbounded glory and infinite usefulness of Jesus Christ, and the glory and usefulness of his people as connected with him ! What must be the immediate enjoyment of God and the Lamb, when the imperfect and mediate enjoyment on earth is sometimes so transporting ?
Detested for ever be that heart which would change one hour's fellowship with Christ for all the pleasures, honours, and riches, on earth. Tenderly should it be managed, and carefully improved and maintained. A small thing may interrupt it ; and with the greatest reluctance and grief should the believing soul mourn over its want. Strong as death must be the love of our Redeemer, which makes him come to his people over every mountain of distance, darkness, wrath, provocation, and pollution. How earnest and affecting are his invitations to familiar intercourse with himself ! And what a change in the world is made by his oracles, ordinances, and influence ! But wicked ministers in a church, and carnal lusts in a heart, are our greatest plagues, and should be carefully removed. And the assured faith of our relation to Christ will make us effectually to long and cry for frequent and familiar fellowship with him.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. In time of desertion and trouble, and of a secure and slothful frame, in prayer and other private ordinances I endeavoured to regain the sensible communications of Jesus' love : I persevered therein, but without any discernible success. 2. Stirring up myself therefore to a more active and lively frame of spirit, I attended the public ordinances of his worship, in order to obtain communion with himself. I often repeated my endeavours, but met with nothing but disappointments and discouragements. 3. Faithful ministers, who, with care and labour, inspect the souls of men, were often directed to speak pointedly to my case, which encouraged me to open it to them in familiar conversation, and beg their assistance in furthering my fellowship with him.
4. Not resting in duties and ordinances, by faith I essayed still more earnest and immediate application to Jesus himself. He graciously vouchsafed me his sensible presence. Then my heart clave to him by a lively exercise of faith, and by the most ardent and resolute affection. I carefully avoided every thing which tended to disturb our fellowship or provoke his withdrawal ; and not only laboured to get intimate enjoyment and full assurance of his love to myself, but to have his promised presence in the church and the public ordinances thereof.
5. I therefore again charge you, my fellow professors or saints, to avoid every thing which may in the least tend to mar my intercourse with him.
DAUGHTERS OF JERUSALEM. 6. What amazing persons are those, who, separated from the world in affection, and delivered from former troubles, mount up heavenward in faith, in love, in spiritual mindedness, and in holy desires and conversation ; all acceptable to God through Jesus' merits and intercession, and endowed with the manifold and precious graces of his holy Spirit !
BELIEVERS. 7, 8. Nay, admire not us, nor the glories which we have freely received from Christ ; but behold that new covenant of grace, and that familiar fellowship with him, which are the causes of every thing amiable in us, and in which we are watched over and protected, amidst all our dangers, by almighty perfections, attendant angels, and vigilant ministers. 9, 10. Behold how, according to his mere good pleasure, and for his own glory, he has not only assumed our nature in the most precious and useful form, but has formed a new covenant, and a gospel dispensation,—reared on stable, precious, and supporting, promises,—founded in the unchangeable and everlasting love and purpose of God, in which men are protected by his righteousness and royal power : and his unbounded love makes every thing proper, refreshing, and supporting, for the members of his church, in order to transport them, in fellowship with him through this world into the heavenly state ! 11. Go forth then, my fellow professors, from your unregeneracy, your self-righteousness, your filthy lusts, your carnal cares, and sluggish frames : and with earnestness, faith, love, and wonder, observe Jesus, our Prince of peace, not only crowned by his father with the highest glory and honour, but even by all the true members of his church, in their acceptance of him, and submission to him, as their Husband, Saviour, and Lord ; particularly in that day of power and time of love in which, to his inexpressible satisfaction, they are united to him by faith.

CHAP. IV.

Jesus, having espoused his church and people to himself, and delighted with their recommending of him to others, here (1) Commends their beauty in seven particulars, and concludes them all fair and comely; 1—7. (2) Retiring himself, he invites them to follow him from mountains of danger and terror to the pure and powerful ordinances of his grace, and to the gospel church and heavenly state; 6—8. (3) He professes his great esteem of, and delight in, their persons, graces, and good works; 9—14. (4) Moved by his commendations, they ascribe every excellency about themselves to his influence, and beg a more remarkable share of it; 15, 16.

BEHOLD, thou art fair, my love; behold, thou art fair; thou hast doves' eyes within thy locks: thy hair is as a flock of goats, that appear from mount Gilead.

2 Thy teeth are like a flock of sheep that are even shorn, which came up from the washing; whereof every one bare twins, and none is barren among them.

3 Thy lips are like a thread of scarlet, and thy speech is comely: thy temples are like a piece of a pomegranate within thy locks.

4 Thy neck is like the tower of David builded for an armoury, whereon there hang a thousand bucklers, all shields of mighty men.

5 Thy two breasts are like two young roes that are twins, which feed among the lilies.

6 Until the day break, and the shadows flee away, I will get me to the mountain of myrrh, and to the hill of frankincense.

7 Thou art all fair, my love; there is no spot in thee.

8 Come with me from Lebanon, my spouse, with me from Lebanon: look from the top of Amana, from the top of Shenir and Hermon, from the lions' dens, from the mountains of the leopards.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—In this world the clearest days of intimate fellowship with Christ are suddenly turned into nights of desertion, trouble, ignorance, and sloth. But precious and dear is Jesus to lively saints; nothing can content them without his presence and favour; and they count no labour nor suffering too hard to obtain it. Great is his love to them. He is loth to contend long with his people, lest their spirits should fail before him. And an hour, a minute, of his presence richly rewards all their pains and sorrows in seeking for it. Promising is the appearance, when the word preached pointedly touches the heart and consciences of hearers, and leads them to careful inquiries concerning Christ. And remarkable fellowship with him effectually animates to an earnest wrestling in behalf of the church and public interests of religion. What extensive honour believers procure to themselves from all around them, by an earnest care to maintain fellowship with him, and to follow him in a gracious, upright, and heavenly conversation! But, if distinguished saints be so admirable and lovely, how much more is Christ himself and his covenant! With great care ought we to labour to have the heart and eyes of all around us fixed on him: for great indeed is his love, that he should take pleasure in espousing to himself poor, guilty, polluted, diseased, infamous, and mischievous, sinners of mankind.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1—5, 7. Behold how glorious is the state of my church, decked with ordinances, officers, and saints! How comely is she when ministers, her lights or eyes, are intelligent, modest, humble, and holy, walking in all godly simplicity!—when converts, rooted in me as their Head, grow up in grace and perfect holiness in the fear of the Lord—feeding on the rich pastures of my word, and surrendering themselves acceptable sacrifices to God!—How comely is she when ministers, who prepare spiritual nourishment for others, are sound in their doctrine, holy in their conversation, harmonious and meek in their behaviour, and active and successful in winning souls to me!—when their ministrations mark the soundness of their hearts!—when their dwelling on redemption through my blood, as their principal theme, renders themselves and their ministrations lively and pleasant; and when, with modesty, singleness, prudence, and order, they, and other rulers, govern the flocks committed to their care!—when they, as superior to others in station, and as means of connecting them with Christ, and of conveying their spiritual nourishment, are upright, steady, and strong, and do watch over the church, and actively improve the whole armour of God for her defence and honour! and when her various oracles, ordinances, and officers, are remarkably useful for supplying the souls of men with the nourishing milk of God's word! But especially how fair and comely are believers, with respect to their personal capacity, when justified in my righteousness and adorned with every spiritual grace!—when their spiritual knowledge, faith, and affection, are sincere, single, humble, and seasonably discovered!—when their conversation in thought, word, and deed, notwithstanding many imperfections, is orderly and pure, manifesting a heart nourished in the pastures of the gospel!—when, by repeated acts of faith and meditation, they improve their spiritual provision; and their zeal for God is uniform, pure, and moderate, animating them to a fruitfulness in good works, and winning others to me!—when their prayers and converse are profitable and pleasant, discovering the soundness of their heart, animated and furnished by, and accepted through, my blood!—

9 Thou hast ravished my heart, my sister, my spouse; thou hast ravished my heart with one of thine eyes, with one chain of thy neck.

10 How fair is thy love, my sister, my spouse! how much better is thy love than wine! and the smell of thine ointments than all spices!

11 Thy lips, O my spouse, drop as the honeycomb: honey and milk are under thy tongue; and the smell of thy garments is like the smell of Lebanon.

12 A garden enclosed is my sister, my spouse; a spring shut up, a fountain sealed.

13 Thy plants are an orchard of pomegranates, with pleasant fruits; camphire, with spikenard.

14 Spikenard and saffron; calamus and cinnamon, with all trees of frankincense; myrrh and aloes, with all the chief spices:

15 A fountain of gardens, a well of living waters, and streams from Lebanon.

16 Awake, O north wind; and come, thou south; blow upon my garden, that the spices thereof may flow out. Let my beloved come into his garden, and eat his pleasant fruits.

CHAP. V.

Here we have (1) Jesus Christ's kind visit to his people, in answer to their prayer; 1. (2) Their account of his kindness and their own foolish slighting of his visit, with their distress for want of, and labour to regain, his sensible presence; 2—8. (3) The daughters of Jerusalem, affected with their concern, inquire concerning the perfections of Jesus their beloved, and have an answer returned in ten particulars, and a general summary of his excellency; 9—16.

I AM come into my garden, my sister, my spouse: I have gathered when there is much secret and holy blushing on account of remaining defects!—when their faith, which unites them to me, furnishes with, and effectually improves the whole armour of God for their defence from spiritual enemies, as the worthies of God formerly experienced;—when feeding upon the doctrine of the prophets and apostles, they, to my inexpressible pleasure, abound in faith and love towards me, and in care to instruct and edify others!—How completely perfect are they in their justification, in the extent of their sanctification, and in my purpose and favourable acceptance! 6, 8. Till not only the gospel dispensation, but even the glorious millennium, and the resurrection to everlasting life, come, I, according to thy request, (chap. ii. 17.) will continue to bestow my especial presence and influence in my church, which is rendered so delightful by my ordinances, and by the precious graces, prayers, and praises, of my people.—Let, therefore, every one, spiritually espoused to me, there attend, and hold intimate fellowship with me, setting their affections on things above; forsaking the most excellent creature-satisfactions for my sake, shunning the intimacy of carnal, covetous, and violent men, and even the fellowship of superstitious, erroneous, and persecuting churches. 9, 10. O redeemed soul, partaker of the same human nature with me, begotten and adopted of my Father, and spiritually betrothed to my person, how, even with the weakest acts of thy faith, and the smallest degree of sincere grace and holy obedience, hast thou claimed, attracted, encouraged, and coupled, my heart to thee! How incomparably acceptable and delightful is thy love, and that sweet fragrant flowing from thy manifold graces! 11. How delightful thy prayers and praise! Thy instructing, reproving, and comforting, discourse marks what sweet and nourishing truths and experiences are lodged in thy heart, and how delightful and attractive is thy holy and benevolent conversation! 12—14. My church is a delightful garden, separated from the world, set apart to the service of God, digged by gospel ministrations and influences, and especially protected by my providence, by the rules of order contained in my word, and a medicinal spring of gospel truth, hid from the view of a carnal world! And, when purged of scandalous persons, her converts, planted in the new covenant, do flourish, more fragrant, delightful, precious, and useful, more numerous and different in circumstances, than all the fruit-bearing trees and spices of an orchard!—Yea every particular believer is a garden set apart in beautiful order, and with infinite care and labour, to the service of God, and has in him the Holy Ghost, and a principle of grace, as a well of water springing up into everlasting life: and in the most pleasant manner are their various gifts and graces exercised to my honour, their own advantage, and the edification of others.

BELIEVERS. 15. Blessed Jesus! great source and bestower of all life here or hereafter, it is to thy influences alone that we owe all our comeliness, fragrant, and fruitfulness! let them run more abundantly into our hearts, that by the exercise of thy grace, we may be rendered more useful to water and refresh others around! 16. And since we are thine, as well as under our own care, prevent every thing tending to mar our fruitfulness; and let the holy Ghost, in his convincing and sin-mortifying, as well as in his comforting, influences, stir up and quicken our hearts to a lively exercise of those gifts and graces with which we are endowed. And do thou, O Jesus, manifest thy presence in thine ordinances, and accept of, and delight in, those graces and good works which are wrought in us by thyself!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—What infinite love Jesus bears to his people!
He puts upon them his own comeliness, and wishes them to take the comfort of it.
Earnest is his desire of their company; and soon shall they be with him where he is, to share his happiness and honour! Never, but when he went to suffer, did he say, Let these go their way. They are a good savour of Christ to all around or above them. And, when they rightly behold their own comeliness in him, it effectually humbles them, and makes them ascribe all the glory to him, and to cry for more abundant supplies of his sanctifying influences. Surely it is the greatest honour for them, as his peculiar property, to keep themselves entirely for his service.

CHAP. V. CHRIST. Ver. 1. At thy request, believing soul, I vouchsafe my special presence in my church and ordinances. I have, with pleasure, observed the lively preaching and cordial application of my precious and soul-nourishing truths. I have particularly observed and accepted the graces and services of my people. Let them also feast abundantly on my gospel provision, and take the comfort of their graces and works, as evidences of their election and eternal salvation.

BELIEVERS. 2. Alas! the dull and lukewarm frame in which Jesus often finds his churches when he comes to bless them! And how slothful and secure my inward corruption had made me, even while my renewed part endeavoured to hear and entertain him! Amidst much deadness and unconcern, I felt some impressions made upon my heart by his word, Spirit, and rod; while he, in the kindest manner, besought me to exercise my faith and love, and to remove whatever hindered his most intimate approaches, as he was closely related to me, had suffered much for me and from me, had waited long for my opening to him, and was much grieved with my neglect of him! 3. In the most pitiful manner I evaded compliance with his kind invitations, as a thing I was not at present fitted for, and which I could not do without crossing my corrupt inclinations and troubling my flesh. 4. By the immediate power of his Spirit, Jesus touched my heart through his word, and kindly stirred up my affections to a concern for my former slighting of him, and to an earnest desire after his presence. 5. Repenting of my former stupidity and indifference, and actuated by his influence, I prepared myself to entertain his visit: my faith, and other graces, put themselves into actual and vigorous motion, for the removal of every thing that tended to hinder his access to my soul. 6. Notwithstanding my vigorous actings of faith upon his self-giving promises, and panting desires after him, I did not obtain any sensible manifestations of his presence. My heart was then filled with pain, grief, and shame at the remembrance of his slighted invitation. I carefully attended his ordinances, public and private, in order to seek and find him; but met with nothing but frowns and disappointments. 7. When ministers touched my case in their discourses, they but razed my hopes and increased my anguish:
by their harsh reproofs, calumnies, and persecutions, they wounded and distressed my soul. They, whose duty it is to prevent every thing tending to disturb the peace and edification of the church, questioned the truth of my profession, and charged me with the vilest hypocrisy. 8. O, my fellow professors, I beg and charge you, that if this my Lord Jesus allow you any sensible intimacy with himself, you will represent to him the distressed case of my soul, and entreat him speedily to visit me, who earnestly desire him, and am at the point of death for want of his sensible presence.

DAUGHTERS. 9. Distressed, but precious and lovely, saint, what means this so solemn charge? What singular and transcendent excellency is in this Jesus, the beloved of thy heart?

BELIEVERS. 10. Boundless and incomparable is his excellency! A glorious Godhead and a suffering manhood, a holiness of heart and life and a bloody suffering, a glorious exaltation and a humbled debasement, mercy towards his people and vengeance against his enemies, concur to render him in every respect a miracle of beauty! He is infinitely more dignified, kind, rich, and glorious, than all the ten thousands of created beings in heaven and in earth; and, as the great standard-bearer, he goes forth, attended by angels and saints conquering and to conquer. 11. In his divine nature, and as he is the Head of government and influence to his people, he is pure, precious, substantial, glorious, useful, enriching, and unchangeable! Lasting and immutable is his comeliness.
Beautiful, mysterious, and majestic, are his well connected purposes and providences! And ever fresh and comely those societies of saints which are rooted and grounded in him! 12. Pure, penetrating, pleasant, beautiful, and comforting, is his all-seeing knowledge, and his tender pity and care! 13. Delightful the manifestations of his love, glory, and grace! His words are gracious and comfortable, continually refreshing, quickening, and supporting, to the souls of his people! 14. Perfect, glorious, and lasting, and all managed with infinite skill, are his munificent liberality, almighty power, and marvellous works, particularly of grace! Sincere, lasting, and wisely ordered, for the good of his people, are his secret purposes of love, his tender bowels of mercy and compassion, and his sympathizing intercession; 15. Sufficient and wisely exerted are his strength and power to bear or act in the work of our redemption! Skillfully contrived, and firmly fixed on the precious and durable foundations of his grace, are the dispensations of his providence! Elevated, stately, and pleasant, always verdant and refreshing, is the full manifestation of him in all his excellencies! 16. Pleasant is his word, and the sensible communications of his love! Nay, all that is, in his person, offices, relations, names, blessings, and ordinances, is inexpressibly desirable; and nothing is truly desirable but as in or connected with him. This, this, O fellow professors, is my spiritual husband, and my constant and sympathizing lover and benefactor.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Quickly, when entreated, does Jesus come to comfort the hearts and supply the wants of his people; and brings with him for their refreshment the fulness of promises, grace, and joy. Enlarged appetites, after spiritual blessings, are necessary for gospel hearers. But it is strange that even saints should refuse his gracious visits, for which they had earnestly prayed and patiently waited. Hard is the heart that remains untouched by his affectionate calls; base is the temper which renders men careless about him and his influences; and shameful and frivolous are the best excuses which can be made for evading his visits. It is indeed impossible for saints wholly to exclude 7 As a piece of a pomegranate are thy temples within thy locks.

8 There are threescore queens, and fourscore concubines, and virgins without number.

9 My dove, my undefiled, is but one; she is the only one of her mother, she is the choice one of her that bare her: the daughters saw her, and blessed her; yea, the queens and the concubines, and they praised her.

10 ¶ Who is she that looketh forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners?

11 I went down into the garden of nuts, to see the fruits of the valley, and to see whether the vine flourished, and the pomegranates budded.

12 * Or ever I was aware, my soul made me like the chariots of Amminadib.

13 Return, return, O Shulamite; return, return, that we may look upon thee. What will ye see in the Shulamite? as it were the company of two armies.

CHAP. VII.

Here (1) Jesus further describes the beauty of his church and people in ten particular instances; and declares his love to them, and delight in their conversation; 1-9. (3) They express their transcendent delight in him, and desire of intimate fellowship with him; 10-13.

HOW beautiful are thy feet with shoes, O prince's daughter! the him from their heart; and they procure for themselves great grief and toil by neglecting to entertain his offered kindness. But it is base for ministers to act imprudently and untenderly toward those whose spirits the Lord has wounded. More dutiful and profitable is it to strive in prayers for one another. And how pleasant when, even under desertion, saints maintain the most exalted views of Jesus' person and fulness, and the most assured faith of their interest in them; and when even curious enquiries concerning him draw forth the warmest commendations of him!

CHAP. VI. DAUGHTERS. Ver. 1. Precious saint, tell us where we may hope to find this thy beloved Saviour, that we may, after thy example, and in holy fellowship with thee, more heartily than ever seek him.

BELIEVERS. 2. Jesus my beloved is always present in his church, and is especially conversant in those assemblies where the graces of his people are most eminent; taking pleasure in, and increasing, their grace and comforts, and delighting to convert, and afterwards glorify, his whole elect body. 3. And, notwithstanding all my miscarriages, the mutual relation between him and me is as full and firm as ever; and he still delights himself in the assemblies of his people.

CHRIST. 4. In respect of oracles, ordinances, officers, and order, thou, my church, art extremely beautiful in my view, and terrible to enemies around. And, in respect to imputed righteousness, implanted grace, and holy conversation, thou, O particular believer, art transcendently comely, and thy assured faith and fervent prayer overcome every opponent. 5-7. Such was my delight in the vigorous actings of thy faith and love, and in thy importunate prayers, that I could no longer absent myself: and, being returned, I assure thee, for thy comfort, that thy holy thoughts and gracious exercise, thy unfeigned and operative faith, thy spiritual meditations, thy regular and active zeal, thy humility and self-abasement, together with all thy privileges, and every thing belonging to my church, are as precious and comely as ever. 8, 9. Whatever beauties there be in earthly courts, there are none comparable to a true saint. In the one true church, nay, in one heavenly-begotten soul, there is more real comeliness than in all the world beside: all those of principal esteem, in either church or state, are disposed to express their approbation of it. 10. Gradual was the increasing light and glory of the church in her patriarchal, ceremonial, and gospel periods. Gradual and diversified is the growing comeliness and glory of every believer turned from darkness to light: thy shine as the morning light, going on to perfection. In their borrowed and imperfect holiness they shew fair as the moon; and in their imputed righteousness shine clear as the meridian sun; and, armed with the whole armour of God, they are terrible to every opposer.

11. Such is my regard to my church, that, even while absent from thee, I was occupied among my outwardly mean, but inwardly glorious and hidden, ones, carefully observing if her fruitfulness in saints and in good works was answerable to her new covenant soil, and how her various members did thrive in the advanced progress or weak beginnings of grace. 12. And thy vigorous actings of faith and fervent supplications took such hold of me, that I was constrained, as in a surprising transport of affection, speedily to return to thee in loving kindness and in tender mercies. 13. Notwithstanding every joints of thy thighs are like jewels, the work of the hands of a cunning workman.

2 Thy navel is like a round goblet which wanteth not liquor: thy belly is like an heap of wheat set about with lilies.

3 Thy two breasts are like two young roes that are twins.

4 Thy neck is as a tower of ivory; thine eyes like the fish pools in Heshbon, by the gate of Bath-rabbim; thy nose is as the tower of Lebanon which looketh toward Damascus.

5 Thine head upon thee is like Carmel, and the hair of thine head like purple; the King is held in the galleries.

6 How fair and how pleasant art thou, O love, for delights!

7 This thy stature is like to a palm tree, and thy breasts to clusters of grapes.

8 I said, I will go up to the palm tree, I will take hold of the boughs thereof: now also thy breasts shall be as clusters of the vine, and the smell of thy nose like apples;

9 And the roof of thy mouth like the best wine for my beloved, that goeth down sweetly, causing the lips of those that are asleep to speak.

10 ¶ I am my beloved's, and his desire is toward me.

11 Come, my beloved, let us go forth into the field; let us lodge in the villages.

12 Let us get up early to the vineyards; let us see if the vine flourish, whether the tender grape appear, and former offence, return therefore, my perfect and peaceable one by faith and repentance, to thy wonted familiarity with me, that I and my father and blessed Spirit, and ministering angels, may with pleasure and satisfaction behold thy beauties. However mean and worthless thou art in thine own eyes, yet, how pleasant is it for me to behold Jews and Gentiles united into one society of saints, and to contemplate heavenly graces and holy duties withstanding and conquering the remains of inward corruptions, temptations, and fears.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—The believer's hearty commendations of Christ are effectual, when blessed by him, to make others inquire after him. And it is prudent for deserted saints frequently and boldly to recognize the mutual relation betwixt Christ and their soul. Great is the mercy that, though he often for a time deserts a particular favourite, he never totally forsakes his church and ordinances, and often does much good while it is little perceived. How sweet, and often surprising, are the returns of his sensible presence! For unchangeable is his esteem of, love to, desire after, and delight in, his people, amidst all the changes of his countenance and providence. Engaging, honourable, and awful, are the beauties of holiness, when they shine in churches, ordinances, and saints. And unbounded is Jesus' care about his people, and to have them fruitful in graces and good works. He takes delight to return them his sensible favours, and to see them cordially united among themselves, and valiantly contending with their spiritual enemies.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1-6. Thou, O my visible church, art adorned with ministers shod with the animating preparations of the gospel of peace:—ministers fixed in the most noted station, and contributing to thy inward health and fruitfulness;—strong in grace, and confirmed in the truth, and set for the defence of the gospel;—intelligent in the mystery of Christ, and sagaciously watching against thy spiritual foes. Thou art also adorned with manifold oracles and ordinances, for the spread of my honour, the communication of my influences, and edification of my people.—How beautiful, O heaven-born soul, are thy affections and conversation, through the powerful influence of gospel truth! Glorious are thy inward principles of holiness, and first motions to good, wrought in thee by the Holy Ghost! Thy gracious desires are supplied with nourishing influences from above! Plentiful provision, and fruitfulness in holiness, is obtained by the digesting of my word in a particular application of it! Living on the breasts of inspired oracles and instituted ordinances, how glorious and attracting are the exercises of thy faith and love, and of thy holy endeavours to edify others! A sure and precious defence is thy unfeigned and vigorous faith! Clear and distinct is thy spiritual understanding in the matters of God! Wonderful is thy gracious sagacity in discovering truth, and discerning between good and evil: and attended with courage and watchfulness, especially against the most near, constant, and malicious, enemies! Grounded in my blood, and effectually productive of good works, is thy towering hope supported by thy faith! And acceptable in me is even the very smallest part of thy holy principles

Here the affections of Jesus and his people to one another seem, as it were, wound up to the highest pitch. (1) They continue their importunate cries for nearness to and intimate fellowship with him; 1-3. (2) They solemnly charge their fellow professors to beware of any thing tending to mar that intimacy; and are admired for their dependence on him; 4, 5. (3) Influenced by his Spirit, they importunately request a confirmation of their union with him by some remarkable and ravishing tokens of his love; 5-7. (4) They intercede for their brethren of mankind, particularly for the conversion of the Gentiles, and receive a comfortable promise on their behalf; 8, 9. (5) Rejoicing in their interest in Jesus and his favour, they acknowledge themselves his tenants and debtors for their church state, renewed heart, and other mercies they enjoy; 10-12. (6) At parting Jesus charges them to correspond with him by perseverance in prayer; and they beg that he would hasten his gracious, and especially his everlasting, return; 13, 14.

His left hand should be under my head, and his right hand should embrace me.

I charge you, O daughters of Jerusalem, that ye stir not up nor awake my love until he please.

Who is this that cometh up from the wilderness, leaning upon her beloved? I raised thee up under the ap-or practices! 7. So affecting is thy beauty, bestowed by myself, that I cannot but regard thy fellowship, and take pleasure to look on, and abundantly delight in, thee.—When the whole of thy graces and holy conversation is considered in connection, how comely, flourishing, victorious, and heavenly is the appearance! And how cordial and cheering to me are thy affection and kind entertainment! 8, 9. In my purpose I resolved, and in my promise I have engaged to manifest myself to my church, in converting nominal members, and vouchsafing my kindest fellowship to real saints.—This shall qualify thee to edify others, and give pleasure and satisfaction to me. Revived, refreshed, and comforted, by my influences, thy gracious discourse shall quicken and awaken others to taste of my love, and to open their mouths in my praise.

BELIEVERS. 10. O the inexpressible comfort which I enjoy in the faith of Jesus' relations, and in the intimations of his love, to my soul! 11, 12. Beloved Redeemer and Husband, let me, retiring from the hurry and cares of this present world, have the most ravishing and permanent fellowship with thee! Let me, without delay, not only have a deep concern for the spiritual prosperity of the church, but have an intimate and distinct knowledge of the condition of my own heart, and see whether my graces be weak or strong, flourishing or languishing. In this our retired communion will I discover the sincerity and fervency of my affection to thee. 13. While the precious, savoury, and medicinal, truths of the gospel are to many a savour of life unto life; and while lively believers all around me begin to flourish and spread their heavenly influence; the inward graces of my heart shew themselves in lively exercises; and every where new degrees of grace, and new acts of holiness, are added to the former: all which are, at thy command, set apart for promoting thine honour and service!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—Extensive are the beauties of holiness in the church and people of God, and fixed and uniform in the substantial thereof. What delight Jesus takes in the persons and services of his followers! He is ready to hold the most intimate fellowship with them. And with ravishing pleasure they glory in him, and in his love towards them. When inwardly warmed by his love, how ready are they to relinquish every thing else, in order to have familiar intercourse with him! And a deep concern for the church of Christ, and exact observation of our inward condition, effectually promotes our endeavours to honour him.

CHAP. VIII. BELIEVERS. Ver. 1. Blessed Redeemer, O that that happy period were come, in which thou shalt assume our nature, and be a member of our visible church, and, in consequence thereof, admit us to the most intimate fellowship with thee! Then, without regard to reproach or persecution, should I openly profess my reverence, subjection, and affection, to thee. 2. Instructed by thy Spirit, I should spread abroad the knowledge of thee in the extended gospel church, and all my gifts and graces should be employed to serve and glorify thee. 3. O the infinitely transporting, the intimate, the endearing, the strengthening and supporting, fellowship that I should enjoy with thee! Nay, already the believing views of it fill my soul with the joys of my Lord! 4. Let me therefore once more charge you, my fellow professors, to do every thing in your power to continue this my delightful communion with Jesus Christ, and do nothing to interrupt it.

DAUGHTERS. 5. What admirable person is this, who, forsaking all worldly ple tree: there thy mother brought thee forth; there she brought thee forth that bare thee.

Set me as a seal upon thine heart, as a seal upon thine arm: for love is strong as death; jealousy is cruel as the grave: the coals thereof are coals of fire, which hath a most vehement flame.

Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it: if a man would give all the substance of his house for love, it would utterly be contemned.

We have a little sister, and she hath no breasts: what shall we do for our sister in the day when she shall be spoken for?

If she be a wall, we will build upon her a palace of silver: and if she be a door, we will enclose her with boards of cedar.

I am a wall, and my breasts like towers: then was I in his eyes as one that found favour.

Solomon had a vineyard at Baalhamon; he let out the vineyard unto keepers; every one for the fruit thereof was to bring a thousand pieces of silver.

My vineyard, which is mine, is before me: thou, O Solomon, must have a thousand, and those that keep the fruit thereof two hundred.

Thou that dwellest in the gardens, the companions hearken to thy voice: cause me to hear it.

Make haste, my beloved, and be thou like a roe, or to a young hart, upon the mountains of spices.

things for Christ, and delivered from her distressed condition, mounts up heavenward, by faith resting on him to bear her up under every burden, and forward through every duty and difficulty?

BELIEVERS.—O Jesus, animated by thy own delightful influence, I have, by importunate prayers, obtained the most sensible manifestations of thy love; as others, in whose hearts thou art formed by faith, have also done. 6, 7. O let thy most endeared esteem, remembrance, and love of my soul, appear remarkably in all thy dispensations towards me: for so vehement and irresistible is my desire after intimate fellowship with thee, that nothing else can afford me satisfaction: no, not death and the grave are so dreadful to me as the fears of thy withdrawal! Kindled by thy love shed abroad in my heart, my love to thee melts all my inward powers, and burns up my corruptions. No affliction, temptation, desertion, or persecution, can extinguish or abate it. Would the richest on earth tempt me from thee, with all his wealth, nay, with ten thousand worlds, I would utterly condemn and abhor the proposal. 8. But, Lord, we have many fellow sinners, chosen in and redeemed by thee; particularly among the Gentiles, who enjoy no ordinances, and are yet unripe for their spiritual marriage, being destitute of faith and love; what shall we do to promote their conversion, when the offers of thy grace shall be made to them?

CHRIST. 9. When, according to my unchangeable purpose, they shall be united to me as their foundation, I and my Father and blessed Spirit will endow them with manifold gifts and graces, and render them, in their hearts and church state, a firm tower and beautiful temple and palace for God. When the door of access to me shall be opened to them in the gospel, and the door of their heart opened to receive me, we, notwithstanding their insignificance, weakness, troubles and temptations, will thoroughly beautify, strengthen, and protect, them.

BELIEVERS. 10. Indeed, blessed Redeemer, by thy infinite favour, I have been united to thee, and stand firm on thee as my foundation, and am come to some maturity and perfection in grace. 11. Thou, Lord Jesus, the infinitely wise and wealthy Prince of peace, hast purchased by thy blood, planted and purified by thy grace, sown with thy word, and protected and managed by thy providence, the large vineyard of thy church. This thou hast committed to the care of thy Gospel ministers, that they, by instructions, warnings, reproofs, and censures, might endeavour to their utmost to render the members fruitful in the works of righteousness, to thy praise and glory. 12. And, while the whole concerns of it are under thy special care, I have in charge the vineyard of my own heart, to watch over, defend, purge, and render, it fruitful in holy habits and exercises. Thou, Jesus, must have the principal honour of all that I am, have, or can attain to, and thy faithful ministers their subordinate share of my love and regard.

CHRIST. 13. Believing soul, who lovest and frequentest the assemblies of my people, and ordinances there dispensed, thy fellow members regard and listen to thy instructions and warnings for their edification. Let me, when withdrawn from thee, particularly in my bodily presence, often hear thy prayers and praises, and the publication of my gospel in the world.

BELIEVERS. 14. And O my blessed Husband and Saviour, not only maintain frequent and familiar intercourse with my soul, and with thy church on earth, in the instituted ordinances of thy worship, but hasten, hasten, thy glorious appearance without sin unto our salvation; when we shall be caught up to meet thee in the air, and shall, in one complete body, enter that happy, that eternal state, in which God shall be ALL IN ALL.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII. How kind, how marvellous, is it, that God's only begotten Son, the brightness of his glory, has, by his assumption of our nature, become our brother, and will for ever continue bone of our bone, and flesh of our flesh! And great is the mercy that to him the gathering of the Gentiles hath and shall be! It is pleasant to remember past experiences of his love in the assured expectations of others still more sweet! And delightful is the frame, ardent the desires, and fervent the prayers, when a soul is overwhelmed with the consolations of Christ! Importunate intercession for the spiritual welfare of others often produces remarkable fellowship with him. Extensive revenues of holy thoughts, words, and deeds, are due from every member of the church to Jesus Christ. And they who gave him his due will give his ministers theirs. But how strongly Christ and his people's hearts must be knit one to another! They cannot live but as it were in mutual intercourse. Soon will he come to take them to himself in glory; and, in the believing view of it, their waiting spirits cry, "Even so; come, Lord Jesus!"

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET ISAIAH*,

Who continued prophesying about sixty years with small success; chap. i. 1; and liii. 1. He was not the most ancient of the sixteen prophets; but his predictions, containing so much of Christ in them, are now placed first in order. The first thirty-nine chapters, except iv. xi. xii. xxvi. xxxii. xxxv. consist chiefly of divine indictments for sins and denunciations of judgments; the last twenty-seven of promises relative to the deliverance from Babylon and to the gospel church. In chap. i—iii. v. vii—ix. xxii. xxiv. xxvii. 7—11; xxviii—xxx. 1—17; xxxi. 1—3; lix. lxv. lxvi. is represented the ingratitude, unfruitfulness, idolatry, profaneness, female pride, oppression, drunkenness, perversion of judgment, &c. of the Hebrews; and the terrible punishments thereof, by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Romans, &c. are predicted. In chap. vii. 5—9; viii. 4, 21, 22; ix. 8—21; xvii. is predicted the ruin of the kingdom of Syria and Israel, and the calamities of the Philistines; xiv. 29—31: of the Moabites; xv. xvi. xxv. 10: of the Egyptians and Ethiopians; xviii—xx: of the Arabians; xxi. 13—17: of the Edomites; xxi. 11, 12; xxxiv: of the Tyrians; xxxiii: of the Assyrian army under Sennacherib: x. xiv. 24—27; xvii. 12—14; xxvii. 1; xxix. 5—8; xxx. 27—33; xxxi. 4—9; xxxiii: which is accomplished; xxxvi. xxxvii: of the Chaldeans; xiii. xiv. xxi. 1—10; xliii. 10; xlv. 1—4; xlvii. 1, 2, 11; xlvii. With those charges of guilt and predictions of judgment are intermingled many precious promises of the redemption and glorious kingdom of the Messiah; as i. 18, 25, 27; ii. 2—5; iv. 2—6; vii. 14; viii. 14; ix. 6, 7; xi. xii. xxv—xxviii. 16.—From xl. to the end, the deliverance of the Jews from Babylon, and the vanity of idols, are frequently hinted; but the incarnation, service, and glory, of the Messiah; the erection of the gospel church; the calling of the Gentiles; the rejection and future restoration of the Jews; are the principal subjects. And, on account of his clear and striking representations of Jesus Christ and his blessings, and of the gospel church, this prophet has been frequently styled a fifth Evangelist.

* In reading this and the subsequent prophets, great attention must be paid to rule X. of the Introduction, relative to the fulfilment of the same prophecy in different periods; and to the history of the nations, chap. IV. It is also to be observed, that as the prophecies of Isaiah comprehend almost all the events foretold by the other prophets, the parallel scriptures are far more fully collected on this than on any other prophetic book.

CHAP. I.

After the title of the book in ver. 1. we have (1) A solemn charge exhibited against the Jews for their ingratitude; 2, 3. universal corruption of heart and practice; 4, 6, 21, 22: incorrigibility; 5: perversion of judgment; 23. (2) A representation of the ruinous punishment they had brought upon themselves by their sin; 7—9: and of God's abhorrence of their ceremonial observances on account of their wickedness; 10—15. (3) Earnest calls to faith and repentance, mingled with promises of mercy if they complied, and threatenings of ruin if they refused; 16—20. (4) Promises of restoring to them their primitive purity and prosperity; 25—27. (5) Denunciations of inevitable ruin to those who would not be reformed by the deliverance from the Assyrians or from Babylon, or by the apostolic ministration of the gospel; 24, 28—31.

THE vision of Isaiah the son of Amoz, which he saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah.

2^d Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth: for the LORD hath spoken, "I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me."

3^d "The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib: but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider."

4th "Ah sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity, a seed of evil doers, children that are corrupters! they have forsaken the LORD, they have provoked the Holy One of Israel unto anger, they are gone away backward.

5th ¶ "Why should ye be stricken any more? ye will revolt more and more: the whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint."

6 From the sole of the foot even unto the head, there is no soundness in it; but wounds, and bruises, and putrifying sores: they have not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with ointment.

7th "Your country is desolate, your cities are burned with fire: your land, strangers devour it in your presence, and it is desolate, as overthrown by strangers."

8 And the daughter of Zion is left as a cottage in a vineyard, as a lodge in a garden of cucumbers, as a besieged city.

9 "Except the LORD of hosts had left unto us a very small remnant, we should have been as Sodom, and we should have been like unto Gomorrah."

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. I. Ver. 2. Ye heavens and earth, and all that dwell therein, with astonishment know and bear witness that I have marvellously raised up, privileged, preserved, protected, and advanced, this Jewish nation, and yet they have on occasions, and in ways, unnumbered, perfidiously violated my covenant and rebelled against my commandments. 3. Britishly ignorant and inconsiderate of every thing important, they scarcely pay me and my ordinances the regard that cattle do to their owners and their stables. 4. Alas! the whole nation is polluted with, and guilty of, the most shocking and multiplied abominations! Unlike to their pious ancestors, they tread in the wicked steps of their immediate parents: they wax worse and worse themselves, and labour to render their posterity still more and more wicked. Revolting more and more from the service and worship of JEHOVAH their God, they have provoked his fearful indignation against themselves. 5. Further punishment of their sin with temporal calamities would but render them still more outrageous and obstinate in wickedness. Already corruption hath infected all ranks, the rulers and the ruled, without any proper means used to prevent it; and misery and distress have overwhelmed the whole nation. 7—9. The Israelites, Syrians, Assyrians, or others, have already, by fire and sword, desolated the whole country of Judah; and Jerusalem alone remains, and that in great danger and distress: and, were it not from regard to a few righteous persons still left 10 ¶ Hear the word of the LORD, ye rulers of Sodom; give ear unto the law of our God, ye people of Gomorrah.

11 To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices unto me? saith the LORD: I am full of the burnt-offerings of rams, and the fat of fed beasts; and I delight not in the blood of bullocks, or of lambs, or of he goats.

12 When ye come to appear before me, who hath required this at your hand, to tread my courts?

13 Bring no more vain oblations: incense is an abomination unto me; the new moons and sabbaths, the calling of assemblies, I cannot away with; it is iniquity, even the solemn meeting.

14 Your new moons and your appointed feasts my soul hateth: they are a trouble unto me; I am weary to bear them.

15 And when ye spread forth your hands I will hide mine eyes from you: yea, when ye make many prayers I will not hear: your hands are full of blood.

16 ¶ Wash you, make you clean; put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes; cease to do evil;

17 Learn to do well; seek judgment, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow.

18 Come now, and let us reason together, saith the LORD: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool.

19 If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land:

20 But, if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured with the sword: for the mouth of the LORD hath spoken it.

21 ¶ How is the faithful city become an harlot! it was full of judgment; righteousness lodged in it, but now murderers.

22 Thy silver is become dross, thy wine mixed with water:

23 Thy princes are rebellious, and companions of thieves: every one loveth gifts, and followeth after rewards: they judge not the fatherless, neither doth the cause of the widow come unto them.

24 Therefore saith the LORD, the LORD of hosts, the mighty One of Israel, Ah, I will ease me of mine adversaries, and avenge me of mine enemies:

25 And I will turn my hand upon thee, and purely purge away thy dross, and take away all thy tin:

26 And I will restore thy judges as at the first, and thy counsellors as at the beginning: afterward thou shalt be called, The city of righteousness, the faithful city.

27 Zion shall be redeemed with judgment, and her converts with righteousness.

28 ¶ And the destruction of the transgressors and of the sinners shall be together, and they that forsake the LORD shall be consumed.

29 For they shall be ashamed of the oaks which ye have desired, and ye shall be confounded for the gardens that ye have chosen.

30 For ye shall be as an oak whose leaf fadeth, and as a garden that hath no water.

31 And the strong shall be as tow, and the maker of it as a spark, and they shall both burn together, and none shall quench them.

CHAP. II.

Begins a new sermon, which is continued in the two or three next chapters. Here is represented (1) The wide extension, glory, order, and peace, of the gospel church, and the duty of the Jews to enter into it; 1—5. (2) God's rejection of the Jews on account of their mingling themselves with heathens; their devilish magic and devinations; their trust in wealth and their idolatry; 6—9. (3) Predictions of judgments to bring down their pride, and render them ashamed of their idolatry and trust in man; 10—22.

his worship and Son. Their idols and groves, instead of preserving them, shall add to their confusion and misery.—Deprived of every delight and every enjoyment, they and their idols shall, in the most easy, irresistible, and remediless, manner be destroyed by the flaming vengeance of God, procured by their sins.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—Prophets and ministers must always declare that will of God which themselves have seen and believed: and God often much diversifies the opportunities which he gives them to declare it. In the most awful manner both heaven and earth attests the importance of what he speaks, and the equity of what he inflicts. How horrid is ingratitude, notwithstanding mercies innumerable received! And shocking is the ignorance and thoughtlessness which are sometimes found among professors of the truth. When heinous corruptions become universal, inveterate, and highly aggravated, what can be expected but ruinous judgments, in which every act and form of wickedness will be resented! But desperate is their case who are hardened by both mercies and judgments, and to whom God ceases to be a reproof. It is a great mercy for a nation, universally ripe for ruin, to have but a small remnant of eminent saints. Thrice happy are they who are of the number, and are by free grace preserved from going to hell with the multitude. The greatest enemies to the power of godliness are often the most rigid observers of the form; and men will flee to their most costly devotions for relief while they cleave to the sins which are the cause of their misery. But nothing is more abominable to God than indulged hypocrisy in our devotions. Indulged sin is so odious to him, that it renders all our prayers hateful in his sight.—What an extensive and laborious work is the real exercise of godliness! God, by the most gracious pardons, and the most full, though merciful rewards, encourages us to it: and graciously he warns men before he strikes them with his judgments. But, alas, nothing is too horrid for apostate professors to commit. And injustice to men, especially the poor, marks magistrates and others as the detested enemies of God, whom he can easily destroy. Reformation and redemption are wholly the work of God through the blood of his Son. In his high sovereignty he redeems a remnant, when the bulk are permitted to perish in their sin. And no ruin is more certain and dreadful than of those who obstinately refuse and apostatize from Christ.

among us, the whole nation had been utterly destroyed by God in the most wrathful manner. 10—15. Be therefore assured, saith God, ye detestable monsters of wickedness, that, while ye indulge yourselves in your sinful courses, all your ceremonial services, however solemn and expensive, and even your prayers, amounting to nothing more than legal dissimulation, are utterly abominable, and do but more and more provoke me to wrath. 16—20. By faith applying the word, the blood, the Spirit, of Jesus for your effectual purification from sin, repent of, and turn from, your vices; and conscientiously exercise yourselves in the contrary virtues of piety, equity and kindness.—In so doing you shall not only find your most grievous iniquities, the murder of the Messiah not excepted, fully and freely forgiven, but enjoy a safe and happy continuance in your country. But, if you remain obstinate in your evil ways, your destruction, by the sword of your enemies, is inevitable.—21—24. Jerusalem, once so famed for a faithful adherence to the laws and worship of God, and for the justice and integrity of its magistrates and people, has now apostatized to idolatry and every other form of wickedness, and is filled with murderers of innocents, saints, and prophets, and even of the Messiah. The practices of all ranks are quite corrupted, and their principles depraved, and even the oracles of God debased, by false glosses and human traditions. Magistrates, and other great men, are ringleaders in wickedness, conniving at, or protecting men in, dishonesty; giving sentence according as they are bribed; and suffering the poor, fatherless, and widows, who have nothing to give, to be oppressed without redress. Therefore shall JEHOVAH manifest his almighty power, which has been so long employed in acts of mercy to Israel, in utterly destroying these monsters, who desperately hate and oppose him, and are a burden to his Spirit. 25—27. Part of the nation shall, nevertheless, be preserved and remarkably reformed by his power and grace. Magistrates and ministers, as in the days of Joshua and David, shall be active, upright, and faithful, and the people famed for righteousness in their dealings with men, and for their adherence to the covenant and worship of their God. Thus, through God's righteous execution of judgment upon his enemies, and chiefly through the satisfactory righteousness of his Son, shall his true worshippers, Jews and Gentiles, be delivered from corruption and misery. 28—31. But dreadful and general shall be the ruin of obstinate sinners, who continue in their rebellion against God, and contempt of

THE word that Isaiah the son of Amoz saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem.

2 And it shall come to pass, in the last days, that the mountain of the LORD's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it.

3 And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem.

4 And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: and they shall beat their swords into plow shares, and their spears into pruning hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.

5 O house of Jacob, come ye, and let us walk in the light of the LORD.

6 ¶ Therefore thou hast forsaken thy people the house of Jacob, because they be replenished from the east, and are soothsayers like the Philistines, and they please themselves in the children of strangers.

7 Their land also is full of silver and gold, neither is there any end of their treasures; their land is also full of horses, neither is there any end of their chariots:

8 Their land also is full of idols; they worship the work of their own hands, that which their own fingers have made:

9 And the mean man boweth down, and the great man humbleth himself: therefore forgive them not.

10 ¶ Enter into the rock, and hide thee in the dust, for fear of the LORD, and for the glory of his majesty.

11 The lofty looks of man shall be humbled, and the haughtiness of men shall be bowed down, and the LORD alone shall be exalted in that day.

12 For the day of the LORD of hosts shall be upon every one that is proud and lofty, and upon every one that is lifted up; and he shall be brought low:

13 And upon all the cedars of Lebanon, that are high and lifted up; and upon all the oaks of Bashan,

14 And upon all the high mountains, and upon all the hills that are lifted up,

15 And upon every high tower, and upon every fenced wall,

16 And upon all the ships of Tarshish, and upon all pleasant pictures.

17 And the loftiness of man shall be bowed down, and the haughtiness of men shall be made low: and the LORD alone shall be exalted in that day.

18 And the idols he shall utterly abolish.

19 And they shall go into the holes of the rocks, and into the caves of the earth, for fear of the LORD, and for the glory of his majesty, when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth.

20 In that day a man shall cast his idols of silver, and his idols of gold, which they made, each one for himself to worship, to the moles and to the bats;

21 To go into the clefts of the rocks, and into the tops of the ragged rocks, for fear of the LORD, and for the glory of his majesty, when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth.

22 Cease ye from man, whose breath is in his nostrils: for wherein is he to be accounted of?

CHAP. III.

To enforce the admonition against trusting in men, we have here (1) God's judgments denounced against the Jews; viz. to deprive them of the proper supports of life and government; 1—3: and, amidst their confusions, to deny them any proper magistrates; 4—8, 12: to strip their fine women of their ornaments; 17—24: and to lay their land desolate by the sword; 25, 26. (2) The sinful causes of these judgments; viz. their defiance of God; 8: their impudence in sinning; 9: the villany of their clergy, tyranny of their rulers, and oppression of their great men; 12—15: and the pride and gaudy apparel of their women; 16—24. (3) A solemn warning that, in these calamitous times, it should at last go well or ill with men according to their good or bad conduct; 10, 11.

FOR, behold, the LORD, the LORD of hosts, doth take away from Jerusalem and from Judah the stay and the staff, the whole stay of bread, and the whole stay of water.

CHAP. II. Ver. 2—5. In the apostolic and millennial periods, the firmly established, and never to be changed, gospel church shall, in all kingdoms, be erected in the most visible manner; and multitudes shall, by the faith and profession of Jesus Christ, enter into it as members. They shall earnestly stir up one another to attend upon the ordinances, and learn and embrace the doctrines, of salvation, which began to be published at Jerusalem. And, by his conviction, conversion, and gracious government, Jesus Christ shall introduce spiritual peace and holy exercises, and even civil concord and virtuous industry, among the nations where murderous wars and idleness had long prevailed.—And may you, Jews, excited by your own preachers and by the Gentiles, cheerfully join yourselves, and partake of these blessed oracles, instructions, and comforts, of the Lord Jesus Christ. 6—9. Provoked by their confederacies, and by their mingling themselves with the Heathen; their imitation of the Chaldeans on the east, and Philistines on the west, in magic and divination; and by their insatiable heaping up of wealth, multiplication of horses and chariots, and of idols, and the worship thereof by all ranks; the Lord has rejected the Jewish nation, and will not suffer them to escape unpunished. 10—17. Notwithstanding all the possible efforts they may make to escape his indignation, the Lord shall glorify his own perfections in abasing them, however high in station, mighty in power, abundant in wealth and trade, or comely in appearance. 18—21. Convinced of the vanity of their idols, they shall renounce them, or, desperately flying from the judgments of God, shall cast them from them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—No dispensations of grace must be looked for after that which we at present enjoy. No oppression can hinder the flourishing of the church when the Lord rises up for her help: and no darkness nor error can hide her when Jesus manifests forth his glory. No remarkable fellowship with Christ must be expected but in the way of going upward. And it is comfortable that amidst the present corruptions and contentions in the Christian church, we may look backward, in remembrance of mighty things done by the Lord; and may look forward, in hope of the church's still greater enlargement, purity and peace. How delightful will it be when every one shall provoke his neighbour to learn the truths of Jesus, embrace his person, and serve him in the beauties of holiness!—But, alas, the guilt, the plagues which corrupt professors entail on themselves by intimacy with carnal and profane men, and even by their insatiable desire of that which is good in itself, or by inordinate dependance thereon! It is impossible, either by flight or resistance, to save either ourselves or our idols when God attempts to destroy. In order to glorify him pride must be debased and idols dethroned. And, to wean or tear our affections from earthly things, the earth itself, and its works, must be dissolved or burnt up. But, alas, what havock must be made before men can be affrighted from their idols! and what grace must be exerted before they penitently turn from them!

CHAP. III. Ver. 1—7. These miseries came upon them, by the Syrians and Israelites under Ahaz; by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Syro-grecians, and Romans. See Introduction, chap iv. section xviii. By the sieges, and other judgments, they shall be deprived of the common necessities of life, and all their men of ability, either for war, government, or trade, be cut off. Their governors shall be destitute of either sense or authority: every one shall behave in as unjust and insolent a manner as he pleases. And, when any person, that has any property left him, shall be solicited to take the charge of the state, in order to pre-war, the judge, and the prophet, and the prudent, and the ancient,

3 The captain of fifty, and *the honourable man, and the counsellor, and the cunning artificer, and the eloquent orator.

4 And I will give children to be their princes, and babes shall rule over them.

5 And the people shall be oppressed, every one by another, and every one by his neighbour: the child shall behave himself proudly against the ancient, and the base against the honourable.

6 When a man shall take hold of his brother, of the house of his father, saying, Thou hast clothing, be thou our ruler, and let this ruin be under thy hand:

7 In that day shall he swear, saying, I will not be an healer; for in my house is neither bread nor clothing: make me not a ruler of the people.

8 For Jerusalem is ruined, and Judah is fallen: because their tongue and their doings are against the LORD, to provoke the eyes of his glory.

9 The shew of their countenance doth witness against them; and they declare their sin as Sodom, they hide it not. Wo unto their soul, for they have rewarded evil unto themselves!

10 Say ye to the righteous, that it shall be well with him, for they shall eat the fruit of their doings.

11 Wo unto the wicked! it shall be ill with him; for the reward of his hands shall be given him.

12 As for my people, children are their oppressors, and women rule over them. O my people, they which lead thee cause thee to err, and destroy the way of thy paths.

13 The LORD standeth up to plead, and standeth to judge the people.

14 The LORD will enter into judgment with the ancients of his people, and the princes thereof: for ye have eaten up the vineyard; the spoil of the poor is in your houses.

15 What mean ye that ye beat my people to pieces, and grind the faces of the poor? saith the Lord God of hosts.

16 Moreover, the LORD saith, Because the daughters of Zion are haughty, and walk with stretched-forth necks, and wanton eyes, walking and mincing as they go, and making a tinkling with their feet;

17 Therefore the LORD will smite

vent or retrieve its ruin, he shall absolutely refuse. 8, 9. And, indeed, their insolent defiance of God and his Christ to his face, by their words and deeds, have rendered their case desperately ruinous. By their impudent practising, and even boasting, of the most horrid abominations, they have not only ruined their country, but entailed upon their souls everlasting damnation. 10, 11. For, as those who are righteous, by faith in Jesus Christ, shall have their conversation in him graciously rewarded with spiritual and eternal blessings, so those who are wicked in their heart and practice, shall, here and hereafter, be miserably punished, according to their deserts. 12—15. So miserable is the condition of these Jews, whom I anciently took into covenant relation to myself, and who still profess to be my people, that the most foolish and weak govern and oppress them; their teachers and rulers decoy and lead them into wickedness and ruin. Therefore the Lord arises to avenge his oppressed poor ones, and to punish them who have seized upon their property and cruelly abused and enslaved their persons.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—In the most diversified shapes can God punish sin, and show the emptiness of creatures. And sins unrepented of certainly prove ruinous at last. But nations are evidently near to the most fearful with a scab the crown of the head of the daughters of Zion, and the LORD will discover their secret parts.

18 In that day the LORD will take away the bravery of their tinkling ornaments about their feet, and their tcauls, and their round tires like the moon,

19 The chains, and the bracelets, and the mufflers,

20 The bonnets, and the tournaments of the legs, and the headbands, and the tablets, and the earrings,

21 The rings, and nose jewels,

22 The changeable suits of apparel, and the mantles, and the twimples, and the crisping pins,

23 The glasses, and the fine linen, and the thoods, and the vails.

24 And it shall come to pass, that instead of sweet smell there shall be stink; and instead of a girdle a rent; and instead of well-set hair, baldness; and instead of a stomacher a girding of sackcloth; and burning instead of beauty.

25 Thy men shall fall by the sword, and thy mighty in the war.

26 And her gates shall lament and mourn; and she, being desolate, shall sit upon the ground.

CHAP. IV.

Here (1) Is threatened that few men should be left, and women impudently ask them in sham marriages; 1. [This ought to have stood in the preceding chapter.] (2) Is promised plenty, peace, purity, righteousness, and safety, to the Jews, after the Assyrian invasion; Chaldean captivity, and present dispersion; and to the gospel church under Jesus Christ in the apostolic and millennial periods. [See Introduction, chap. iv. sect. 18, 19.]

AND in that day seven women shall take hold of one man, saying, We will eat our own bread and wear our own apparel: only let us be called by thy name, to take away our reproach.

2 In that day shall the branch of the LORD be beautiful and glorious, and the fruit of the earth shall be excellent and comely, for them that are escaped of Israel.

3 And it shall come to pass, that he that is left in Zion, and he that remaineth in Jerusalem, shall be called holy, even every one that is written among the living in Jerusalem:

4 When the LORD shall have washed away the filth of the daughters of Zion, and shall have purged the blood of Jerusalem from the midst thereof by the spirit of judgment, and by the spirit of burning.

destruction when all ranks and sexes are abandoned to, and impudent in, sinning; or when folly and weakness are at the helm of government; when popular tumults dare to interrupt the administration of justice; and when those, who ought to be distinguished blessings in church or state, have become the principal plagues.—What a remarkable difference God puts between the righteous and the wicked! And who can either withstand or escape the vengeance which he appoints to them! With great faithfulness and courage ought ministers therefore to give both saints and sinners their portion. At what expence of money, care, and time, do many, especially women, hang out before the world the infallible tokens of their emptiness, pride, and whorish inclinations! And God often avenges their folly, by infamous usage, shocking disgrace, abominable appearances, loathsome diseases, pinching poverty, and desolating judgments.

CHAP. VII.

In this discourse, to such as neither understood nor regarded it, observe (1) What occasioned it; the terrible fright into which king Ahaz and his subjects were thrown, by the powerful confederacy of the Syrians and Israelites against them; 1, 2. (2) The assurance which God by Isaiah gave him, that the plot of these enemies should be defeated, and themselves quickly ruined; 3—9, 16. (3) Contrary to Ahaz's will, the preservation of the kingdom of Judah, and family of David, is confirmed by the promised miraculous birth of the Messiah; 10—15. (4) A threatening of great distress and desolation to Ahaz and his kingdom by the Egyptians, and especially the Assyrians, in whom he trusted for help, and their Chaldean successors, if not also the Romans, notwithstanding their present escape; 17—25.

AND it came to pass, in the days of Ahaz the son of Jotham, the son of Uzziah, king of Judah, that Rezin the king of Syria, and Pekah the son of Remaliah, king of Israel, ^bwent up toward Jerusalem to war against it, but could not prevail against it.

2 And it was told the house of David, saying, Syria ^{*}is confederate with Ephraim. And his heart was ^emoved, and the heart of his people, as the trees of the wood are moved with the wind.

3 Then said the LORD unto Isaiah, Go forth now to meet Ahaz, thou, and Shear-jashub thy son, at the end of the conduit of the upper pool in the highway of the fuller's field;

4 And say unto him, ^bTake heed, and be quiet; fear not, ⁱneither be faint-hearted for the two tails of these ^ksmok-ing firebrands, for the fierce anger of Rezin with Syria, and of the son of Remaliah.

5 ¹Because Syria, Ephraim, and the son of Remaliah, have ^mtaken evil counsel against thee, saying,

6 Let us go up against Judah, and vex it, and let us make a breach therein for us, and set a king in the midst of it,
even the ^{||}son of Tabeal:

7 Thus saith the Lord God; ⁿIt shall not stand, neither shall it come to pass.

8 For ^othe head of Syria is Damascus, and the head of Damascus is Rezin; and within ^pthreescore and five years shall Ephraim be broken, ^{*}that it be not a people.

9 And it shall come to pass in that day, that every place shall be, where there were a thousand vines at [†]a thousand

9 And ^othe head of Ephraim is Samaria, and the head of Samaria is Re-maliah's son. [†]If ye will not believe, surely ye shall not be established.

10 ¶ Moreover, the LORD spake again unto Ahaz, saying,

11 ^aAsk thee a sign of the LORD thy God; ^{||}ask it either in the depth, or in the height above.

12 But Ahaz said, ⁱI will not ask, neither will ⁱI tempt the LORD.

13 And he said, Hear ye now, ^aO house of David, Is it a small thing for you to ^yweary men, but will ye ^zweary my God also?

14 ^{*}Therefore the LORD himself shall give you a sign; ^aBehold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and [†]shall call his name Immanuel.

15 ^bButter and honey shall he eat, [†]that ^che may know to refuse the evil and choose the good.

16 For before ^dthe child shall know to refuse the evil, and choose the good, the land that thou abhorrest shall be ^eforsaken of both her kings.

17 ¶ The LORD shall bring upon thee, and upon thy people, and upon thy father's house, days that have not come from the day that ^eEphraim departed from Judah; even the king of Assyria.

18 And it shall come to pass in that day, that the LORD shall hiss for the ^bfly that is in the uttermost part of the rivers of Egypt, and for the bee that is in the land of Assyria.

19 And they shall come, and shall rest all of them in the desolate valleys, and in the holes of the rocks, and upon all thorns, and upon all ^{||}bushes.

20 In the same day shall the LORD shave with a razor that is hired, namely, by them beyond the river, by the king of Assyria, the head, and the hair of the feet:
and it shall also consume the beard.*

21 And it shall come to pass in that day, that ^ka man shall nourish a young cow and two sheep:

22 And it shall come to pass, for the abundance of milk that they shall give, he shall eat butter: for ¹butter and honey shall every one eat that is left [†]in the land.

23 And it shall come to pass in that day, that every place shall be, where there were a thousand vines at [†]a thousand

giveness, conversion, repentance, or reformation. 13. Yet, notwithstanding the wretched case to which the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Syro-grecians, and Romans, shall reduce the nation, a remnant shall be preserved, who shall, in due time, be turned to the Lord. See Introduction, chap. iv. sect. xviii.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—O the infinite, the awful, the amiable, glories of our Immanuel! Thrice happy are his servants, who stand in his presence and triumph in his praise! And blessed be God that his glory has or shall fill the whole earth; and that faithful ministers and established angels vie with one another in his work.—Clear views of JEHOVAH's perfections effectually humble the very best of men, and make them to look on themselves, and all around them, as inexpressibly mean, loathsome, and guilty. And God by such deep humiliation prepares men for great honours! Thrice happy are those ministers whom God has prepared for their work by the most humbling views of his glory, and the most powerful applications of his heart-cleansing and quieting promises! Great is the importance of a call to the ministerial office. And, alas, infinite is the hazard of such as without this, for the sake of honour or gain, treacherously pretend to be the ambassadors of Christ! But how dreadful is it when the clearest wickedness and ruin of the hearers! Not the least of gospel ministrations can avail with sinners without the blessing of God, and the almighty operation of his Spirit. And, if spiritual judgments begin, we may look for temporal to follow.—But blessed be God that, for his own honour and the preservation of the world, he still preserves a remnant of real saints, who, though in winters of adversity seem dead, yet again revive as the corn, grow as the lily, and bring forth fruit to his glory.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 4. Rezin and Pekah, and their armies and kingdoms, are called tails of smoking firebrands, because, notwithstanding their present threatening to destroy all before them, they themselves were quickly to be extinguished in ruin. 7—9. The power of Syria and Israel shall never be advanced further than at present: and, by the twenty-second year of Manasseh, shall the Israelites be wholly carried captive. 15. And as a child partaking of a real manhood, he shall live on common fare. 16. Within two years shall the present kings of Syria and Israel be both cut off. 18. The Egyptians are represented as blood-sucking flies, and the Assyrians as stinging and all collecting bees, in allusion to the swarms of those insects in Egypt and Assyria. 18—25. Roused by the providence of God, and rewarded with spoil, they shall overspread the whole country, and cut off persons of all ranks, high and low, and render the once so fertile country a waste and uncultivated soil for briars and thorns, and the residence of robbers and wild beasts; few persons, or tame cattle, being left therein.

CHAP. VIII.

In this, and perhaps the four subsequent chapters, we have another alarming sermon. Here (1) By the birth, name, and speech, of the prophet's child, is certified the sudden destruction of the kingdoms of Syria and Israel by the Assyrians; 1—4: and the terrible distress of Judah; 5—8. (2) The Jews are assured that the confederacy of the Syrians and Israelites against them shall come to nought; 9—10: and that, if they feared and trusted in God alone, keeping themselves clear of every sinful league with heathens, they should be preserved in the general ruin; 11—15. (3) Isaiah, as typical of Christ, resolves, notwithstanding whatever he might suffer, that he, his children, and pupils, should, as patterns to others, cleave to and wait on God; 16—18: and warns his brethren never to consult wizards, or any thing but the word of God, for comfort under, or to know the end of, the terrible miseries that were coming upon them; 9—22.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—To what alarming terrors, what murderous and destructive invasions and wars, does sin expose men! And, while judgments ordinarily begin at the house of God, one guilty nation is made the scourge of another, and then quickly perishes itself! Severe, seasonable, free, and often unasked, are God's interposals for the relief and comfort of men. And if he be on our side we need not fear the most furious adversaries. No plot, no attempt, to frustrate his promises, can fail to issue in the sudden ruin of its authors. And the most proud and boastful are ordinarily the least successful in their enterprises. But faith in his promise is necessary to the establishment of our heart while they rage or reign. What kindness God shews to some wicked men for the sake of their ancestors, though with specious pretences regard they often refuse the favours of God, that they may depend on an arm of flesh! But with earnestness and boldness ought we to avouch the Lord for our God when others refuse their claim. Amidst the deepest distress, infallible are the securities, and strong the consolations, which are derived from Jesus Christ, and his connections with us. God easily finds instruments fitted to execute his vengeance upon obstinate sinners. And none are more readily chosen by him than those whom we have idolized and confided on in his stead. Alas! terrible is the vengeance that falls at last upon corrupt professors. Their barrenness under the means of grace, and fruitfulness in wickedness, curse, blast, and desolate, the very earth on which they live!

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 6, 7. May either relate to the Israelites, who despised the low weak family of David; or to those Jews, who despised their own governors, and, not content with their own weak armies, insisted upon calling in the Assyrian troops, and who rejected Christ.—The Assyrians are called the waters of the river, because they came from the river Euphrates in great multitudes, and wasted and destroyed the nations and countries whithersoever they came. 8. While but a few believers will understand, cleave to, and improve, God's revelations, I will, by faith, look for the fulfilment of them in the Lord's gracious return to, and favour towards, his people, and in the manifestation of his Son. And, lo, I and my son and disciples, as well as Jesus Christ and his people, are, and will be, amidst the admiration of some, and the derision of others, God's appointed pledges and tokens of his infallible fulfilment of his promises and threatenings. 19, 20. Should not we, in our distress, seek to our infinitely gracious, wise, and powerful God? Should we, who are living, apply for relief to dead idols or men, instead of the living God? No: God's word is the sole standard of our direction, instruction, and comfort; and if any direct otherwise it is owing to their being destitute of all saving knowledge.

their dwellings, furnished with hunger, and filled with anguish, till they curse their king for calling in or rebelling against the Assyrians; and their idols for disappointing their hopes, and the true God for inflicting his judgments. And, whether they look towards heaven or earth, they shall see nothing but perplexity and trouble, and thus be reduced to despair.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—Great is the importance of the oracles of God! Thrice worthy to be written in our heart!—But what changes, troubles, and wars, sin exposes men to in this world! Quickly they who disturbed and spoiled others are plagued in their turn. And who knows for what havoc the wealth, or the children we doat on, may be reserved. Men never refuse God's comforts, but they take up with ruinous plagues instead of them. Thrice happy is it, in days of distress, to be the property and people of the blessed Immanuel, and to have him the uplifter of our head when the waters of trouble swell to the neck! To have him on our side, and his promise for us, will effectually crush every attempt that hell and earth can make against us.—But an almighty power is necessary to make even the best avoid fashionable evils, and disregard the fear and help of men, and depend only upon Christ! Safety, holiness, and honour, are fully to be found in him, but in him alone! For, alas! fearful is their destruction who reject and are offended in him! Great is the mercy that in the worst of times he has so fixed his oracles in his church and in his people's hearts! And with pleasure may those, who have experienced the power thereof, wait for him, notwithstanding the most terrible troubles around and loads of reproach upon them. Though God hide himself, and afflict his church, he will never leave her. But, alas! great is the folly and guilt, and tremendous the ruin, of those who consult with devils, with lusts, with wicked men, into order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. "The zeal of the LORD of hosts will perform this.

8 ¶ The LORD sent a word into Jacob, and it hath lighted upon Israel.

9 And all the people shall know, even Ephraim and the inhabitants of Samaria, that say in the pride and stoutness of heart,

10 The bricks are fallen down, but we will build with hewn stones: the sycamores are cut down, but we will change them into cedars.

11 Therefore the LORD shall set up the adversaries of Rezin against him, and join his enemies together:

12 The Syrians before, and the Philistines behind; and they shall devour Israel with open mouth. For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

13 ¶ For the people turneth not unto him that smiteth them, neither do they seek the LORD of hosts.

14 Therefore the LORD will cut off from Israel head and tail, branch and rush, in one day.

15 The ancient and honourable, he is the head; and the prophet that teacheth lies, he is the tail.

16 For the leaders of this people cause them to err; and they that are led of them are destroyed.

17 Therefore the LORD shall have no joy in their young men, neither shall have mercy on their fatherless and widows: for every one is an hypocrite and an evil doer, and every mouth speaketh folly. For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

18 ¶ For wickedness burneth as the fire; it shall devour the briers and thorns, and shall kindle in the thickets of the forest, and they shall mount up like the lifting up of smoke.

19 Through the wrath of the LORD of hosts is the land darkened, and the people shall be as the fuel of the fire: no man shall spare his brother.

stead of Jesus, and his word, which is confirmed by his oath, and ratified in his blood!

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1—7. The distress of Judah, under the Assyrian ravages or the Chaldean captivity, shall not be so dismal and lasting as the captivity of the ten tribes. They shall quickly be surprised with a glorious deliverance, a vast increase, amazing consolations, and perfect freedom from bondage: for God, to pave the way for the incarnation and kingdom of his Son, shall, not by the common forms of war, but by a fearful plague, destroy their Assyrian or other enemies. And as God has debased Canaan by the repeated invasions of heathen troops, so he will glorify it by the instructive and comforting gospel ministrations of his Son and his apostles. Multitudes shall be converted to Christ, and great shall be their spiritual joy, freedom, and victories over their lusts, through the influence of the Holy Ghost: for the Son of God, born in our nature, and given to us, having all power given him in heaven and in earth, shall manifest himself in his wonderful excellencies, offices, and relations, in the erection and government of the gospel church; JEHOVAH's love to him and his people, and zeal for his own glory, shall secure the accomplishment of this. 8—10. The Lord has denounced a threatening against the Israelites, the accomplishment of which they shall quickly feel, who proudly boast that, though the Assyrians have demolished their houses, they will build better ones. 11, 12. The Lord shall stir up the Assyrians, together with the enlisted Syrians on the east, and the Philistines on the west, (who had lately assisted them against Judah) and they shall make an almost utter end of them; and, after all, the judgments of God shall be further inflicted upon them. 14. The Lord will destroy multitudes of all fanks. 18. Their outrageous wickedness has fitted them for ruin, and shall be punished in the destruction of both small and great. 19—21. Amidst

CHAP. X.

Contains threatenings of destruction (1) To the Hebrew rulers, who enacted unrighteous laws and oppressed the poor; 1—4. [This ought to have been joined to the preceding chapter.] (2) To the Assyrians, whom God used as his rod to correct the Jews, in which is observable, 1. God's providential commission to Sennacherib to ravage Judea; 5, 6: 2. His proud and insolent execution of it; 7—11, 13, 14: 3. A rebuke given to his haughtiness, and a threatening of his and his army's ruin; 12, 15—19: 4. Mercy promised to a remnant of the Jews, while multitudes should be destroyed by the Assyrians; 20—23: 5. The deliverance of the Jews, and destruction of the Assyrians, after they had distressed and alarmed the country, predicted; 24—34.

W O unto them that "decree unrighteous decrees, and * that write grievousness which they have prescribed;

2 "To turn aside the needy from judgment, and to take away the right from the poor of my people, that widows may be their prey, and that they may rob the fatherless!

3 "And what will ye do in the day of visitation, and in the desolation which shall come "from far? to whom will "ye flee for help? and where will ye leave your "glory?

4 "Without me they shall bow down under the prisoners, and they shall fall under the slain. "For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

5 ¶ "O Assyrian, "the rod of mine anger, † and the staff in their hand is mine indignation.

6 I "will send him against "an "hypo-critical nation, and against the people of my wrath will I "give him a charge to take the spoil, and to take the prey, and "to tread them down like the mire of the streets.

7 "Howbeit he meaneth not so, neither doth his heart think so; but it is in his heart to destroy, and cut off nations not a few.

8 "For he saith, Are not my princes altogether kings?

9 Is not "Calno as Carchemish? is not Hamath as Arpad? is not Samaria as Damascus?

10 As my hand hath "found the kingdoms of the idols, and whose graven images did excel them of Jerusalem and of Samaria:

11 "Shall I not, as I have done unto Samaria and her idols, so do to Jerusalem and her idols?

12 Wherefore it shall come to pass, that, "when the LORD hath performed his whole work upon mount Zion and on Jerusalem, "I will *punish the *fruit †of the stout heart of the king of Assyria, and the glory of his high looks.

13 For he saith, "By the strength of my hand I have done it, and by my wisdom; for I am prudent: and I have removed the bounds of the people, and have robbed their treasures, and I have put down the inhabitants †like a valiant man:

14 "And my hand hath found as a nest the riches of the people: and as one gathereth eggs that are left, have I gathered all the earth; and there was none that moved the wing, or opened the mouth, or peeped.

15 Shall "the ax boast itself against him that heweth therewith? or shall the saw magnify itself against him that shaketh it? "as if the rod should shake itself against them that lift it up, or as if the staff should lift up *itself, as if it were no wood.

16 "Therefore shall the LORD, the LORD of hosts, send among his fat ones leanness; and under his glory he shall kindle a burning like the burning of a fire.

17 And the light of Israel shall be for a fire, and his Holy One for a flame: and it shall burn and devour his thorns and his briers in one day;

18 "And shall consume the glory of his forest, and of his fruitful field, †both soul and body: and they shall be as when a standard-bearer fainteth.

19 And the rest of the trees of his forest shall be †few, that a child may write them.

20 ¶ And it shall come to pass in that day, that "the remnant of Israel, and such as are escaped of the house of Jacob, shall "no more again stay upon him that smote them; but "shall stay upon

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—God ordinarily tries men with lesser judgments before he inflicts such as are more severe. But it bodes well to a place when God sends to it the light of the gospel. And no load of adversity is so heavy, but Christ's presence can alleviate, and his power deliver from it. Thrice happy are those ignorant sinners whose minds he enlightens in the knowledge of himself! They may enjoy much solid and spiritual joy, freedom, and victory, even when they weep and lament. Unbounded are the excellencies, high the dignities, sweet the relations, and savoury the names, of that Immanuel whom God has freely given to us sinful men! O the infinite zeal of JEHOVAH to honour his Son, and to promote the welfare of his church! Rejoice in these things, my soul, and again rejoice. God shall make every opposer effectually to know the power of his wrath. But those ripen fast for ruin who continue proud and impenitent under great distress; and whom neither cords of love can draw, nor afflicting rods can drive, to their duty. Hypocrisy towards God, and villany towards men, ordinarily meet together. And none are in God's sight more abominable miscreants than unfaithful ministers. But general concurrence in wickedness issues in general calamities upon all ranks. And often they whom we make our partners in sin, or in whom we have trusted, are made the distinguished instruments of our ruin.

CHAP. X. Ver. 1—4. Dreadful shall be the punishment of you Hebrews, who make unjust laws, and pass unjust sentences, and who obstruct the course of justice, that such as are poor cannot have right done them. What will ye do when the Lord shall punish your nation by the desolating ravages of the Assyrians? Who will then assist you, or secure your power and wealth for you? Revolted from me, and deprived of my help, ye shall be rendered more miserable than others, who are taken captives or murdered. 5—11, 13—15. And dreadful shall be the ruin of the Assyrians, whom I have now appointed to punish you Jews for your hypocrisy and profaneness, by pillaging your country, and murdering and enslaving many of you. The Assyrian monarch, ignorant of my providence, merely intends to gratify his own lust of dominion; and boasts, that as he, by his own wisdom and bravery, has conquered many powerful nations already, and seized on their wealth, he will do the same to Jerusalem, let her God do what he can to resist him. Since therefore he, who is merely an instrument in my hand, thus insults me. 12, 16—19. Whenever I have sufficiently chastised my own people of Judah, I will punish his pride, and, by a fearful plague, cut off most of his huge army in one night, commander and commanded together. 20—23. Then, as well as at the deliverance from Babylon, and in the gospel periods, shall the Jews be weaned from their carnal dependencies on Assyrians, Egyptians, or others; and shall, by faith and repentance, return to their almighty God and Saviour. And, notwithstanding the vast numbers of Hebrews, a mere remnant shall survive the repeated desolations of the LORD, the Holy One of Israel, in truth.

21 The remnant shall return, even the remnant of Jacob, unto the mighty God.

22 For though thy people Israel be as the sand of the sea, yet a remnant of them shall return: the consumption decreed shall overflow with righteousness.

23 For the Lord God of hosts shall make a consumption, even determined, in the midst of all the land.

24 ¶ Therefore thus saith the Lord God of hosts, O my people that dwellest in Zion, be not afraid of the Assyrian: he shall smite thee with a rod, and shall lift up his staff against thee, after the manner of Egypt.

25 For yet a very little while, and the indignation shall cease, and mine anger in their destruction.

26 And the Lord of hosts shall stir up a scourge for him according to the slaughter of Midian at the rock of Oreb: and as his rod was upon the sea, so shall he lift it up, after the manner of Egypt.

27 And it shall come to pass in that day, that his burden shall be taken away from off thy shoulder, and his yoke from off thy neck, and the yoke shall be destroyed, because of the anointing.

28 ¶ He is come to Aiath, he is passed to Migron; at Michmash he hath laid up his carriages:

29 They are gone over the passage; they have taken up their lodging at Geba; Ramah is afraid; Gibeah of Saul is fled.

30 ¶ Lift up thy voice, O daughter of Gallim: cause it to be heard unto Laish, O poor Anathoth.

31 Madmenah is removed; the inhabitants of Gebim gather themselves to flee.

32 As yet shall he remain at Nob that day: he shall shake his hand against the mount of the daughter of Zion, the hill of Jerusalem.

33 Behold, the Lord, the Lord of hosts, shall lop the bough with terror: and the high ones of stature shall be hewn down, and the haughty shall be humbled.

34 And he shall cut down the thickets of the forests with iron, and Lebanon shall fall by a mighty one.

CHAP. XI.

Whether there be here any subordinate respect to the piety and prudence of Hezekiah and Zerubbabel, and the happy effects of their government, after the deliverance from the Assyrian ravage and Chaldean captivity, it is plain that Christ is the principal subject. Here is (1) His marvellous rise out of the reduced family of David; 1. (2) His qualification by the Holy Ghost for the great work of our redemption; 2, 3, 5. (3) The equity and faithfulness of his government; 3, 4. (4) The peacefulness and knowledge of his subjects; 6-9. (5) The accession of the Gentiles, and multitudes of Jews, to his church, notwithstanding all opposition; 10-16.

AND there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a branch shall grow out of his roots:

2 And the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, and the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge, and of the fear of the Lord;

3 And shall make him of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord; and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears:

4 But with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth: and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked.

5 And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins.

6 The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them.

7 And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together: and the lion shall eat straw like the ox.

8 And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice-den.

9 They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea.

10 ¶ And in that day there shall be their country, wherewith I have determined to punish them. 24-27. Fear not, therefore, ye inhabitants of Jerusalem, when the Assyrians shall ravage your land, and, like Pharaoh at the Red sea, threaten to swallow up your whole nation. Quickly will I remove the tokens of my anger from you, in destroying the Assyrian army by a fearful stroke, similar to that by which the Egyptians were destroyed in the Red sea, or the Midianites destroyed by Gideon. And in that day, from regard to my covenant of royalty with David, from regard to king Hezekiah, and chiefly from regard to the Messiah, will I completely deliver you from all subjection to them. 28-34. The Assyrians shall indeed, to the great terror of the nation, march up almost to the very walls of Jerusalem: but there will I, the almighty conductor of armies, cut off, by death, most of Sennacherib's captains and valiant troops, and reduce his forest-like multitude to a despicable remnant.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—Dreadful punishments, both in time and eternity, may those rulers expect, who make unrighteous laws, and who enrich themselves at the expense of the poor, the fatherless, and widows, whom God has taken into his peculiar protection! And fearful misery, and desperate anguish, await those who live without, or revolt from, God: or who hypocritically profess to know him, and yet in works deny him. In a marvellous manner God makes the most insolent and atheistical tyrants the tools of his providence; and even overrules their lusts, and mischievous purposes and conduct, in subservience to the glory of his perfections and the welfare of his church! Alas, of what base robbery and bloody murder do conquerors of this world make their boast! Their success makes them stupid, proud, and atheistical. But, when God has finished his work by them, easily he brings them down, and makes their vanity and boasting issue in shame and disappointment. Let us then greatly fear that God with whom is so terrible majesty; who, after he has killed the body, can cast both soul and body into hell fire; and who, in a moment can hurl the mightiest criminals into endless ruin! Alas, what multitudes are hurried into damnation by every national disaster! But God limits and regulates all the devastations which he makes in the earth, and causes the very providences, which ruin multitudes, to be the means of conversion and reformation to others.—And O how short-lived are his frowns against his people! How certain and sweet, and often sudden, their deliverances, through Jesus Christ and his anointing Spirit! Why then should they ever slavishly fear the fury of the oppressor? When their nights of distress are at the darkest they may cheerfully expect their deliverance to be near.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 1-5. In a most weak and debased appearance, the Messiah shall spring from the family of David, when it is reduced to a very low and withered condition. And the Holy Ghost, bestowed on him above measure, and for ever secured to him, shall qualify him with ineffable wisdom and knowledge, courage, and reverential awe of God: and he shall not judge of things according to external appearances; but with infinite exactness and equity shall he judge, and save, his own poor and afflicted people; and, according to the threatenings of his word, he shall easily destroy his wicked opposers: and equity and faithfulness shall at once fit him for, and honour, his ministrations. 6-9. Through the abundant spread of his gospel in the world, and the saving instructions of his Spirit, shall the most mischievous and untractable sinners of mankind be rendered meek, gentle, peaceful, and harmless. 10-16. And to him, as exhibited and offered in the gospel, shall multitudes of Gentiles come by faith, rea root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek; and ° his rest shall be glorious.

11 And it shall come to pass in that day, ¶ that the LORD shall set his hand again the second time, to recover the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from ^aAssyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from ^cCush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the islands of the sea.

12 And he ° shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah, from the four *corners of the earth.

13 ° The envy also of Ephraim shall depart, and the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off: Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim.

14 ° But they shall fly upon the shoulders of the Philistines toward the west; they shall spoil ¶ them of the east together: ¶ they shall lay their hand upon Edom and Moab; ¶ and the children of Ammon shall obey them.

15 And the LORD ° shall utterly destroy the ° tongue of the ° Egyptian sea; and with his mighty wind shall he shake his hand over the river, and shall smite it *in the seven streams, and make men go over ¶ dry-shod.

16 ° And there shall be an highway for the remnant of his people, which shall be left from Assyria; ° like as it was to Israel in the day that he came up out of the land of Egypt.

CHAP. XII.

Contains praise to God for his deliverance of the Jews from the Assyrians and the Chaldean captivity; but chiefly for the incarnation of the Messiah, and the erection and revival of the gospel church. Here is (1) Every particular believer praising God for what he is to him and has done for him, and for the provision which he has laid up in gospel promises and ordinances; 1—3. (2) Social praising of God in the church for the loftiness and suitableness of his new covenant characters, the excellency of his works, and his intimate fellowship with his people.

AND ° in that day thou shalt say, O LORD, I will praise thee: ° though thou wast angry with me, thine anger is turned away, and thou comfortedst me.

2 Behold, ° God is my salvation: I will trust, and not be afraid; for the LORD JEHOVAH is my strength and my song; he also is become my salvation.

penance, and daily worship: and his Spirit, by the effusion of his gifts, graces, and comforts, shall render his church eminently glorious. The Jews too, in the apostolic age, and especially in the millennium, when, by the power of God, they shall be brought back to their own land, shall, with united hearts, embrace the gospel, and assist in the conversion of the Gentiles to Christ, while opposers, heathens or antichristians, shall be destroyed, and every hindrance be removed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—Come, my soul, behold the Lamb of God! Behold how he assumes my nature; is conceived and born of the virgin, in the likeness of sinful flesh, and laid in the manger! Behold him filled with the Holy Ghost above measure, and qualified to save his people to the uttermost, and avenge himself of his enemies! Behold how his almighty grace transforms the most outrageous sinners into the most amiable saints! See his gospel rapidly spreading in the earth, and his power and glory revealed in the hearts of men. See him in prophecy conquering all opposition, removing every impediment, slaying the enmity, and making of Jews and Gentiles one new man, so making peace! Let me believe, let me plead, let me hope, let me rejoice, that he, who has begun to fulfil these great and precious promises, will perfect the same in his time.

3 Therefore with joy shall ye draw "water out of the wells of salvation.

4 And in that day shall ye say, ° Praise the LORD, *call upon his name, declare his doings among the people, make mention that ¶ his name is exalted.

5 Sing unto the LORD; for he hath done excellent things: ° this is known in all the earth.

6 ° Cry out and shout, thou † inhabitant of Zion: for great is the Holy One of Israel in the midst of thee.

CHAP. XIII.

Hitherto Isaiah's predictions generally related to the Hebrews. Now, to comfort such Jews as dreaded their potent neighbours, and to deter such as were fond of confederating with or imitating them, and perhaps to make the heathens desirous of searching the scriptures, the fate of the Chaldeans, Philistines, Moabites, Syrians, Ethiopians, Egyptians, Edomites, Arabians, Tyrians, and Assyrians, is foretold in this and the subsequent chapters. Babylon had scarcely been heard of by the Jews, but here is vengeance prepared for these future wasters of nations and oppressors of the people of God. (1) The Medo-persian armies, by which God intended to destroy the Chaldean empire, are, by his direction and influence, summoned, mustered, and marched, to their work; 1—5. (2) Their terrifying, confounding, cruel, murderous, and desolating, work is described; 6—18. (3) The debasement, utter ruin, and perpetual desolation, of Babylon, in which it would issue, is foretold; 19—22. [See Introduction, chap. iv. sect. xii.]

THE ° burden ° of Babylon, which Isaiah the son of Amoz did see.

2 ° Lift ye up a banner upon the high mountain, exalt the voice unto them, shake the hand, that they may ° go into the gates of the nobles.

3 I ° have commanded my * sanctified ones, I have also called my mighty ones for mine anger, even them that rejoice in my highness.

4 ° The noise of a multitude in the mountains, † like as of a great people; a tumultuous noise of the kingdoms of nations gathered together: ° the LORD of hosts mustereth the host of the battle.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—How far the glories and comforts of the New Testament church exceed those of the Old! The great forgiveness through Jesus' blood, inflames the heart, and tunes the lips to praise. Nor ought JEHOVAH's frowns to untune our soul. Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning. O the inexpressible pleasure of enjoying a reconciled God as our ALL and IN ALL! If he be ours, we may safely trust him with all our happiness, all our work, all our care. If he be our strength, no foe can hurt us. If he be our salvation, eternity is too short to speak his praise. Great is the happiness, temporal, spiritual, and eternal, which we may by faith draw from his perfections, his Christ, his promises, and ordinances! And thrice happy is the church when her members know him and his mighty works, and with one mind and one mouth glorify him!

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1. Prophecies of heavy, oppressive, and ruinous, judgments are often called burdens; and those denounced against Babylon also often relate to Antichrist. 2, 3. Assemble the forces to their respective standards.—Order them to present themselves to the noble captains of Media and Persia, and to break into the houses of the noble Chaldeans. I have stirred up, and, by my providence, separated and strengthened, these Medes and Persians to execute my judgments upon Babylon, and to perform the most gallant actions, which will illustrate my honour and greatness. 6, 9. Represents (1) How, in the destruction of Babylon, God would plead the cause of his people Israel, and grant them deliverance and honour. (2) In what disgrace, insult, and shame, the royal family of Babylon should be destroyed and extirpated for their pride; 4-21. (3) How complete the destruction of the Chal-deans and the desolation of Babylon should be; 22-23. (4) How, as an earnest of it, the Assyrian army and the Philistines should be destroyed, while the Jews under Hezekiah should be preserved and comforted; 24-32.

The hearts and hands of the mightiest fail them, when JEHOVAH appears against them in his vengeance; and all helpers desert when God devotes a nation to ruin.
Into what savage devils has sin transformed men, especially when they serve in conquering armies! But God is righteous in returning men's cruelties upon themselves. He has exhibited the most terrible marks of his indignation against sin on persons, cities, and nations. And the ruins of places, once famous and wicked, attest his infinite holiness, equity, foreknowledge, and faithfulness, and the divine authenticity of his word.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—Alas, how oppressive and destructive are the judgments of God upon guilty nations, or even the threatenings thereof! Nor is there any destruction on earth but the Lord is the manager of it. He sets apart the instruments of his wrath as well as those of his grace. He can raise mighty armies by his call or by his nod; and with alacrity they march, under his encouraging direction, to execute his judgments. How dreadful is it when the terrors of a guilty conscience are added to the heavy judgments of affliction!

also upon the mount of the congregation, in the sides of the north :

14 I will ascend above the heights of the clouds ; I will be like the Most High.

15 Yet thou shalt be brought down to hell, to the sides of the pit.

16 They that see thee shall narrowly look upon thee, and consider thee, saying, Is this the man that made the earth to tremble, that did shake kingdoms ;

17 That made the world as a wilderness, and destroyed the cities thereof ; that opened not the house of his prisoners ?

18 All the kings of the nations, even all of them lie in glory, every one in his own house.

19 But thou art cast out of thy grave like an abominable branch, and as the raiment of those that are slain, thrust through with a sword, that go down to the stones of the pit ; as a carcase trodden under feet.

20 Thou shalt not be joined with them in burial, because thou hast destroyed thy land, and slain thy people : the seed of evil doers shall never be renowned.

21 Prepare slaughter for his children for the iniquity of their fathers ; that they do not rise, nor possess the land, nor fill the face of the world with cities.

22 For I will rise up against them, saith the LORD of hosts, and cut off from Babylon the name, and remnant, and son, and nephew, saith the LORD.

23 I will also make it a possession for the bittern, and pools of water : and I will sweep it with the besom of destruction, saith the LORD of hosts.

24 ¶ The LORD of hosts hath sworn, saying, Surely as I have thought, so shall it come to pass ; and as I have purposed, so shall it stand :

25 That I will break the Assyrian in my land, and upon my mountains tread him under foot : then shall his yoke depart from off them, and his burden depart from off their shoulders.

26 This is the purpose that is purposed upon the whole earth : and this is the hand that is stretched out upon all the nations.

27 For the LORD of hosts hath purposed, and who shall disannul it ? and his hand is stretched out, and who shall turn it back ?

28 In the year that king Ahaz died was this burden.

29 ¶ Rejoice not thou, whole Palestina, because the rod of him that smote thee is broken : for out of the serpent's root shall come forth a cockatrice, and his fruit shall be a fiery flying serpent.

30 And the first-born of the poor shall feed, and the needy shall lie down in safety : and I will kill thy root with famine, and he shall slay thy remnant.

31 Howl, O gate ; cry, O city ; thou, whole Palestina, art dissolved : for there shall come from the north a smoke, and none shall be alone in his appointed times.

32 What shall one then answer the messengers of the nation ? That the LORD hath founded Zion, and the poor of his people shall trust in it.

This and the following chapter contain God's sentence of destruction against the Moabites, fulfilled by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, &c. [See Introduction, sect. vii-x.] Here is (1) Grievous lamentations by the Moabites, and by the prophet, over their condition ; 2-5, 8. (2) The great calamities which occasioned that desperate howling and anguish ; viz. the destruction of their city, murder of the inhabitants, barrenness of their fields, pillage of their substance, swelling of rivers with blood, and ravage by wild beasts ; 1, 6, 7, 9.

THE burden of Moab. Because in the night Ar of Moab is laid waste, and brought to silence ; because in the night Kir of Moab is laid waste, and brought to silence ;

2 He is gone up to Bajith, and to Dibon, the high places, to weep : Moab shall howl over Nebo, and over Medeba : on all their heads shall be baldness, and every beard cut off.

3 In their streets they shall gird themselves with sackcloth : on the tops of their houses, and in their streets, every one shall howl, weeping abundantly.

4 And Heshbon shall cry, and Elealeh : their voice shall be heard even unto Jahaz : therefore the armed soldiers of Moab shall cry out ; his life shall be grievous unto him.

5 My heart shall cry out for Moab ; his fugitives shall flee unto Zoar, an heifer of three years old : for by the mounting up of Luhith with weeping shall they go it up ; for in the way of Horonaim they shall raise up a cry of destruction.

6 For the waters of Nimrim shall be desolate : for the hay is withered away, the grass faileth, there is no green thing.

bition and boasts to raise an empire wide as the heavens, and to sit like JEHOUAH in his temple and heavenly mansions, thou shalt be debased into contempt, death, and damnation. 18, 19. Other kings lie interred in their stately tombs ; but thou shalt lie unburied as a rotten stick or polluted cloth which none cares to touch. 24-27. I have determined, in my unchangeable purpose, to destroy the Assyrian army before Jerusalem ; my almighty power shall, without fail, accomplish it. 29-31. O Philistines, though David and Uzziah, who smote you, be dead, and Ahaz his grandson weakened or dead, Hezekiah his son shall ravage your country. And, while God shall take care of the poorest Jews, they, and afterwards the Assyrians or Chaldeans, shall, with great unanimity and fury, destroy your nation. 32. And, by their ambassadors, the neighbouring nations shall be informed, that to the power and care of God alone the stability and safety of Jerusalem and the church, however poor, is entirely owing.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—How strangely nations rise and fall in the scales of God's providence ! But a pleasant aspect towards the saints have all the clouds of wrath that hang over their adversaries. And the overthrow of nations directs men to Jesus and his church. Great is the instability of earthly honours, power, or wealth. Such as were masters one day are often slaves to their slaves the next. All our salvation must be ascribed to the rich and sovereign mercy of God. It is his election of grace, not our free-will, that can bring us to the inheritance incorruptible and undefiled. And ever certain, however slow, is the deliverance of his chosen, his church, from all their griefs, fears, and toils. But to what fearful misery and disgrace are proud and powerful oppressors reduced at the last ! Neither power nor wealth profit in the day of his wrath. Both God and men take pleasure to humble and debase the proud. But if haughty tyrants sink to ruin—to damnation, with such cruel derision, in what fearful forms shall devils and damned heathens welcome to hell the proud despisers of Jesus Christ ! Great is the misery which the wickedness of parents entails upon their impenitent posterity, and the marks of wrath which sinners fix upon the spots where they lived. Stable, and infallibly executed, are the purposes of God. And it is vain for his enemies to hope for exemption from ruin ; for, if one foe be cut off, he can raise up a worse. But, amidst all the commotions on earth, fixed is his church and safe the poorest of her members, JEHOUAH is her founder, foundation, protector, and refuge.

7 Therefore the abundance they have gotten, and that which they have laid up, shall they carry away to the brook of the willows.

8 For the cry is gone round about the borders of Moab; the howling thereof unto Eglaim, and the howling thereof unto Beer-clim.

9 For the waters of Dimon shall be full of blood: for I will bring more upon Dimon, lions upon him that escapeth of Moab, and upon the remnant of the land.

CHAP. XVI.

Here, (1) For their preservation, the Moabites are advised to return to their wonted subjection to the Jewish king, or in supplication to the God of the Jews, to execute just judgment among themselves, and shew kindness to the now fugitive Hebrews, as the Jewish state would quickly be delivered from the Assyrians, and re-established under Hezekiah, and the church flourish under Christ; 1-5. (2) For their pride, their rage against the Hebrews, and their lying and deceit, the Moabites are condemned to general consternation and desolation within three common years; 6-14.

SEND ye the lamb to the ruler of the land from Sela to the wilderness, unto the mount of the daughter of Zion.

2 For it shall be, that, as a wandering bird cast out of the nest, so the daughters of Moab shall be at the fords of Arnon.

3 Take counsel, execute judgment; make thy shadow as the night in the midst of the noon-day; hide the outcasts; bewray not him that wandereth.

4 Let mine outcasts dwell with thee, Moab; be thou a covert to them from the face of the spoiler: for the extortioner is at an end, the spoiler ceaseth, the oppressors are consumed out of the land.

5 And in mercy shall the throne be established: and he shall sit upon it in truth in the tabernacle of David, judging, and seeking judgment, and hasting righteousness.

6 We have heard of the pride of Moab; he is very proud: even of his haughtiness, and his pride, and his wrath: but his lies shall not be so.

7 Therefore shall Moab howl for Moab, every one shall howl: for the foundations of Kir-hareseth shall ye mourn; surely they are stricken.

8 For the fields of Heshbon languish, and the vine of Sibmah: the lords of the heathen have broken down the principal plants thereof; they are come even unto Jazer; they wandered through the wilderness: her branches are stretched out, they are gone over the sea.

9 Therefore I will bewail with the weeping of Jazer the vine of Sibmah: I will water thee with my tears, O Heshbon, and Elealeh: for the shouting for thy summer fruits and for thy harvest is fallen.

10 And gladness is taken away, and joy out of the plentiful field; and in the vineyards there shall be no singing, neither shall there be shouting: the treaders shall tread out no wine in their presses; I have made their vintage shouting to cease.

11 Wherefore my bowels shall sound like an harp for Moab, and mine inward parts for Kir-hareseth.

12 And it shall come to pass, when it is seen that Moab is weary on the high place, that he shall come to his sanctuary to pray; but he shall not prevail.

13 This is the word that the Lord hath spoken concerning Moab since that time.

14 But now the Lord hath spoken, saying, Within three years, as the years of an hireling, and the glory of Moab shall be contemned, with all that great multitude; and the remnant shall be very small and feeble.

CHAP. XVII.

This, in order of time, comes after chap. ix. Syria and Israel had confederated in their counsels and wars against Judah. Here (1) They are joined in the destruction of their cities, desolation of their country, and murder of most of the inhabitants; 1-5. (2) A remnant of the Israelites being spared, shall be converted from their idols to God; 6-8. (3) The Assyrian army, after terrible bluster and ravage, shall be suddenly destroyed before Jerusalem; 12-14.

THE burden of Damascus. Behold, Damascus is taken away from being a city, and it shall be a ruinous heap.

2 The cities of Aroer are forsaken: they shall be for flocks, which shall lie down, and none shall make them afraid.

3 The fortress also shall cease from Ephraim, and the kingdom from Damascus, and the remnant of Syria: they shall be as the glory of the children of Israel, saith the Lord of hosts.

4 And in that day it shall come to pass, that the glory of Jacob shall be made thin, and the fatness of his flesh shall wax lean.

5 And it shall be as when the harvestman gathereth the corn, and reapeth the ears with his arm; and it shall be as he that gathereth ears in the valley of Rephaim.

6 Yet gleanings shall be left in it, as the shaking of an olive tree, two or three berries in the top of the uppermost bough, four or five in the outmost fruitful branches thereof, saith the Lord God of Israel.

is a ready mean for depriving us of all we have. Never do any protect or cherish the people of God in their distress, but he remarkably rewards them in kind. Nor is it ever wise to stand aloof from them; for, though they fall, they shall quickly arise: though now they wither, anon they shall flourish in glory and honour. When sin abounds, rage against the church flames, and pride towers, destruction and anguish are at the door; and carnal mirth shall quickly be turned into weeping and wailing. And, when God rises up to punish the guilty, no idol can help, avert, or defer, his stroke.

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 3-5. The Syrians shall be in as despicable and ruined a condition as the Israelites; and the glory and multitude of Israel shall be exceedingly diminished, like one dying of a consumption. And, being ripe for ruin, the Assyrians shall make a clean riddance of them, as reapers in harvest do

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—Destruction and anguish, in tremendous triumph, follow sin through impenitent cities and nations. Sudden and unexpected ruin awaits haughty transgressors. And to call on idols or creatures, when God is our enemy, is but to add to our anguish. The wealth, which men eagerly gain, but invites the invader, tempts the robber, and endangers the owner. It increases the owner's care and grief, while it assists his enemy to destroy him. And, if hardened sinners escape one judgment, they are reserved for another. But, if such be the case of a ravaged nation, alas, the terrors, the torments, the howlings, in hell! Who shall abide with devouring fire? Who shall dwell with everlasting burnings?

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—How unwilling is God that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance! Injustice towards God or men

Whether Assyria, situated eastward of the Tigris, which runs along the west of Cush or Chuzestan, or Egypt, through which the Nile runs, or rather Ethiopia in Arabia, or that southward of Egypt in Africa, be the country here threatened, is not absolutely certain to us. of the fields of standing corn. 9—11. The cities of the Israelites shall stand as high heaps in the country, forsaken by their inhabitants, as they were by the Canaanites in the days of Joshua or Barak. Because they have forsaken their God, Saviour, and Protector, nothing shall thrive with them; but, after all their care to strengthen their state, the Assyrians shall seize every thing they have, and carry them into a miserable and lasting captivity. 12—14. But, notwithstanding all their vast multitudes, fury, noisy ravage, and blasphemous boasting, God, by his wrathful rebuke, shall destroy the Assyrian army before Jerusalem, and make the small remains thereof flee homeward with the utmost terror and precipitation.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—Companions in wickedness are soon made partners in punishment. Nor can the strongest fortifications defend from God's almighty wrath. Sin fearfully sickens and consumes persons and societies. And when nations are ripened by it, easily and extensively God strips them of their numbers, glory, power, and wealth. But thrice happy is it when the destruction of many is rendered instrumental for the conversion of a remnant to Christ, and when the loss of outward things makes us look off from them all to God himself. Alas! how professors, by their forgetfulness of God, ruin themselves and their country, and turn their most noted outward comforts into real plagues! But puny and empty nothings before God are the mightiest armies of his adversaries. He triumphs over those in his judgments who triumph over his people

Contains predictions (1) Of the almost utter ruin of the Egyptians by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Persians, Romans, Saracens, Turks, &c.; that their idols should be disgraced and carried off; their soldiers dispirited, or embroiled in civil war; their counsels infatuated and frustrated; their government cruel and tyrannical; their river Nile, for want of overflowing, rendered useless for fructifying their fields or protecting their country; their fisheries and trade ruined; and, in fine, the whole nation overwhelmed with consternation; 1—17. (2) Of the conversion of the distressed Egyptians to the true God, and communion of saints, by the instrumentality of Jews, who retired thither before Christ, and especially of gospel ministers afterwards; 18—25. [See Introduction, chap. iv. sect. iii. iv.]

THE ^aburden of Egypt. Behold, the LORD ^brideth upon a swift cloud, and shall come into Egypt: and ^cthe idols of Egypt shall be removed at his presence, and ^dthe heart of Egypt shall melt in the midst of it.

2 ^eAnd I will ^{*}set the Egyptians against the Egyptians: and they shall fight every one against his brother, and every one against his neighbour; city against city, and kingdom against kingdom.

in their wickedness. And short-lived are the terrors or troubles of his chosen. Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning. Let them therefore treasure up past experiences as a ground of future confidence in the like temptations.

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 4. God's being like a clear heat, or a cloud of dew, may either be understood of his afflicting or of his comforting them. 5, 6. Before they can ripen their designs, I will give up multitudes of them to destruction, and their unburied carcases to ravenous fowls and beasts of the earth.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVIII.—No place can protect sinners from an angry God. No furious rage, which may render them a terror to their neighbours around, can hinder him from debasing them. His providential interpositions ought carefully to be remarked: and, when dangers are most alarming, he is often nearest to defend and save us. No rage of his enemies can ever disturb his repose. Often he seems to have forgotten his people when he is just ready to work their deliverance. And, while he is all-sufficient for the protection, quickening, and comfort, of his people, he can reduce the mightiest nations to ruin, or convert them to Christ, as he pleases.

them that have familiar spirits, and to the wizards.

4 And the Egyptians will I give over into the hand of a cruel lord; and a fierce king shall rule over them, saith the Lord, the LORD of hosts.

5 And the waters shall fail from the sea, and the river shall be wasted and dried up.

6 And they shall turn the rivers far away; and the brooks of defence shall be emptied and dried up: the reeds and flags shall wither.

7 The paper reeds by the brooks, by the mouth of the brooks, and every thing sown by the brooks, shall wither, be driven away, *and be no more.

8 The fishers also shall mourn; and all they that cast angle into the brooks shall lament; and they that spread nets upon the waters shall languish.

9 Moreover, they that work in fine flax, and they that weave net works, shall be confounded.

10 And they shall be broken in the purposes thereof, all that make sluices and ponds for fish.

11 Surely the princes of Zoan are fools; the counsel of the wise counsellors of Pharaoh is become brutish: how say ye unto Pharaoh, I am the son of the wise, the son of ancient kings?

12 Where are they: where are thy wise men? and let them tell thee now, and let them know what the LORD of hosts hath purposed upon Egypt.

13 The princes of Zoan are become fools, the princes of Noph are deceived; they have also seduced Egypt, even they that are the stay of the tribes thereof.

14 The LORD hath mingled a perverse spirit in the midst thereof: and they have caused Egypt to err in every work thereof, as a drunken man staggereth in his vomit.

15 Neither shall there be any work for Egypt, which the head or tail, branch or rush, may do.

16 In that day shall Egypt be like unto women: and it shall be afraid and fear, because of the shaking of the hand of the LORD of hosts, which he shaketh over it.

17 And the land of Judah shall be a terror unto Egypt; every one that maketh mention thereof shall be afraid in himself; because of the counsel of the LORD of hosts, which he hath determined against it.

18 In that day shall five cities in the land of Egypt speak the language of Canaan, and swear to the LORD of hosts: one shall be called the city of destruction.

19 In that day shall there be an altar to the LORD in the midst of the land of Egypt, and a pillar at the border thereof to the LORD.

20 And it shall be for a sign and for a witness unto the LORD of hosts in the land of Egypt: for they shall cry unto the LORD because of the oppressors, and he shall send them a saviour, and a great one, and he shall deliver them.

21 And the LORD shall be known to Egypt; and the Egyptians shall know the LORD in that day, and shall do sacrifice and oblation; yea, they shall vow a vow unto the LORD, and perform it.

22 And the LORD shall smite Egypt; he shall smite and heal it: and they shall return even to the LORD; and he shall be entreated of them, and shall heal them.

23 In that day shall there be a high-way out of Egypt to Assyria; and the Assyrian shall come into Egypt, and the Egyptian into Assyria; and the Egyptians shall serve with the Assyrians.

24 In that day shall Israel be the third with Egypt and with Assyria, even a blessing in the midst of the land:

25 Whom the LORD of hosts shall bless, saying, Blessed be Egypt, my people, and Assyria the work of my hands, and Israel mine inheritance.

Contains a prediction of the distressful captivity of the Egyptians and Ethiopians by the Assyrians. (1) To prefigure the manner of it, Isaiah must go bare-footed, and without his upper garments; 1—4. (2) It would cover with shame and despair the Jews or others, who had relied on them for protection from Assyrians; 5, 6.

IN the year that Tartan came unto Ashdod, (when Sargon the king of Assyria sent him), and fought against Ashdod, and took it;

2 At the same time spake the LORD by Isaiah the son of Amoz, saying, Go, and loose the sackcloth from off thy loins, and put off thy shoe from thy foot. And he did so, walking naked and bare-foot.

3 And the LORD said, Like as my servant Isaiah hath walked naked and bare-foot three years for a sign and wonder upon Egypt and upon Ethiopia;

Sethon the country was divided into twelve petty governments; all which, after a long civil war, Psammitichus subdued. It may also relate to the civil war between Amasis and Pharaoh Hophrah, &c. 4. God shall give them up to the tyranny of Psammitichus, Nebuchadnezzar, the Persian kings, &c. 13—17. Infatuated by their giddy tempers, the princes shall follow pernicious counsels, and lead the subjects into ruin. Neither shall any, high or low, do any thing proper for their relief, but shall be quite dispirited and terrified by the threatenings and judgments of God. The report of the destruction of Israel and ravage of Judah by the Assyrians, and the overthrow of Judah by the Chaldeans, or the prophecies uttered in the land of Judah, shall throw the Egyptians into the utmost consternation and fear of the like miseries. 18—23. Nevertheless their terrible and long-continued distresses shall at last issue in the conversion of a great many of them, even in the city of their idols, to the Christian faith; and they shall make a solemn and open profession thereof, and shall, through Jesus Christ, avowedly worship the true God every where in the country. After God has, by his angel's cutting off Sennacherib's army, and by Alexander's victories, delivered them from their Assyrian and Persian oppression, Jesus, the infinitely mighty Saviour, shall deliver them from Satan, and their lusts, and their heathen abominations. By God's wonderful providences they shall be gradually brought to the saving knowledge of, and openly worship, him, and solemnly and candidly devote themselves to his service. And in the apostolic, and especially the millennial, period, they, and the eastern nations, who had warred with and oppressed them; and the Jews, who had sinfully courted and been sadly oppressed by both; shall harmoniously embrace the gospel, and unite in the service and distinguished favours of God.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIX.—God pours the greatest contempt on men's idols; on every thing which they inordinately loved or trusted. At his will created comforts concur to aggravate our ruin, and created supporters fail or fight against us. Fomenters of faction, cruel tyrants, and infatuated and giddy princes, are the greatest plagues to nations. And, when one sinner or sinful society is cut down, it becomes survivors to consider and tremble. If men persist in their wickedness, God is determined to destroy them. But strange, and often unaccountable to us, are his providential dispensations. He often deals most

Ethiopians captives, young and old, naked and bare-foot, even ^s with their buttocks uncovered, to the ||shame of Egypt.

5 And ^h they shall be afraid and ashamed of Ethiopia their expectation, and of Egypt their glory.

6 And the inhabitant of this *isle shall say in that day, Behold, such is our expectation, whither we flee for help to be delivered from the king of Assyria: and how shall we escape?

CHAP. XXI.

Here (1) For the comfort of the distressed Jews, the alarming destruction of Babylon by the Medes and Persians is again foretold. (2) Distress to the Edomites, after their morning of prosperity, is predicted, unless they repent; 11, 12. (3) Sudden ravage of part of Arabia by the Assyrians; 13—17.

THE ^a burden of ^b the desert of the sea. ^c As whirlwinds in the south pass through; so it cometh from the desert, ^d from a terrible land.

2 ^e A grievous vision is declared unto me; ^f the treacherous dealer dealeth treacherously, and the spoiler spoileth. ^g Go up, O Elam: besiege, O Media: all ^h the sighing thereof have I made to cease.

3 Therefore ⁱ are my loins filled with pain; pangs have taken hold upon me, as the pangs of a woman that travaileth: I was bowed down at the hearing of it; I was dismayed at the seeing of it.

4 ^{*} My heart panted; fearfulness affrighted me: ^k the night of my pleasure hath he [†] turned into fear unto me.

5 ^l Prepare the table, watch in the watch-tower, eat, drink: ^m arise, ye princes, and anoint the shield.

6 For thus hath the LORD said unto me, Go, set a ⁿ watchman; let him declare what he seeth.

7 And he saw ^o a chariot with a couple of horsemen, a chariot of asses, and a chariot of camels; and he hearkened diligently with much heed:

8 And ^p he cried, A lion: my lord, ^q I stand continually upon the watch-tower in the day-time, and I am set in my ward [†] whole nights:

9 And, behold, ^r here cometh a chariot of men, with a couple of horsemen. And he answered and said, ^s Babylon is fallen, is fallen; and ^t all the graven images sharply with those for whom he has the greatest mercies in reserve. Deeply he wounds, in order that he may graciously heal. He bereaves men of all that they have in this world; that he may give them his gospel, his covenant, his ordinances, his Christ. He can form the most glorious, intelligent, devout, and harmoniously bold, societies of believers out of those whom Satan had singularly beset, sin corrupted, and miseries depressed. And it is comely when the servants of the same God, purchased by the same blood of his Son and begotten by the same Spirit, lay aside all their animosities, and with one heart, one mind, and one mouth, glorify God!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—O what need of a self-denying humility in the ministers of Christ! They know not to what apparently debased service he may put them. Into what pitiful conditions men's wickedness plunges them! Alas, the dreadful nature of slavery, and captivity to inward lusts! How created confidences shame, pain, and ruin us at last! But thrice happy are those who in time flee from them all to the never-disappointing Jesus Christ!

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 1, 2. Dreadful calamities shall come upon Babylon on the river Euphrates, which shall reduce it to a desert and fen. Irresistibly they come from Media and Persia, between which and Babylon the wilderness is inhabited by fierce savages. The revolted Medes and Persians shall furiously revenge upon the Chaldeans all their treachery and cruelty to other nations, and shall relieve the enslaved Jews and others from their bondage. 3—5. To their infinite consternation and anguish, their nights of revelling and mirth, and their luxurious feasting, shall be quickly turned into ruinous wars, and into horrid scenes of murder. 6—9. For lo, within view of their watchmen, Darius and Cyrus of her gods he hath broken unto the ground.

10 ^u O my threshing, and the || corn of my floor: ^v that which I have heard of the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, have I declared unto you.

11 ^w The ^{*} burden of Dumah. He calleth to me out of Seir, ^x Watchman, what of the night? watchman, what of the night?

12 The watchman said, ^y The morning cometh, and also the night: ^z if ye will inquire, inquire ye: return, come.

13 [†] The burden upon Arabia. In the forest in Arabia shall ye lodge, O [†] ye travelling companies of Dedanim.

14 The inhabitants of the land of [†] Tema [†] brought water to him that was thirsty; they prevented with their bread him that fled.

15 For [†] they fled [†] from the swords, from the drawn sword, and from the bent bow, and from the grievousness of war.

16 For thus hath the LORD said unto me, Within a year, according to the [†] years of an hireling, and all the glory of [†] Kedar shall fail:

17 And the residue of the number of ^{*} archers, the ⁱ mighty men of the children of Kedar, shall be diminished: ^k for the LORD God of Israel hath spoken it.

CHAP. XXII.

Already we have heard God's reckoning with the spiteful and deceitful enemies of his people; now Judah and Jerusalem must hear their own doom. Here (1) The Jews are terribly alarmed and distressed by Sennacherib's invasion of their country, the invasion of the Chaldeans and Romans, and the threatened siege of Jerusalem; 1—7. (2) Sharply rebuked for neglecting dependence on God, whilst they so earnestly laboured in their carnal methods of self-preservation; 8—11; and for indulging themselves in luxurious revellings when they ought to have humbled themselves under his mighty hand; 12—14. (3) The wrathful driving off proud Shebna from his office and country; 15—19, 25: and the firm instalment of Eliakim in his place, to the great benefit of the country, is denounced; 20—24.

THE ^a burden of ^b the valley of vision. ^c What aileth thee now, that thou art wholly gone up to the house-tops?

2 ^d Thou that art full of stirs, a tumultuous city, a joyous city: ^e thy slain men are not slain with the sword, nor dead in battle.

3 ^f All thy rulers are fled together, they are bound ^{*} by the archers: all [†] that are found in thee are bound together, which have fled from far.

march forward, with their armies of Medes and Persians, well furnished with every thing necessary to destroy Babylon and her multitude of idols. 10. This either represents the afflicted Jews, as having this prophecy delivered to them for their comfort; or the Chaldeans, as threatened with terrible destruction after they had miserably destroyed the Jews and others. 11, 12. To the afflicted Edomites no other information can be given, than that a night of dreadful calamities, by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, &c. shall follow their present respite and prosperity. Nor is there any method to escape it, but by a penitent turning to God and his people.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXI.—Alas! what desolations in populous nations, what alteration in fruitful soils, does sin produce! Quickly they, who treacherously spoiled and murdered others, meet with the same fate. And often the most dreadful ruin comes upon sinners when they are most secure and self-confident. How useful and informing are God's faithful ministers! and what insight they ought to have into the mind and work of God! It is very necessary to discern the signs of the times; and to consider earthly prosperity as but a common inlet to fearful calamities; that we may improve the present hour for returning to God. Kindness to distressed neighbours is ordinarily, by providence, rewarded with similar reliefs. But how empty is that glory which can be diminished or ruined! Let therefore the Lord alone be my everlasting light, wealth, and honour.

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 1—3. The heavy judgments of Jerusalem, which is surrounded with mountains, and favoured with God's revelations and ordinances. Ye inhabitants, what is become of all your former security and confidence when

1. * Or O he.

4 Therefore said I, "Look away from me; "I will weep bitterly, labour not to comfort me, because of the spoiling of the daughter of my people.

5 For ⁱ it is a day of trouble, and of treading down, and of perplexity by the Lord God of hosts in the valley of vision, breaking down the walls, and of crying to the mountains.

6 And ^k Elam bare the quiver with chariots of men and horsemen, and Kir [†]uncovered the shield.

7 And it shall come to pass, ^{that} ¹ thy choicest valley shall be "full of chariots, and the horsemen shall set themselves in array [†]at the gate.

8 ¶ And ^{he} discovered the covering of Judah, and thou didst ^olook in that day to the armour of ^p the house of the forest.

9 ^q Ye have seen also the breaches of the city of David, that they are many: and ye gathered together the waters of the lower pool.

10 And ^{ye} have numbered the houses of Jerusalem, and the houses have ye broken down to fortify the wall.

11 Ye made also a ditch between the two walls for the water of the old pool: but ^{ye} have not looked unto the maker thereof, neither had respect unto him that fashioned it long ago.

12 And in that ^{day} did the Lord God of hosts call to weeping, and to mourning, and to baldness, and to girding with sackcloth:

13 And, behold, "joy and gladness, slaying oxen, and killing sheep, eating flesh, and drinking wine: let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we shall die.

14 And it was ^x revealed in mine ears by the LORD of hosts, ^y Surely this iniquity shall not be purged from you till ye die, saith the Lord God of hosts.

15 ¶ Thussaith the Lord God of hosts, Go, get thee unto this treasurer, even unto ^z Shebna, which is over the house, and say,

16 ¶ What hast thou here? and whom hast thou here, that thou hast ^ahewed thee out a sepulchre here, ^{*as} he that heweth him out a sepulchre on high, and that graveth an habitation for himself in a rock?

17 Behold, ^bthe LORD will carry thee away with [†]a mighty captivity, and will ^csurely cover thee.

18 He will ^dsurely violently turn and toss thee ^{like} a ball into a [‡]large country: there shalt thou die, and there the chariots of thy glory ^{shall} be the shame of thy lord's house.

19 And ^e I will drive thee from thy station, and from thy state shall he pull thee down.

20 ¶ And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will call my servant ^f Eliakim the son of Hilkiah:

21 And I ^g will clothe him with thy robe, and strengthen him with thy girdle, and I will commit thy government into his hand: and he shall be a ^hfather to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and to the house of Judah.

22 And the ⁱ key of the house of David will I lay upon his shoulder: so he shall open, and none shall shut; and he shall shut, and none shall open.

23 And I will fasten him ^{as} ^ka nail in a sure place; and he shall be for ^la glorious throne to his father's house.

24 And they ^mshall hang upon him all the glory of his father's house, the offspring and the issue, all vessels of small quantity, from the vessels of cups even to all the ⁿvessels of flagons.

25 In that day, saith the LORD of hosts, shall ^{the} nail that is fastened in the sure place be removed, and be cut down, and fall; and the burden that ^{was} upon it shall be cut off; for the LORD hath spoken ^{it}.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXII.—How unbounded is the knowledge of God! Not a motion in our course, not a word in our tongue, not a thought in our heart, but he knows it long before hand! How severe are God's corrections of his own professed people! Pious men, and especially faithful ministers, will be distinguished patterns of grief for public calamities, and of eyeing the hand of God therein. In times of peace many things lie quite neglected. And even in danger many mind nothing but external means of relief, atheistically overlooking God himself. Nor can the best of rulers reform the hearts of their subjects. Luxury leads to infidelity. But how dreadful is it when professors riot in revelings and mirth when God is calling them to uncommon humiliation for sin! Alas! such luxurious feasts and frothy songs issue in everlasting damnation! It is very rash for court favourites to pride themselves in their station, or to tyrannize over others. God may suddenly displace and debase them. Preferment is only honourable when it is obtained unsought for, and when it is wholly improved to the glory of God and the benefit of mankind. It is a great mercy for churches and nations to have men prudent, active, and faithful, in the principal places of government, especially after almost every thing has been mismanaged by others. And, above all, infinite is the mercy of JEHOVAH, in setting up Jesus Christ a Saviour to restore what he took not away; and that he has intrusted him with the whole concerns of his own glory and of our eternal happiness!

CHAP. XXIII. Ver. 1-5. Those concerned in the ships of Cilicia, the south parts of Spain, and other sea ports, shall grievously bewail the extensive destruction of Tyre, as the harbours and places of entertainment and commerce there, shall be all destroyed by the Chaldeans or Greeks, and part of the inhabitants ye made light of God's threatenings, that ye are gone to the house-tops to view the approaching army, or to hide yourselves? There is now nothing but doleful outcries and confusion, instead of the wonted shouts of mirth. The men of war die by famine and pestilence, or by their own fears. The rulers have fled; but, being overtaken, they and others are chained for prisoners. 6. The Persians and Medes served in the Assyrian and Chaldean armies. 8-14. When Sennacherib had dismantled the fortified cities of Judah, he provided armour, repaired your walls, or built new ones, pulling down part of the houses, for that purpose, and conveyed all the water into the city; but ye never applied, by prayer or fasting, to God who formed your city, but, instead thereof, spent the little time you had reason to expect in profane revelling and mirth: which impudent contempt of God and his judgments shall never be forgiven you. 15-19. And you, Shebna, what property or relations have you, a foreigner here, that you should build a stately palace or tomb for yourself? Behold, God shall, in an irresistible manner, drive you into captivity, and overwhelm you with shame and contempt. In a distant country thou shalt live and die obscurely; and your stately chariots, and other marks of honour, shall remain, to the reproach of king Ahaz, who preferred so worthless a wretch. 20-24. Eliakim shall be advanced into thine office, and tenderly govern the people. He shall have the supreme government of the king's court and family, and dispose of every thing belonging to them. He shall be established in his office; and, by his prudent carriage, shall procure respect to himself and his relations:—all of whom, from the highest to the lowest, shall be advanced by him, and own their dependance on him. 25. But you, Shebna, who now appear so firmly fixed in honour, shall then be disgraced and ruined, and all your dependants along with you.

thou whom the merchants of Zidon, that pass over the sea, have replenished.

3 And by great waters the seed of Sihor, the harvest of the river, is her revenue; and she is a mart of nations.

4 Be thou ashamed, O Zidon; for the sea hath spoken, even the strength of the sea, saying, "I travail not, nor bring forth children, neither do I nourish up young men, nor bring up virgins.

5 As at the report concerning Egypt, so shall they be sorely pained at the report of Tyre.

6 Pass ye over to Tarshish; howl, ye inhabitants of the isle.

7 Is this your joyous city, whose antiquity is of ancient days? her own feet shall carry her afar off to sojourn.

8 Who hath taken this counsel against Tyre, the crowning city, whose merchants are princes, whose traffickers are the honourable of the earth.

9 The Lord of hosts hath purposed it, to stain the pride of all glory, and to bring into contempt all the honourable of the earth.

10 Pass through thy land as a river, O daughter of Tarshish: there is no more strength.

11 He stretched out his hand over the sea, he shook the kingdoms: the Lord hath given a commandment against the merchant city, to destroy the strong holds thereof.

12 And he said, Thou shalt no more rejoice, O thou oppressed virgin, daughter of Zidon: arise, pass over to Chittim; there also shalt thou have no rest.

13 Behold the land of the Chaldeans; this people was not till the Assyrian founded it for them that dwell in the wilderness: they set up the towers thereof, they raised up the places thereof; and he brought it to ruin.

14 Howl, ye ships of Tarshish; for your strength is laid waste.

15 And it shall come to pass in that day, that Tyre shall be forgotten seventy years, according to the days of one king: after the end of seventy years shall Tyre sing as an harlot.

16 Take an harp, go about the city, thou harlot that hast been forgotten; make sweet melody, sing many songs, that thou mayest be remembered.

17 And it shall come to pass after the end of seventy years, that the Lord will visit Tyre, and she shall turn to her hire, and shall commit fornication with all the kingdoms of the world upon the face of the earth.

18 And her merchandise and her hire shall be holiness to the Lord: it shall not be treasured nor laid up; for her merchandise shall be for them that dwell before the Lord, to eat sufficiently, and for durable clothing.

CHAP. XXIV.

Respects every sinful church and nation, but relates particularly to the Jews, distressed by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Syro-grecians, and especially the Romans. (1) The causes of the judgment stated; 5. (2) The miseries threatened; general desolation, confusion of all ranks, excessive sorrow, debasement of great men, unavoidable and long-continued wretchedness; 1—12, 16—22. (3) The preservation of a remnant, and their and the Gentiles joyful conversion to Christ; 13—16; and at last a glorious deliverance and restoration to happiness; 22, 23. [See Introduction, chap. iv. sect. i—xix.]

BEHOLD, the Lord maketh the earth empty, and maketh it waste, and turneth it upside down, and scattereth abroad the inhabitants thereof.

2 And it shall be, as with the people, so with the priest; as with the servant, so with his master; as with the maid, so with her mistress; as with the buyer, so with the seller; as with the lender, so with the borrower; as with the taker of usury, so with the giver of usury to him.

3 The land shall be utterly emptied, and utterly spoiled: for the Lord hath spoken this word.

4 The earth mourneth and fadeth away, the world languisheth and fadeth away, the haughty people of the earth do languish.

5 The earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof; because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant.

6 Therefore hath the curse devoured the earth, and they that dwell therein are desolate: therefore the inhabitants of the earth are burned, and few men left.

7 The new wine mourneth, the vine languisheth, all the merry-hearted do sigh.

8 The mirth of tabrets ceaseth, the noise of them that rejoice endeth, the joy of the harp ceaseth.

an Assyrian prince, shall, after all their fortification of Babylon their capital, and their conquest of nations, bring them, and then be brought themselves, to ruin. 15—17. And, after the Tyrians have been deprived of their trade for seventy years, answerable to the continuance of the Chaldean monarchy, the Lord shall restore them to their wonted liberty; and they shall, by every engaging art, draw the nations to trade with them as formerly. 18. At last the Tyrians shall, in the apostolic age, be converted to the faith of Christ, and shall employ their power and wealth to promote his glory, and plentifully support his ministers and members.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIII.—The wealthiest on earth are quickly reduced to poverty, and the most noisy traders to silence. And earthly friends can give but little help in our distress, however deeply they be concerned on account of it. When God pursues there is no fleeing from our misery: and the more secure we lived the more grievous will be our fall. There is no fixed, no solid rest, but in Jesus Christ, and in fellowship with him!—What a mercy is it if an afflicting God do not draw out his wrath to all generations,—to eternity! And, if he turn back our captivity, he can bring back our lost prosperity. But earthly wealth often seduces men's souls into spiritual whoredom. Happy therefore are they whose troubles lead them to the knowledge of God, and whose trade regained is devoted to the service of Jesus Christ! Let him be my merchant, my wealth, my strong city; and I, and all I have, be HOLINESS TO THE LORD.

carried captive; of which they shall be informed by the people with whom they trade. There shall be nothing but mournful silence and desolation in Tyre, which had been lately filled with mariners, merchants, and goods; filled with the corn and other commodities of Egypt; and resorted to by all the trading nations of the known world. Zidon, her parent and neighbouring city, shall be quite overwhelmed with confusion, because Tyre, long the mistress of the sea, instead of sending forth her colonies, shall be bereaved of her inhabitants. And the ruin of Tyre shall be no less alarming to the Egyptians, and other neighbouring nations, than the destruction of Egypt by Moses, or by the Ethiopians or Assyrians, &c. 6, 7. Notwithstanding her antiquity, and wonted gaiety and mirth, the inhabitants of Tyre shall, in great anguish and grief, leave their own country, and flee for shelter to Lesser Asia, Spain, or the north of Africa. 8, 9. Nor shall all their glory and wealth be able to prevent their ruin, since God has determined to pull down their pomp and magnificence, as a warning to others. 10. Their fortifications and armies being ruined, the inhabitants of Tyre, long supported by their sea trade, shall be glad, in multitudes, swiftly to flee from their country, never to return. 11, 12. It is God who, to the terror of the nations around, employs the Chaldeans or Greeks to destroy it; and, though never conquered since it was founded by the Zidonians, it shall now be destroyed. Nor shall the inhabitants, carried captive to Chaldea or Greece, or who flee to other places, obtain there any fixed safety or quietness. 13. Nor need the Tyrians think the ruin of their city impossible. The Chaldeans, so anciently formed into a nation by Nimrod, and lately re-established by Baladan

Or found wanting.

9 They shall not drink wine with a song; strong drink shall be bitter to them that drink it.

10 The city of confusion is broken down: every house is shut up, that no man may come in.

11 There is a crying for wine in the streets; all joy is darkened, the mirth of the land is gone.

12 In the city is left desolation, and the gate is smitten with destruction.

13 ¶ When thus it shall be in the midst of the land among the people, there shall be as the shaking of an olive tree, and as the gleaning grapes when the vintage is done.

14 They shall lift up their voice, they shall sing for the majesty of the LORD, they shall cry aloud from the sea.

15 Wherefore glorify ye the LORD in the fires, even the name of the LORD God of Israel in the isles of the sea.

16 ¶ From the uttermost part of the earth have we heard songs, even glory to the righteous. But I said, ¶ My leanness, my leanness, wo unto me! the treacherous dealers have dealt treacherously; yea, the treacherous dealers have dealt very treacherously.

17 Fear, and the pit, and the snare, are upon thee, O inhabitant of the earth.

18 And it shall come to pass, that he who fleeth from the noise of the fear shall fall into the pit; and he that cometh up out of the midst of the pit shall be taken in the snare: for the windows from on high are open, and the foundations of the earth do shake.

19 The earth is utterly broken down, the earth is clean dissolved, the earth is moved exceedingly.

20 The earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard, and shall be removed like a cottage; and the transgression thereof shall be heavy upon it; and it shall fall, and not rise again.

21 And it shall come to pass in that day, that the LORD shall punish the host of the high ones that are on high, and the kings of the earth upon the earth.

22 And they shall be gathered together as prisoners are gathered in the pit, and shall be shut up in the prison, and after many days shall they be visited.

23 Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the LORD of hosts shall reign in mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously.

CHAP. XXV.

Is connected with the last verse of the preceding, and contains thankful praises offered to God in the name of the church.

(1) For the stability of his purposes, the faithfulness of his words, and the wonderful works of his hands, in humbling proud and powerful oppressors, in relieving the poor, and protecting believers; 1—4. (2) For what he would do in destroying the Assyrian army, the Chaldeans, Romans, Antichristians, Turks, and other enemies of his people; 5, 10—12.; and in erecting, and restoring his gospel church, and feasting, comforting, and delighting in, his people, here and hereafter; 6—10.

O LORD, thou art my God; I will exalt thee, I will praise thy name; for thou hast done wonderful things: thy counsels of old are faithfulness and truth.

2 For thou hast made of a city an heap; of a defenced city a ruin: a palace of strangers to be no city; it shall never be built.

3 Therefore shall the strong people glorify thee; the city of the terrible nations shall fear thee.

4 For thou hast been a strength to the poor, a strength to the needy in his distress, a refuge from the storm, a shadow from the heat, when the blast of the terrible ones is as a storm against the wall.

5 Thou shalt bring down the noise of strangers, as the heat in a dry place; even the heat with the shadow of a cloud: the branch of the terrible ones shall be brought low.

6 ¶ And in this mountain shall the LORD of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined.

7 And he will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and the vail that is spread over all nations.

8 He will swallow up death in victory; and the LORD GOD will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth: for the LORD hath spoken it.

9 And it shall be said in that day, and deaths! No rank, no place, no thing, escapes the fearful effects of God's curse: and, if men avoid one misery, they but fall into another. Nor are any more wretched than treacherous apostates from God, and rejecters of his Son. Nevertheless, God in the worst of times reserves a remnant for himself; and often makes the most terrible calamities an introduction to the most remarkable displays of his mercy and grace. In transcendent sovereignty did God bring in the accursed Gentiles to his church, when he rejected the seed of Abraham his friend. And in high sovereignty will Jesus hereafter, to the amazement of all beholders, convert both Jews and Gentiles to himself; and at last, for the eternal manifestations of his glorious perfections, translate his whole kingdom to the celestial mansions above.

CHAP. XXV. Ver. 1—5. All the desolations which thou hast made in the cities of the heathen are the execution of thy purposes and fulfilment of thy word; and thereby shall the stoutest of thine enemies be obliged to acknowledge thy almighty power and strict justice. And, as thou hast formerly protected and comforted thy people when furiously assaulted and distressed by their powerful enemies, thou shalt continue, with infinite ease, to baffle the most furious attempts of thine adversaries, and to reduce them and their posterity to ruin. 6—9. In Judea, but chiefly in the firmly-founded and wide-spread gospel church, shall the Lord exhibit, offer to, and bestow on, sinful men of all nations the spiritual and eternal blessings of his new covenant, feast them on the flesh

CHAP. XXVI.

This song relates to the same things as the preceding; and teaches us (1) To triumph in the salvation, enlargement, divine protection, perfect peace, and mighty power, of the church and her true members; 1—4. (2) Triumphantly to hope that God will, even by weak instruments, bring down all her opposers; 5, 6. (3) To walk with God, and wait for him, in the worst of times; 7—9. (4) To lament their stupidity who regard neither the smiling nor afflictive providences of God; 10, 11. (5) To encourage ourselves in the confidence of God's further kindness, and engage ourselves more firmly in his service; 12—14. (6) To recollect God's former providences towards us, and our deportment under them; 15—18. (7) In the firm assurance of all necessary deliverance, and a glorious resurrection, to hide ourselves under his shadow while the wicked are punished; 19—21.

And, while he dwells with, delights in, and protects his people, he shall every where, and with infinite ease, utterly destroy all their enemies; sin, Satan, death, and hell not excepted.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXV.—Thrice blessed is that people whose God is the Lord; and who have all his persons, perfections, purposes, promises, threatenings, and works, engaged in their behalf! It is wicked, mad, and self-ruinous, for the mightiest powers of hell or earth to injure them, or to attempt their destruction. Why then should not their lips be filled with his praise and honour all the day, who is so much to them, has done, does, can and will do, so much for their salvation in time and eternity? What a ground of grateful praise is it that in Judah's land, on Calvary's mount, Jesus prepared himself, and all the fulness of God in him, to be our abundant provision! He finished transgression, and made an end of sin. He, through death, destroyed death and him that had the power of it, and purchased an infinite fulness of light, life, comfort, and salvation, for men. What ground of praise is it that, in the gospel, he sets before sinners of the Gentiles all the fulness of God in himself, for our present and everlasting nourishment! And why not rejoice in him for that he has pledged his infallible promise that heathenism, popery, and every thing sinful and ruinous, shall give place to his glory filling the whole earth, and to his being in heaven our everlasting ALL and IN ALL!

CHAP. XXVI. Ver. 1, 2. As God fortified and protected Jerusalem from Sen-nacherib's army, and by their destruction gave his people access to celebrate their solemn feasts, so shall he firmly found and fortify his gospel church, that no power of hell or earth shall ever prevail against her: and multitudes of per-sons, justified in Christ, sincere and steady in their profession, and holy in their conversation, shall be added as her members. 5, 6. Not only Nineveh, Babylon, and Rome, but Heathenism, Mahometanism, and Popery, shall be extirpated, and the gospel planted instead thereof, even by weak instruments. 7. a little moment, until the indignation be overpast.

21 For, behold, the LORD 'cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity: "the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain.

CHAP. XXVII.

Relates immediately to the destruction of the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Syro-grecians, Romans, Papists, and Turks, and the deliverance of the Jews from them; but has its principal fulfilment in the Lord's protection and deliverance of his gospel church. Here is (1) Sennacherib, and other proud enemies, divinely punished: 1, 4, 7. (2) God's gracious protection and preservation of his church; 2, 3. (3) His readiness to give peace and prosperity to such as receive Jesus Christ and his grace; 4—6. (4) His promise that he would mitigate his people's afflictions, and cause them to work for their good, however severe and desolating on account of their ignorance; or, while their enemies should be fearfully destroyed; 7—11. (5) That, in due time, he would graciously deliver, gather, and restore, them to their wonted privileges; 12, 13.

IN "that day the LORD, with his sore and great and strong sword, shall punish 'leviathan the *piercing serpent, even leviathan that crooked serpent; and he shall slay 'the dragon that is 'in the sea.

2 ¶ In that day sing ye unto her, 'A vineyard of 'red wine.

3 I the LORD 'do keep it; I will water it every moment: lest any hurt it, I will keep it night and day.

4 "Fury is not in me: who would set 'the briers and thorns against me in battle? I would †go through them, I would burn them together.

5 Or 'let him take hold of my strength, that he may make peace with me; and he shall make peace with me.

6 'He shall cause them that come of Jacob to take root: Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit.

7 ¶ Hath he smitten him, †as he smote those that smote him? or is he slain according to the slaughter of them that are slain by him?

8 "In measure, ¶ when it shooteth forth, thou wilt "debate with it: *he

of-stirring up men to consideration and necessary duties: but, whether thou prosper or punish obstinate sinners, they blind and harden themselves under both mercies and judgments. No ordinances, patterns, nor providences, can move them to duty: but they shall at length feel thy judgments, and be filled with shame, for their spiteful behaviour towards thy people. 12—14. Thou, who hast afflicted us, wilt render us happy and prosperous, even as thou hast already vouchsafed great mercies and deliverances to us. Many heathen powers have tyrannized over us; but, by thy favour and help, we will own thee alone for our God, trust in thee for, and give thee the praise of, all our deliverances. Thy providence hath effectually and irrecoverably destroyed all our oppressors. 15—18. Both the Jewish nation and the Christian church have been exceedingly enlarged and extended; but, notwithstanding our prayers in trouble, and painful attempts, all has been hitherto useless: the wicked still continue numerous and powerful. 19. The Jewish nation, seemingly dead under the Assyrian ravages, the Chaldean captivity, and present dispersion, shall again revive and flourish. The gospel church shall be restored, after her decays, by the influence of a preached gospel: and at the last day every true member, through union to Jesus Christ, shall be raised to everlasting life. 20, 21. But, as terrible troubles must come for the punishment of the wicked, and the manifestation of their wickedness, it is necessary that every saint, by faith, repentance, and prayer, flee to God for protection, lay hold on his promises, and depend on his perfections and providences, till that time of fearful calamities be over.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVI.—Eternally safe are they who have fled to Jesus Christ for refuge, and are encompassed by infallible promises and infinite perfections! No Christian character can be formed without a steadfast and exact adherence to God's truths. Truly righteous, upright, and humble saints, are an inestimable blessing to nations and churches. Steady faith in God's perfections and promises produces more solid peace and composure of mind. If we trust him firmly, we shall find ground to praise him constantly. And, if we by faith put our strong enemies in his hand, he will easily bring them down. If with ardent desires we wait for him in every ordinance and providence, we shall quickly find him to our comfort. And, the earlier and more earnest our supplications are, they will be the more graciously answered. Alas! how hardened stayeth his rough wind in the day of the east wind.

9 "By this therefore shall the iniquity of Jacob be purged; and this is all the fruit to take away his sin; when 'he maketh all the stones of the altar as chalk stones that are beaten in sunder, the groves and †images shall not stand up.

10 'Yet the defenced city shall be desolate, and the habitation forsaken, and left like a wilderness: there 'shall the calf feed, and there shall he lie down, and consume the branches thereof.

11 When 'the bows thereof are withered, they shall be broken off: "the women come, and set them on fire: for it is "a people of no understanding: therefore he that made them will not have mercy on them, and he that formed them will shew them no favour.

12 ¶ And it shall come to pass in that day, that the LORD shall 'beat off from the channel of the river unto the stream of Egypt, and ye shall be 'gathered one by one, O ye children of Israel.

13 And it shall come to pass in that day, that the 'great trumpet shall be blown, and they shall come which were 'ready to perish 'in the land of Assyria, and the outcasts in the land of Egypt, and 'shall worship the LORD in the holy mount at Jerusalem.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Represents (1) The speedy destruction of the Israelites and Jews, for their pride and drunkenness, by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, and others; 1—4. (2) God's providing or sparing pious king Hezekiah for the tribes of Judah and Benjamin; 5, 6. (3) Notwithstanding his reforming influence, his subjects abandon themselves to drunkenness and sensuality, and continue stupid and unteachable amidst manifold instructions. The rulers boast of alliances with Assyrians and Egyptians, and condemn the threatenings of God; 7—15. (4) After an exhibition of Jesus Christ as the only sure foundation and Saviour, they are threatened with the ravage of their country by the Assyrians; 16, 17—22. (5) He warns them, from the example of the husbandman's different forms of plowing, sowing, and threshing, that God will not always be threatening, but will at last proceed to execution, as best may suit his end; 23—29.

WO to 'the crown of pride, to the 'drunkards of Ephraim, whose 'glorious beauty is a fading flower, *who are many hearts, that neither mercies can melt, nor judgments awaken, them! But it is good for us to draw near to God, and renounce all his rivals. Whatever discouraging providences he may exercise us with for a while, confusion and ruin will overwhelm all his and our enemies at last. Let us therefore be sober, and hope to the end for his salvation. He quickens dead souls, revives dead churches, and will at last quicken our dead bodies, and make them like unto his glorious body. Under manifold troubles and injuries let us possess our souls in patience. The judge stands at the door. Our afflictions, however sharp, will soon be over; and our protection in them, under the shadow of the Almighty, is both safe and sweet. But what awful discoveries will God make of men's sins when he rises up to punish them!

CHAP. XXVII. Ver. 1. Tyrannical oppression, strong, furious, crafty, and mischievous, are likened to leviathans, serpents, dragons, &c. especially if they dwell near such animals, as the kings of Assyria, Egypt, and Babylon, did. 2, 3. The reformed Jewish nation and gospel church is likened to a vineyard bringing forth the choicest vines; because, being planted, watered, and protected, by God, they abounded in good works. 4. Though I was angry with them, mine anger is turned away through Christ: but, if hypocrites in the church, or profane persons without it, offer to contend with me, they may expect to be quickly destroyed. 5, 6. Jews and true church members shall, as reconciled through Christ, be firmly settled, and shall increase in numbers and glory. 7—9. Nor will God afflict his own people in the same wrathful and ruinous manner as he does their heathen and antichristian enemies; but will so mitigate their troubles as that they may be able to bear them; and make them means of stirring them up to repentance and reformation, particularly in detesting and destroying their idolatrous altars, groves, and images. 10, 11. Nevertheless, to punish the stupidity and blindness of the present generation, and their imitators in wickedness, the defenced cities shall be laid desolate, and the palaces become pastures for flocks and herds. The whole country shall be exposed to the ravage of the most weak and contemptible enemies. 12, 13. By the providence of God, and proclamation of Cyrus, the Jews shall be brought back to their own land from Chaldea and from Egypt, and shall build the temple, and restore the worship of God, at Jerusalem. In the latter days they shall 27 For the fitches are not threshed with a threshing instrument, neither is a cart wheel turned about upon the cummin; but the fitches are beaten out with a staff, and the cummin with a rod.

28 Bread corn is bruised; because he will not ever be threshing it, nor break it with the wheel of his cart, nor bruise it with his horsemen.

29 This also cometh forth from the LORD of hosts, who is wonderful in counsel and excellent in working.

CHAP. XXIX.

Exhibits (1) God's terrible judgments against Judah, particularly Jerusalem, by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Syro-grecians, Romans, and Turks; 1—4, 14: and his vengeance on these instruments of his wrath; 5—8. (2) The sinful causes of the Jews' distress, viz. their stupidity and disregard of God's warnings; 9—12: their scornful hatred of the prophets; 20, 21: their formality and hypocrisy in their religious services; 13, 14: their rulers' atheistical and profane contempt of God's providence, and setting up their own schemes in competition with it; 15, 16. (3) Precious promises of great reformation, knowledge, comfort, and increase of number, to the remnant reserved in mercy; 17—24: while their enemies should be brought down; 17, 20. These chiefly relate to gospel times.

WO to Ariel, to Ariel, the city where David dwelt! add ye year to year; let them kill sacrifices.

2 Yet will I distress Ariel, and there shall be heaviness and sorrow: and it shall be unto me as Ariel.

3 And I will camp against thee round about, and will lay siege against thee with a mount, and I will raise forts against thee.

4 And thou shalt be brought down, and shalt speak out of the ground, and thy speech shall be low out of the dust, and thy voice shall be, as of one that hath a familiar spirit, out of the ground, and thy speech shall whisper out of the dust.

5 Moreover, the multitude of thy strangers shall be like small dust, and the multitude of the terrible ones shall be as chaff that passeth away: yea, it shall be at an instant suddenly.

6 Thou shalt be visited of the LORD of hosts with thunder, and with earthquake, and great noise, with storm and tempest, and the flame of devouring fire.

7 And the multitude of all the nations that fight against Ariel, even all that fight against her and her munition, and that distress her, shall be as a dream of a night vision.

threatenings, ye shall be enslaved by the Assyrians and others; for he has determined to accomplish, by sword, famine, pestilence, and captivity, the utter destruction of the Israelites, and of a great part of the kingdom of Judah. 27, 28. In the eastern countries wheat was beaten out from the husk by drawing a kind of drag with iron wheels over it.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVIII.—Pride and drunkenness render men a compound of beasts and devils; abominations to God, and plagues and monsters on earth. But whatever sinners are proud of is but fading. And nothing bids fairer to hurl men quickly into the depths of disgrace, poverty, and damnation, than pride and drunkenness. God sovereignly honours and blesses one nation, while he disgraces and destroys another. But thrice happy are those to whom Jesus Christ, and God in him, are their glory and crown. Base corruptions often continue, even amidst the most candid and zealous attempts towards reformation. But it is shameful and ill-boding when priests and prophets are partners in stupidity, and ringleaders in superstition and wickedness. What multitudes obstinately live in ignorance or rejection of God's truth! But, if they refuse to hear his word, he will make them feel his rod: and none shall feel it more certainly than proud scorners and obstinate refusers of Jesus Christ. How rich is the grace of God, in exhibiting Jesus as a Saviour to men when they have eminently ripened themselves for his vengeance! Eternally safe are they who trust in him, when all other refuges fail, when all carnal projects and self-righteousness prove lies in their right hand;—But what sovereignty, wisdom, holiness, and equity, does God manifest in forming and timing every judgment which he inflicts!

8 It shall even be as when an hungry man dreameth, and behold he eateth; but he awaketh, and his soul is empty; or as when a thirsty man dreameth, and behold he drinketh; but he awaketh, and behold he is faint, and his soul hath appetite: so shall the multitude of all the nations be that fight against mount Zion.

9 Stay yourselves, and wonder; cry ye out, and cry: they are drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink.

10 For the LORD hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath closed your eyes: the prophets and your rulers, the seers hath he covered.

11 And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I cannot, for it is sealed:

12 And the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I am not learned.

13 Wherefore the LORD said, Forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honour me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men:

14 Therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvellous work among this people, even a marvellous work and a wonder: for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid.

15 Wo unto them that seek deep to hide their counsel from the LORD, and their works are in the dark; and they say, Who seeth us? and who knoweth us?

16 Surely your turning of things upside down shall be esteemed as the potter's clay: for shall the work say of him that made it, He made me not? or shall the thing framed say of him that framed it, He had no understanding?

17 Is it not yet a very little while, and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest?

18 And in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book, and the eyes

CHAP. XXIX. Ver. 1, 2. Jerusalem is called ARIEL, from the altar of burnt-offering which devoured the offerings sacrificed upon it.—Notwithstanding all their sacrifices, and pretended devotions, both city and temple shall be brought into great straits,—and filled with fire, blood, and carcasses of men, sacrificed to my justice.

3, 4. By the enemies whom I will appoint against you, your present haughtiness and scoffing shall be turned into great debasement, distress, and submission.

5—8. Doth perhaps not only denounce the sudden destruction of their enemies, by the fearful judgments of God, but also the ruin of the Jews' auxiliaries and armies, and their own terrible distress, while their enemies were quite insatiable in devouring and destroying.

9—12. With amazement ponder and bewail your condition, and cry for deliverance; for all ranks are besotted with corrupt principles, unsteadiness, and stupidity; and neither ignorant nor learned either understand or regard the warnings of God. 13—16. Because their religious devotion is merely in outward appearance, while the most abominable wickedness reigns in their heart, and merely an observance of the commands of Hezekiah, or the traditions of the elders, I will punish them with astonishing miseries, baffle all the deep-laid projects of their politicians, and give up their doctors to amazing stupidity. All their subtle devices, for perverting the order which I have fixed, shall be as easily altered as clay by the potter, and as ineffectual to accomplish their designs as clay without a potter.—17—21. Amazing changes shall happen on fields and nations: the long barren Gentile world being converted to Christ, and rendered fruitful in good works, while the Jews shall be rejected by God from his church. The unconcerned and ignorant Gentiles shall be brought to the knowledge of God in Christ; and, amidst affliction and poverty, shall rejoice in himself and his favours; while

CHAP. XXX.

Contains (1) A sharp reproof to the Israelites and Jews, for trusting to the Egyptians, and in vain hiring them for their help against the Assyrians and Chaldeans; 1—7. (2) Terrible threatenings of certain and sudden destruction, answerable to their wickedness to them who slighted God's prophets: and admonitions to equity, repentance, and trusting in the Lord; 8—17. (3) Gracious promises of a quiet residence, hearing of prayer, numerous instructors, reformation from idols, external comforts, and spiritual light, glory, and health, to such as should wait on God; 18—26. (4) A prediction of the terrible and sudden destruction of the Assyrian army before Jerusalem, to the great joy of the Jews, as an introduction to these privileges; 27—33.

from whence come the young and old lion, the viper and fiery flying serpent, they will carry their riches upon the shoulders of young asses, and their treasures upon the bunches of camels, to a people that shall not profit them.

7 For the Egyptians shall help in vain, and to no purpose: therefore have I cried. ^rconcerning this, "Their strength is to sit still.

8 ¶ Now go, ^swrite it before them in a table, and note it in a book, that it may be for ^tthe time to come for ever and ever:

9 That ^uthis is a rebellious people, lying children, children that will not hear the law of the LORD:

10 Who say to the ^vseers, "See not; and to the prophets, Prophecy not unto us right things, ^wspeak unto us smooth things, prophecy deceits:

11 Get you out of the way, turn aside out of the path, cause the Holy One of Israel to cease from before us.

12 Wherefore thus saith the Holy One of Israel, Because ye despise ^xthis word, and trust in ^yoppression and perverseness, and stay thereon;

13 Therefore this iniquity shall be to you ^zas a breach ready to fall, swelling out in a high wall, whose breaking cometh suddenly at an instant.

14 And he shall break it as the breaking of the ^{aa}potter's vessel that is broken in pieces; he shall not spare: so that there shall not be found in the bursting of it a sherd to take fire from the hearth, or to take water withal out of the pit.

15 For thus saith the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel; ^{ab}In returning and rest shall ye be saved; in quietness and in confidence shall be your strength: and ^{ac}ye would not.

16 But ye said, No; for we will flee upon horses; therefore ^{ad}shall ye flee: and, we will ride upon the swift; therefore shall they that pursue you be swift.

17 ^{ae}One thousand shall flee at the rebuke of one; at the rebuke of five shall ye flee: till ye be left as ^{af}a beacon upon the top of a mountain, and as an ensign on an hill.

18 ¶ And ^{ag}therefore will the LORD wait, that he may be gracious unto you; and therefore will he be ^{ah}exalted, that he may have mercy upon you: for the LORD their proud and powerful enemies, who watched for opportunities of doing mischief, and who hated reproof, and persecuted the prophets and ministers of God, and, for a trifling consideration, perverted justice, shall be destroyed. 22—24. And, notwithstanding the distresses or rejection of the Jews, the church shall be gloriously enlarged, to the great comfort of the pious Jews and honour of God; and multitudes of the most wicked and obstinate opposers shall be converted, especially in the millennial period.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIX.—Formal hypocrites may go on long in a round of external duties; but dreadful and debasing is the vengeance of God which awaits them, and which awaits the chastisers even of his provoking people. His judgments make the stoutest hearts to bow or to break. Fearful is their condition who are drunk with the love of pleasures, honour, or wealth, or with corrupt principles and prejudices; or who are so abandoned to spiritual stupidity, that the best means can neither enlighten nor awaken them. Alas, how wicked, how villainous is it to approach God in outward forms of devotion, while we hate him in our heart, and worship him only from regard to the authority of men! Absurd and fruitless is every scheme which is carried on independent of, and in opposition to God. But thrice happy is it to have external calamities balanced with subsequent spiritual blessings; and that the casting away of the Jews has issued in the reconciling of the Gentile world to him;—and, in some future period, how much more shall their fulness!

CHAP. XXX. Ver. 1—5. Dreadful ruin shall overtake those Israelites and Jews, who, without regarding my counsel, increase their wickedness, by taking unwarrantable methods for their own protection and deliverance. 6, 7. They send whole loads of presents upon asses and camels southward into Egypt, which will but hurt instead of helping them, and will soon be as miserable as themselves.—But their only way to secure themselves is to stay at home, and trust in and wait upon God for his help. See ver. 15. 9—17. And, since this rebellious and hypocritical people will disregard my admonitions, and require my prophets to forbear delivering my messages unless they flatter their humours and lusts, they shall quickly find themselves, and their carnal confidences, all shattered to pieces. And, since they refuse to stay at home, and turn to and trust in me, but will trust to their Egyptian allies, the Assyrians shall pursue and scatter them, till only a few stragglers be left. 18—26. Nevertheless, the is a God of judgment: ¹ blessed are all they that wait for him.

19 For the people shall dwell in Zion at Jerusalem: thou shalt weep no more: he will be very gracious unto thee at the voice of thy cry; when he shall hear it he will answer thee.

20 And though the LORD give you the bread of adversity, and the water of affliction, yet shall not thy teachers be removed into a corner any more, but thine eyes shall see thy teachers:

21 And thine ears shall hear a word behind thee, saying, This is the way, walk ye in it, when ye turn to the right hand, and when ye turn to the left.

22 Ye shall defile also the covering of thy graven images of silver, and the ornament of thy molten images of gold: thou shalt cast them away as a menstruous cloth; thou shalt say unto it, Get thee hence.

23 Then shall he give the rain of thy seed, that thou shalt sow the ground withal; and bread of the increase of the earth, and it shall be fat and plenteous: in that day shall thy cattle feed in large pastures.

24 The oxen likewise and the young asses that ear the ground shall eat clean provender, which hath been winnowed with the shovel and with the fan.

25 And there shall be upon every high mountain, and upon every high hill, rivers and streams of waters in the day of the great slaughter, when the towers fall.

26 Moreover, the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the light of the sun shall be sevenfold, as the light of seven days, in the day that the LORD bindeth up the breach of his people, and healeth the stroke of their wound.

27 Behold, the name of the LORD cometh from far, burning with his anger, and the burden thereof is heavy: his lips are full of indignation, and his tongue as a devouring fire:

28 And his breath, as an overflowing stream, shall reach to the midst of the neck, to sift the nations with the sieve of vanity: and there shall be a bridle in the jaws of the people, causing them to err.

29 Ye shall have a song, as in the night when a holy solemnity is kept; and gladness of heart, as when one goeth with a pipe to come into the mountain of the LORD, to the mighty One of Israel.

30 And the LORD shall cause his glorious voice to be heard, and shall shew the lighting down of his arm, with the indignation of his anger, and with the flame of a devouring fire, with scattering, and tempest and hailstones.

31 For through the voice of the LORD shall the Assyrian be beaten down, who smote with a rod.

32 And in every place where the grounded staff shall pass, which the LORD shall lay upon him, it shall be with tabrets and harps: and in battles of shaking will he fight with it.

33 For Tophet is ordained of old; yea, for the king it is prepared; he hath made it deep and large: the pile thereof is fire and much wood; the breath of the LORD, like a stream of brimstone, doth kindle it.

CHAP. XXXI.

Is a kind of abridgment of the preceding; and contains (1) A second wo to those Jews, who, to their hurt, trusted to the Egyptians for help, and neglected dependance on the Lord; 1—3. (2) Assurance that God would graciously protect Jerusalem; 4, 5. (3) A call to, or promise of, their repentance and reformation; 6, 7. (4) A prediction of the destruction of the Assyrian army, and the terror of their king and surviving princes; 8, 9.

WO to them that go down to Egypt for help; and stay on horses, and trust in chariots, because they are many; and in horsemen, because they are very strong; but they look not unto the Holy One of Israel, neither seek the LORD!

2 Yet he also is wise, and will bring evil, and will not call back his words: but will arise against the house of the evil doers, and against the help of them that work iniquity.

3 Now the Egyptians are men, and not God; and their horses flesh, and not spirit. When the LORD shall stretch out his hand, both he that helpeth shall fall, and he that is holpen shall fall down, and they all shall fail together.

4 For thus hath the LORD spoken unto wickedness of professors justifies God's severest judgments against them!—It is infinitely criminal and hazardous for men to tempt God's ministers to unfaithfulness in delivering his messages. God frequently gives them up to delusion who incline to it; and punishes such as scoff at his admonitions with fearful, certain, and unavoidable ruin. There is no way of escaping his judgments but by a believing and penitent turning to himself. And if, notwithstanding thousands of provocations and judgments, he still wait to be gracious, earnestly ought we to wait and cry for his favours. Persevering faith and prayer always issue in substantial and lasting comforts. Great is the mercy to have an open access to Jesus Christ's ministers and ordinances, and to be directed in every step by God's teaching Spirit and a tender conscience. Detestable to exercised saints are their formerly beloved lusts, and precious are new covenant blessings. The relief of God's people, and the ruin of their enemies, are marvellously connected. In his anger he blasts, overflows, sifts, bridges, beats, and burns up his most proud and powerful opposers with the greatest ease! Having therefore received a kingdom that cannot be moved, let me have grace, wherewith I may serve him acceptably with reverence and godly fear; for our God is a consuming fire.

CHAP. XXXI. Ver. 2, 3. As wise as ye think yourselves, God will counter-mine all your subtle contrivances, and bring effectual ruin upon both you and your Egyptian helpers. 4, 5. Undismayed by all the noise, boasting, and blasphemy, of the Assyrians, God shall, with almighty force, furiously encounter

Lord will wait for a fit season to deliver you, and will, in infinite wisdom, glorify his own perfections in working graciously for you. Notwithstanding Sennacherib's attempts, and the attempts of all your other enemies, ye shall safely dwell in Jerusalem; ye shall return thither from your Chaldean captivity; and in the latter days shall, to your inexpressible comfort and happiness, be converted to Christ and his church. And, whatever adversities you may quickly suffer, you shall then have plenty of public ordinances and teachers, and be remarkably directed in all your ways. Ye shall, with the utmost detestation, relinquish your idolatries, and destroy every monument thereof. While your fields and hills produce plentiful crops of corn, grass, vines, &c. your nation shall bring forth multitudes of converts, and fruits of righteousness, to the glory of God. And, while your proud enemies, Assyrians, Chaldeans, Syro-grecians, Antichristians, and Turks, are brought down, great and amazing shall be your refreshment, knowledge, comfort, and vigour. 27—33. For behold, to your sudden and inexpressible joy, the Lord, in the execution of his purposes and predictions, will, with great ease, but in a most terrible and sudden manner, destroy the Assyrian army in the valley of Hinnom, before Jerusalem, as a prelude of similar ruin to the rest of your adversaries.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXX.—Men are too fond of trusting to human help in their distress, and too careless of that which is divine. But what is got without the Lord's leave cannot be of any real service, but hurt. The notorious REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXI.—Many wickedly go far for human help and to no purpose, when they might have help from God at hand, to infinite advantage. But, the more we know of men, we shall trust them the less: and, the more we know of God, we shall trust him the more. It is an atheistical disbelief of his all-sufficiency that ever makes us depart from him to depend on a creature; and, when we do so, we may expect to have it ruined along with ourselves. But ever safe are those whom God defends with infinite compassion and almighty power. His promises are an infallible ground of faith; his goodness ought to lead the greatest rebels against him to a kindly repentance; and every remarkable deliverance should be attended with remarkable reformation. But great is the ruin and the terror which await his implacable foes!

govern in equity and wisdom; shall protect the oppressed, promote the instruction of the subjects in the laws of God, and treat every one according to his real character, bad or good.—Jesus shall erect and govern his church in the most righteous manner, and his apostles and ministers shall wisely dispense his ordinances. He shall protect, refresh, quicken, and comfort, his people in all their tribulations. Such as have spiritual knowledge shall have it greatly increased; and even the inconsiderate shall be made to know, and the weak to declare, the things of God with great distinctness. Worthless, hypocritical, and mischievous, oppressors shall be detected, and debarred from offices or honours, while they, who are liberal and upright, shall be visibly blessed, and prosperous. 9—14. Terrible shall be the distress and anguish of those cities and wanton women, who, by their pride and vanity, provoked God to wrath; when, through the ravage of the enemy, neither milk, nor corn, nor wine, shall be found, but the whole land be turned into, and for many years or ages continued, a desolate wilderness. 15—20. But when God shall pour forth his Spirit, and mighty changes shall ensue, and great revivals in souls, in churches, and nations, shall be wrought. The gospel shall be received, and righteous judgment executed, every where. Great shall be the peace and real prosperity of true believers, even while the unbelieving Jews, or others, shall be fearfully destroyed. And great shall be the success of ministers in the conversion of multitudes to Christ.

CHAP. XXXIII.

Relates immediately to the deliverance from Sennacherib's army, not excluding the deliverance from Babylon, or from the Syro-grecians, Romans, and Antichristians, and the gospel deliverance by Christ. Here is foretold (1) The great distress into which Judah and Jerusalem should be brought; 7—9: and the terror of their wicked ones; 13, 14. (2) The earnest supplication of the godly; 2: and their holy security amidst their distress; 5, 6, 15, 16. (3) The sudden and fearful destruction of the Assyrians, and other enemies, to the great honour of God; 1, 3, 5, 10—12, 18, 19, 23. (4) The enriching of the Jews with the spoil of the Assyrian camp; 4, 23. (5) The happy re-establishment of the Jewish church and state, and of the gospel church, after the deliverance; 15—24.

WO to ^athee that spoilest, and thou wast not spoiled; and dealest treacherously, and they dealt not treacherously with thee! ^bwhen thou shalt cease to spoil, thou shalt be spoiled; and, when thou shalt make an end to deal treacherously, they shall deal treacherously with thee.

2 O LORD, ^cbe gracious unto us; we have waited for thee: ^dbe thou their arm every morning, our salvation also in the time of trouble.

3 ^eAt the noise of the tumult the people fled; at the lifting up of thyself the nations were scattered.

4 And ^fyour spoil shall be gathered like the gathering of the caterpillar: as the running to and fro of locusts shall he run upon them.

5 ^gThe LORD is exalted; for he dwelleth on high: he hath ^hfilled Zion with judgment and righteousness.

6 And ⁱwisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of thy times, and strength of ^ksalvation: ^kthe fear of the LORD is his treasure.

7 Behold, their ^lvaliant ones shall cry without: the ambassadors of peace shall weep bitterly.

8 ^mThe highways lie waste, the way-faring man ceaseth; he hath broken the covenant, he hath despised the cities, he regardeth no man.

9 ⁿThe earth mourneth and languisheth: Lebanon is ashamed and ^ohewn down: Sharon is like a wilderness; and Bashan and Carmel shake off ^ptheir fruits.

10 Now ^qwill I rise, saith the LORD; now will I be exalted; now will I lift up myself.

11 Ye ^rshall conceive chaff, ye shall bring forth stubble: your breath ^sas fire shall devour you.

12 And the people shall be as the burnings of lime: as thorns cut up shall they be burned in the fire.

13 ^tHear ^uye that are far off, what I have done; and, ye that are near, acknowledge my might.

14 ^vThe sinners in Zion are afraid; fearfulness hath surprised the hypocrites. ^wWho among us shall dwell with the devouring fire? who among us shall dwell with everlasting burnings?

15 He that ^xwalketh ^yrighteously, and speaketh ^zuprightly; he that despiseth the gain of ^aoppressions, that shaketh his hands from holding of bribes, that stoppeth his ears from hearing of ^bblood, and shutteth his eyes from seeing evil;

16 ^cHe shall dwell on ^dhigh: his place of defence ^eshall be the munitions of rocks; bread shall be given him; his waters ^fshall be sure.

17 Thine eyes shall see ^gthe king in his beauty: they shall behold ^hthe land that is very far off.

18 Thine heart shall meditate terror. ⁱWhere is the scribe? where is the ^jreceiver? where is he that counteth the towers?

19 ^kThou shalt not see a fierce people, a people ^lof deeper speech than thou canst perceive; of a ^mstammering tongue, that ⁿthou canst not understand.

20 ^oLook upon Zion, the city of our solemnities: thine eyes shall see Jerusalem a quiet habitation, a tabernacle that shall not be taken down; not one of the stakes thereof shall ever be removed, neither shall any of the cords thereof be broken.

21 But ^pthere the glorious LORD will be unto us a place ^qof broad rivers and streams; wherein shall go no galley with oars, neither shall gallant ship pass thereby.

22 For the LORD is our ^rjudge, the LORD is ^sour ^tlawgiver, the LORD is ^uour king; he will save us.

23 ^vThy tacklings are loosed; they could not well strengthen their mast, they could not spread the sail: then ^wis the prey of a great spoil divided; the lame take the prey.

24 ^xAnd the inhabitant shall not say, on themselves. The destruction of their camp, by the angel, shall make the remainder to flee home with great precipitation; and the inhabitants of Jerusalem shall, in multitudes, gather up the spoil. 5, 6. While God shall thus exalt himself in the destruction of his enemies, and deliverance of his people, he will bless Jerusalem with true religion and righteousness: and, by the abounding of real piety, and by the wise and prudent administration of government, shall the nation be preserved, and even rendered wealthy, during Hezekiah's reign. 7—9. The Jewish soldiers shall be quite dispirited and vexed: Their ambassadors, sent to supplicate terms of peace, shall return weeping on account of their unsuccessfulness. None shall dare to travel the country. Sennacherib shall disregard his treaty with the Jews; he shall scorn their strength, and reject their entreaties for peace. The country, even the most fertile and populous places, shall be rendered utterly desolate. 10—12. But, when all hopes of deliverance to the Jews seem gone, I will exert my almighty power. I will render all the Assyrian's plots fruitless; and their rage against my people shall be revenged in their own sudden and fearful destruction. 13, 14. All around them shall be alarmed; and even the hypocritical Jews terrified, lest like judgments, or damnation in hell, should seize on themselves. 15—24. The righteous, who labour to avoid every evil, however gainful or pleasant, shall be safely preserved and abundantly supplied. They shall behold Hezekiah in health, prosperity, and REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXII.—Greatly beneficial are virtuous magistrates; but much more a gracious, a divine, Saviour. Safely may the most guilty rest under his all-covering propitiation; and the most weak and oppressed under his powerful protection. Hopeful is the case when those who are ignorant are willing to be taught, and when every thing is called by its own proper name. When persons are held in esteem, according to their real deserts; when they, who are active in plotting or practising wickedness, are disgraced; and they, who are active in contriving or performing what is good, are high in repute. But rarely any remarkable reformation happens, but some fearful judgment on the despisers and opposers thereof attends it. And how alarming at last, to the sons and daughters of unconcern, gaiety, and mirth, are the terrible, the desolating, and the damning, judgments of God! O what remarkable reformation God's Spirit, by the preaching of the gospel, can make among nations, and in ages the most corrupted! Great are the advantages, the solid satisfaction, and substantial comforts, which are to be had in real fellowship with, and likeness to, God! And great is the honour of faithfully preaching the gospel and abounding in works of charity.

Contains a denunciation of God's judgments against the enemies of his people, Idumeans, Assyrians, Chaldeans, Syro-grecians, Romans, Papists, Turks, and the wicked, at the last day. After a demand of universal attention; 1. We have (1) A dreadful scene of general bloodshed and confusion; 2—7. (2) Injuries done to God's church represented as the cause thereof; 8. (3) Fearful and lasting desolation occasioned thereby; 9—15. (4) All these curses ratified by the word and Spirit of God; 16, 17.

COME near, ye nations, to hear; and hearken, ye people: let the earth hear, and *all that is therein; the world, and all things that come forth of it.

2 ^bFor the indignation of the LORD is upon all nations, and his fury upon all their armies: he hath utterly destroyed them, he hath delivered them to the slaughter.

3 ^cTheir slain also shall be cast out, and their stink shall come up out of their carcases, and ^dthe mountains shall be melted with their blood.

4 And ^eall the host of heaven shall be dissolved, and the heavens shall be rolled together as a scroll; and all their host shall fall down as the leaf falleth off from the vine, and as a falling fig from the fig tree.

5 For ^fmy sword shall be bathed in heaven: behold, it shall come down upon Idumea, and upon the people of my curse, to judgment

6 ^hThe sword of the LORD is filled with blood, it is made fat with fatness, and with the blood of lambs and goats, with the fat of the kidneys of rams: for the LORD hath a sacrifice in Bozrah, and a great slaughter in the land of Idumea.

7 And ⁱthe unicorns shall come down with them, and the bullocks with the bulls; and their land shall be ^jsoaked with blood, and their dust made fat with fatness.

8 For it is ^kthe day of the LORD's vengeance, and the year of recompences for the controversy of Zion.

9 And ^lthe streams thereof shall be turned into pitch, and the dust thereof into brimstone, and the land thereof shall become burning pitch.

10 ^mIt shall not be quenched night nor day; the smoke thereof shall go up for ever: from generation to generation it shall lie waste; none shall pass through it for ever and ever.

11 ⁿBut the ^ocormorant and the bittern shall possess it; the owl also and the raven shall dwell in it: and he ^pshall stretch out upon it the line of confusion, and the stones of emptiness.

12 ^rThey shall call the nobles thereof to the kingdom, but none shall be there, and all her princes shall be nothing.

13 ^sAnd thorns shall come up in her palaces, nettles and brambles in the fortresses thereof: and it shall be an habitation of dragons, and a court for ^towls.

14 [†]The wild beasts of the desert shall also meet with [‡]the wild beasts of the island, and the satyr shall cry to his fellow; the ^{*}screech-owl also shall rest there, and find for herself a place of rest.

15 There shall the great owl make her nest, and lay, and hatch, and gather under her shadow: there shall the vultures also be gathered, every one with her mate.

16 ¶ Seek ye out of [¶]the book of the LORD, and read: no one of these shall fail, none shall want her mate: for [¶]my mouth it hath commanded, and his spirit it hath gathered them.

17 [¶]And he hath cast the lot for them, and his hand hath divided it unto them by line: [¶]they shall possess it for ever, from generation to generation shall they dwell therein.

CHAP. XXXV.

Predicts the flourishing of the fields, the prosperity of the state, the courage, health, piety, and undisturbed attendance, of the Jews upon their solemn feast, after their deliverance from the Assyrians and Chaldeans, and from their present dispersion; but it chiefly respects the glory and happiness of the gospel church.

(1) Multitudes of the long-deserted Gentile world shall be brought into it; 1, 2, 7. (2) The weak and timorous friends thereof shall be divinely encouraged; 3, 4. (3) Miracles of mercy shall be wrought on the bodies and souls of men; 5, 6. (4) Jesus Christ, the way, the truth—and the method of sanctification through him—shall be clearly exhibited and improved; 8, 9. (5) After enjoying the noted protection of God from all their ruinous adversaries, all her true members shall at last be fixed in everlasting happiness; 9, 10.

THE ^awilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert ^bshall rejoice, and ^cblossom as the rose.

2 It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing: ^dthe glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, fessors to flee from the wrath to come to the Almighty, the all-saving, Jesus Christ! Great piety and comfort, safety and peace, order, health, and forgiveness, attend his gracious deliverances! And thrice happy they who have him for their ALL IN ALL!

CHAP. XXXIV. Ver. 3—6. The mountains shall run down with large streams of the blood of slain persons. Dreadful shall be the confusion, desolation, and consternation, every where; for my purposed judgments shall be executed upon mine enemies, whom I have devoted to destruction, and persons of all ranks shall fall a sacrifice to my avenging justice. 11, 12. God shall mark them out for destruction as with a line and plummet; and none shall be able to govern or help them. 16, 17. In the exact fulfilment of this prophecy, shall the Spirit, power, and providence, of God, collect together, and preserve a succession of, these doleful creatures, in these perpetually desolate habitations of wickedness.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIV.—It is proper that sinners should listen to God's threatenings, as he can quickly make them feel what they are averse to hear. Terrible, but righteous, are the judgments which he inflicts, especially upon them who injure his people. And he can easily unite the curses of Sodom and Babylon upon such as refuse to take warning by their fate. It is madness to fix our hearts on earthly things, when their end may quickly be so miserable. And let us here seriously consider how dreadful sin must be, the cause of all judgments,—and hell, the perfection of them.

CHAP. XXXV. Ver. 1—4. These fearful judgments shall issue in the great comfort of the church. Multitudes of barren, destitute, bewildered, and glory, and freely travel through the whole of Canaan. Nay, they shall, by faith, behold Jesus in his glory and the heavenly felicities. They shall, with solemn awe, wonder how suddenly the Assyrian army is destroyed or fled, and how safe Jerusalem is: and how marvellously the Lord has protected his people, answerably to his relations to them; and how, while the Assyrian army is irrecoverably shattered to pieces, and their spoil gathered by the feeble Jews, Hezekiah, and his subjects, are delivered from their sickness and distress, and have the tokens of the Lord's favour restored to them.—N. B. It is easy to apply the above explication to the deliverance from the Chaldeans, Syro-grecians, Romans, or Antichristians.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIII.—Wicked men never hesitate at falsehood, fraud, or violence, to accomplish their own ends. But, the less men provoke them to do evil, the more they provoke God in doing it. And, whenever they have filled up the measure of their iniquities, God will awake to punish them. There is no fear of a church or nation while a spirit of prayer continues in it. They who wait on God shall never be forsaken by him. Nay, he often, in his kindness, exceeds their expectations, and always exalts himself, by the judgments which he executes. And, where he reigns in the heart, real safety and wealth attend him! True knowledge of his grace is the great stability of the soul; and the fear of God is the Christian's best treasure. They who condemn God are often imperious and abusive to men. But, the more hardened and prosperous they are, the nearer is their terrible destruction. The most secure sinners shall be alarmed at last, and made to see God's hand in his judgments. Eternal damnation shall at last appear dreadful to the most scornful! But great is the mercy if God's judgments in Zion should awaken her hypocritical pro-

CHAP. XXXVI.

Most of what we have in this and the three subsequent chapters we have already had in 2 Kings xviii—xx. 2 Chron. xxxii. Here it is repeated as a verification of Isaiah's predictions. (1) Sennacherib, king of Assyria, invades and ravages the kingdom of Judah; 1. (2) At his demand a conference is held between his and Hezekiah's managers, before the walls of Jerusalem; 2, 3. (3) Rabshakeh the Assyrian general, by his railing and blasphemy, attempts to frighten Hezekiah into a surrender of Jerusalem; 4—10: and tempts the Jews on the wall to desert Hezekiah and force him to a surrender; 11—20. (4) Hezekiah's agents answer nothing; but, with grief, report what they had heard to their master; 21, 22.

NOW ^ait came to pass, in the fourteenth year of king Hezekiah, that Sennacherib king of Assyria ^bcame up against all the defenced cities of Judah, and took them.

2 ¶ And ^cthe king of Assyria sent Rabshakeh from ^dLachish to Jerusalem unto king Hezekiah with a great army, and he stood by the ^econduit of the upper pool in the highway of the fuller's field.

3 Then came forth unto him ^fEliakim Hilkiah's son, which was over the house, and ^gShebna the ^hscribe, and Joah Asaph's son the recorder.

4 And Rabshakeh said unto them, Say ye now to Hezekiah, ⁱThus saith the great king, the king of Assyria, What ^kconfidence is this wherein thou trustest?

5 I say, sayest thou, (but they are but ^{*}vain words) ^lI have counsel and strength for war: now on whom dost thou trust, that thou rebellest ^magainst me?

6 Lo, thou trustest in the ⁿstaff of this broken reed, on Egypt; whereon, if a man lean, it will go into his hand, and pierce it: so is Pharaoh king of Egypt to all that trust in him.

7 But if thou say to me, ^oWe trust in the LORD our God: is it not he, whose high places and whose altars Hezekiah ^phath taken away, and said to Judah and to Jerusalem, Ye shall worship before this altar?

8 Now therefore give ^qpledges, I pray thee, to my master the king of Assyria, and ^rI will give thee two thousand horses if thou be able on thy part to set riders upon them.

9 How then wilt thou turn away the face of ^sone captain of the least of my master's servants, and ^tput thy trust on Egypt for chariots and for horsemen?

10 And am I now come up without the LORD against this land to destroy it? ^uthe LORD said unto me, Go up against this land and destroy it.

11 Then said Eliakim and Shebna and Joah unto Rabshakeh, ^vSpeak, I pray thee, unto thy servants in the ^wSyrian language; for we understand it: and speak not to us in the ^xJews' language, in the ears of the people that are on the wall.

12 But Rabshakeh said, Hath my master sent me to thy master and to thee to speak these words? hath he not sent me to the men that sit upon the wall, that ^ythey may eat their own dung and drink their own ^z†piss with you?

13 ¶ Then Rabshakeh stood and ^acried with a loud voice in the Jews' language, and said, Hear ye the words of the ^bgreat king, the king of Assyria.

14 Thus saith the king, ^cLet not Hezekiah deceive you: ^dfor he shall not be able to deliver you.

attending Christ's ordinances, they shall at last arrive at the complete and everlasting happiness of the heavenly state.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXV.—God can quickly make the most amazing changes on countries and nations, either in mercy or in judgment. Glorious things are said of our New Testament church, especially in her apostolical and millennial periods. And her extent, comfort, light, life, holiness, and safety, inconceivably exceeds that of the Old. Believing views of Jesus Christ's person and fulness effectually quicken, fructify, and comfort the heart. And an assured faith of his approach is sufficient to silence every fear and doubt. How sovereign are God's bestowals of his word and Spirit! and how effectual for the illumination, quickening, encouragement, strengthening, and sanctification, of men! The grace of the gospel teaches men to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts; and to live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world. Unspeakable is the safety, and transcendent the happiness, of ransomed men.

Jesus Christ, as the divinely appointed mean of salvation and holiness, and of all our access to God, shall be exhibited in the gospel; in whom as their way, not the unclean and obstinate sinners, but justified and regenerated men, however weak, shall walk, without erring from it.
